LUCKNOW, India, Jan. 22.—One man was killed and three wounded when police fired upon a crowd at Jagnainthpur, according to an official communique issued here today. The communique said Jagnainthpur is under armed guard and quiet.

The date of the earliest Palaeolithic man cannot be expressed in years. Some authorities represent him as having lived 50,000 years ago, while others estimate the date as a million and perhaps several million years ago.

Mrs. W. N. Fenton, Divisional Commissioner of the Girl Guides of Canada, is attending the Provincial meeting at Headquarters, Toronto, today.

Mr. Fred J. Macoun, of New York City, is now in town for a visit, time visiting his sisters, Mrs. E. W. Dooley, John Street and Mrs. Alfred Vandervaart, Trent Road. Mr. Macoun, who is now living retired, was a prominent Belleville boy years ago. He entered the service of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and for years filled numerous important cities with that institution. Mr. Macoun is renewing acquaintances with some of the older residents, who are very pleased to welcome him to his home town.

Matrimonial Record

Winnipeg, Man. (CP)—A new record, matrimonially speaking, is claimed in Manitoba today that will take some beating. Nothing quite so speedy has ever before occurred in this province.

On April 14 last year Rose Dorfman and Max J. Chlavin were united in the silken bonds by Judge Mr. O. Stubbe in a civic ceremony at the law courts building. One month later, Max, apparently tired of his lady love, sought a separation.

Petition for divorce was started immediately and today the knot partially untied. The final decree will go into effect six months from today when each will be free to set sail once more on the sea of matrimony, if they so desire.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

Solving a Situation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: About two months ago the young man with whom I have been going and I had a misunderstanding and I understand our friendship is discontinued. I had loaned him a book to read previous to that time, and as yet he has not returned it. I am anxious to have the book, for my mother treasures it as a gift, which he thoroughly understands. Would you advise me to write him a note asking for the book? I am dubious about the matter because I don't want to give him the impression that I desire to renew our acquaintance. If so, will you kindly give me a sample of the type of letter I should write?

Or do you think it is better plan to have my brother ask him for it? I feel friendly toward him and would stop at his home for it, but I am afraid of leaving the impression that I am running after him.

How can I solve this awkward situation?

PUZZLED.

You can very easily solve this situation by writing a dignified note—not a too-stiff note — asking this young man to return the book. Some thing like this, perhaps:

Dear Bob: I am sure that you will understand if I write to ask you if you will be so kind as to return the book that I lent you some time ago. You won't mind, will you? You remember that I lent it to you. I did mention that mother treasures it as a very precious possession since a close friend of hers gave it to her. She is very anxious to have it, and as I am sure that you have enjoyed your mind, I volunteered to ask you for it. We will both be very grateful and appreciative if you will return the book by mail or messenger as you wish, as soon as you can conveniently.

Very sincerely yours,

An Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: I read your articles every night, and now I have a question to ask.

If Mrs. Jones tells Mrs. Smith to tell me that she would like to come to supper on Monday night, shall I accept the invitation or wait until Mrs. Jones telephones me herself?

E.

If I were you, I should wait until Mrs. Jones herself invites you to come to dinner. Such an invitation, if told too far, I think—don't you?

MAHARANEE IS ON VISIT HOME

Former Nancy Miller, Wife of Indian Potentate, Returns

New York — A passenger whose name was not on the list of the Lloyd Sabaudo liner Conte Biancamano when that vessel arrived from Mediterranean ports, was her Highness the Maharanee Sharmishtha Rajkumar, who was Nancy Miller of Seattle before her marriage four years ago to the former Maharajah of Indore. This is the first time she has visited her native land since she became the wife of the wealthy Indian potentate.

She was dressed in mourning for her grandmother, who died a few months ago, and is leaving at once for Seattle to spend two weeks with her grandfather, Knud Schaeffer, and will then continue her voyage to India.

The Indian Princess was accompanied by a French woman companion, Mme. Christine Dulcup; R. Khasha, a Hindu musician, or secretary, and two native servants, and had with her a collie dog, the gift of her grandfather, she said.

A tiny red circle, the Brahmin caste mark, which was tattooed upon on her forehead when she adopted the Hindu faith just before her wedding, could be plainly seen. She wore a tight-fitting black hat, a black silk gown and a black cloth coat trimmed with black fur.

The Maharanee said that her two daughters, Sharada, 3 years old, and Sita, had been left in Cairo, Egypt, and she smiled when asked by reporters if there had been a disagreement between the Prince and herself because she had not had a son.

"We are very happy," she said "with what we have. My husband has a son by a former marriage who is now the ruling Prince of Indore and sits on the throne. I have very little about Indian or Indian affairs as I have spent very little time there since my marriage. Just two short visits—that's all. Most of our time since the wedding four years ago, has been passed at St. Germain on the Seine, near Paris, which we now consider our home."

The Maharanee said she wished to avoid publicity and kept to her suite on the Conte Biancamano during the voyage from Naples except to go to the dining room where she sat at a small table on the side with her woman companion and the Moonabee Khasha.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Cold-Weather Beauty Ills

Beauty by Helen Jamieson
(Mme. Qui Vive)

There's a great deal of sobbing going on about chapped hands and red noses. They're grievances all right, but they aren't the only beauty ills of the cold-winter season. There are a lot of reasons why the blooming beauty isn't quite so bloomy in cold weather as she is in the sweet silly summer season.

She doesn't have enough sunshine and outdoor life. Those fairhaired babies who won't stick their noses out of doors if rain or snow is falling will be a fagged out looking crew when the lilacs bloom. You know that end-of-the-season look. Complexion grey and pasty, or blanching white like a sheet of paper. Hackamano from the Conte Biancamano from Naples exclaimed in admiration over the fact that has been hanging in the cabin.

If blood streams are to purr the lungs must have deep draughts of fresh air to throw out stale air that collects in the lower lobes. Shallow breathing can't grow complexions that excite envy. Nor do those lost in sleep as you can't keep the thought of exercise; a neuter of cuisebiances sends them into state of coma; they belong to the popless contingent that is a dampening influence on the merry crowd.

Two hours in the open air each day should be the rule, the whole year round. The spirit as well as the body needs outdoor diversions.

Proper clothing is a winter problem. Since steam heated homes are of summer atmosphere, light clothing should be worn in the house. Bundle up, if you like, when you face forth, but don't forget that ine feet should be warm. Cold feet bring blue lips and red noses — sometimes sneezing, running, nose, than which there can be nothing more disastrous to an otherwise attractive appearance.

Fall not to place water containers on the radiators. We have itation-called this warning several times before, but it is worth repeating. Dry air crisps the hair as well as the skin. It causes the mem branes of the throat and nose to become arid, inviting bacteria to take up residence. It produces an unbearable irritation of the epidermis all over the body which often enough can only be allayed by means of oil baths.

Ventilate the home thoroughly twice a day. Let the wind blow the curtains about. Stale air is depressing, it lowers vitality. The complexion doesn't like it for sour apples.

Keep the scalp well oiled. Use a hand lotion twice a day and, if you line up among the housewives, select household soaps and cleaning powders with judgment; strong ones fay the hands cruelly so that in time it is next to impossible to recapture a soft silky fine texture of the skin.

If there's any outdoor fun going on, get into the game. Blooming may be all right for bears, but it won't do for pretty gals.

Guide Activities of Your Child Carefully

By Constance Cameron

A good measure of our success or failure in our training resolves itself around the promises upon which we begin the job. The mother, or teacher, in contact with children under the erroneous idea of trying to "get them to obey," keeping them quiet and still, is headed for a very unhappy hours, an enormous amount of unnecessary fatigue and fruitless effort.

But the mother or teacher who begins her job with children with the idea of guiding their every activity in the direction of their natural craving for activity will find the going much smoother and both herself and the children happier, and will be rewarded by success in the handling of young people.

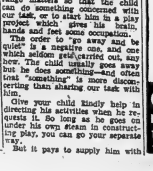
Activity is life, particularly to a young child. There is much to see, to feel, to taste, to explore, to ask about to manipulate to create with, and it is little wonder that a child normal, activity is the one satisfaction to be gotten out of life. To admit who attempts to thwart this urge finds endless difficulties untold in the way of temper and hostility in the young charges.

At a few children may, in time, be persuaded to sit still and do nothing, but this is a pitiful reaction. true tragedy More power to the little fellows who will be active, in spite of any parental commands to be otherwise. They are the children who hold the promise of a successful and well adjusted maturity.

We've all experienced the moment when our child wants to "help"—usually just when we have no time to do and the least help in which is do it. But the shortest path, after all, is to step and arrange matters so that child can do something concerned with our task. Let him in a play project which gives his brain, hands and feet some occupation.

The order to "go away and be still" is a negative and one from which seldom gets carried out, say but he does something—and often that "something" is more disconcerting than sharing our task with him.

Give your child kindly help in directing his activities when he requests it. So long as he goes on under his own steam in constructing play, you can go your separate way.



But it pays to supply him with materials for doing things, and it pays to hesitate sometimes in one's work long enough to start him on play projects, or simple tasks which will permit him to be active, to do something. Direct the child's activity but don't try to check it.

Employ Single Women

Winnipeg, Man. (CP) — Women's organizations are planning a new being asked to foster a scheme for the employment of single unemployed women similar to the "one-man-to-district" scheme originated in Toronto a year ago and adopted by this city this winter.

It is proposed that three or four householders might use a domestic. She would give her services at certain hours of the day to the different houses. Each home would contribute five dollars a month for services rendered, or fifty cents a day per day. A fourth home would provide sleeping accommodation.

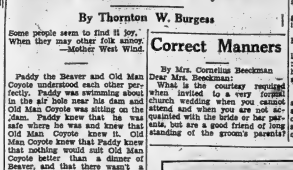
BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Paddy Beco mes Uneasy

By Thornton W. Burgess



Some people seem to find it joy. When they may other folk annoy. —Mother West Wind.

Paddy the Beaver and Old Man Coyote understood each other perfectly. Paddy was swimming about in the air hole near his dam and Old Man Coyote was sitting on the dam. Paddy knew that he was safe where he was and knew that Old Man Coyote knew it. Old Man Coyote knew that Paddy knew that nothing would suit Old Man Coyote better than a dinner of Beaver, and that there wasn't a chance that Paddy would leave his pond. So each grinned at the other in perfect understanding.

"If you knew how hungry I am, I am sure you would take pity on me," said Old Man Coyote, grinning more broadly than before.

"That would be too hard—for me," retorted Paddy, "so I think I will remain here. What is the news in the Green Forest?"

"There isn't any news, excepting that mice people are hungry and come to think of it that isn't news

"I wouldn't call him exactly a friend of mine," said Paddy at all," replied Old Man Coyote. "By the way, I saw a friend of yours the other day."

"Who?" demanded Paddy, looking interested.

"Mr. Otter," replied Old Man Coyote with a sly look.

"I wouldn't call him exactly a friend of mine," said Paddy, and in his eye there was a look of uneasiness. "Where did you see him?"

"Down at the Laughing Brook where it flows too swiftly to freeze," replied Old Man Coyote.

"What was he doing?" asked Paddy.

"Sliding," replied Old Man Coyote. "It made me shiver every time he plunged into that cold water. He has made himself a wonderful slippery slide down there. You ought to go down along with me, and I will show you where it is."

Paddy pretended not to have heard the invitation. "How did he look?" he asked.

"Fine," replied Old Man Coyote. "He said he was very busy. Again there was that sly look on Old Man Coyote's face.

Once more that uneasy look came into Paddy's eyes. "What did you tell him?" he asked.

"What could I tell him?" demanded Old Man Coyote. "That is the first time I have seen you this winter. You know as well as I do tell him that you are looking fat and fine.

"That's bother," said Paddy hastily. "I'm glad he is looking fine. It must be that he doesn't feel the hard times you complain of. Did he say how slippery slide?" Paddy grinned when he asked this.

Old Man Coyote grinned right back at Paddy. "He said it was a slip and slide enough these days without trying to. He says it was a wonderful time. I suppose that if he were starving he would slip and slide for the sake of his."

"Then he isn't starving," said Paddy quickly and happily.

"I didn't say so. He may be for all I know," replied Old Man Coyote. "I know I would be if I had to depend on catching fish."

"Did he say anything about coming this way?" inquired Paddy.

"No, replied Old Man Coyote, "but I wouldn't wonder if he will pay you a visit one of these days. I am sure he will when I tell him how fat and fine you look."

"Oh, he won't be interested in my looks," replied Paddy, trying to keep anxiety out of his voice.

"Perhaps he won't and perhaps he will. He takes an interest in all his neighbors," said Old Man Coyote. "Well, if you won't change your mind and go with me, I must be moving on. I believe I'll run down and see if little Joe is sliding today."

With this Old Man Coyote got to his feet and started off down the Laughing Brook, a sly grin still on his face. As soon as he was out of sight he turned and trotted off toward the Old Pasture. Of course Paddy didn't know this, and, with growing uneasiness, he dived under the ice and swam for home to tell Mrs. Paddy what he had heard.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman
Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the courtesy required when invited to a very formal church wedding when you cannot attend and when you are not acquainted with the bride or her parents, but are a good friend of long standing of the groom's parents?

Reader

I think that it would be hospitable for you to do both. That is, ask your friend if her friend will come in, and suggest that you and she go out together to invite her to come in.

Is a reply expected?

Subscriber.

It is a courtesy invitation to the church only does not require an answer. Of course, if the invitation is to the reception or to the wedding breakfast, or luncheon or supper, it must be answered in the formal, third person manner. The difference in that in one case the hosts do not necessarily have to know how many guests to provide for, and in the case of the reception or breakfast, places must be arranged for.

BEGINNING TO LIVE

An appetizing cereal, bringing "bulk" and Vitamin B, stopped the source of those dull headaches, and premature wrinkles

SHE had been a sufferer from constipation for many years. It sapped her enthusiasm and energy, took the sparkle out of her eyes, and made her skin sallow.

Every night she dosed herself with pills and drugs — in bigger and bigger quantities as time went on. They gave only temporary relief. Then, fortunately, she read an advertisement about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN (just as you are doing now).

She tried this delicious cereal. The results were surprising. She found she had a lot more energy at the end of a day. Her skin lost its sallow hue. Her drabness departed. Her friends discovered in her a new and colorful personality.

How could so simple a thing as eating a cereal effect this great change? Here's why. ALL-BRAN brings two things that check common constipation. "Bulk" which exercises the intestines. Vitamin B which helps give them tone. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar in action to that of lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture, and becomes a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Try two tablespoonfuls daily. If you suffer from intestinal trouble not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming. Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or cooked into fluffy bran muffins, breads, omelets, waffles, etc. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

IMPROVEMENT IS INDICATED IN BUSINESS

Salient Features on Present Situation Are Outlined

TRADE BALANCE

Montreal, Que., Jan. 22 (CP) — "There is an improved sentiment in business circles this month, partly suggested for by the fact that Canada trade proved better than had been expected, and partly by the feeling that current developments give reasonable grounds of looking up as the months pass and of 1933 ending better than it began," says the monthly business summary of the bank of Montreal, issued today.

Imports from the United States have been restricted by the conditions premium on New York funds and Canadian manufacturers has reaped the advantage. Another result of the drop in prices of the coupn of the Canadian dollar has been to produce a favorable balance in Canada's external trade, her exports for the last seven months exceeding imports. Of the major industries, cotton, wool and artificial silk are operating relatively actively, but lumber, newsprint, iron and steel mines and fisheries continue low production.

The salient point in connection with Canada's external trade, the review says: "is that, while the export value has greatly declined and adverse has been narrowed into a favorable balance. In December, for the seventh consecutive month, exports exceeded imports and for the nine elapsed months of the current fiscal year exports of $441,000,000 of domestic produce, plus an export of $48,000,000 of foreign produce, making a total of $479,464,000 compares with imports of $451,303,000.

WALKERS AND FORD FEATURE

Small Fractional Advances Seen on Toronto Bd.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 22—(Noon stocks)—Ford and Walkers were the feature trades on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning both receiving strong support on small fractional increases. The strength of Walkers the first couple of hours, amounting to about 2,000 shares and Walkers at $ 1-4 was just slightly firmer. It was the consistent buying rather than the volume of the advance that impressed.

Olls were all fractionally stronger but lightly traded. The usual special features were Dom. O.P. R., Nickel, Brazilian, Steel of Canada, Dominion Steel, which were unchanged to a small fraction lower. Page-Hersey tubes rose 1 point to 43 and one or two other scattered stocks made advances.

Montreal Light and Power sold at 36, the new minimum price set for this stock.

N. Y. MARKET MOVES DOWN

Stock Traders Find Little Inspiration and Market Sluggish

(By Claude F. Jager)
(Associated Press Financial Editor)

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 22—The Stock Market found the downward course somewhat the easier today, but seemed disinclined to move far in either direction.

With the remedial projects such as the reconstruction measure apparently well discounted by the market, and the outcome of pending business still showing but slight regional expansion, stock trader found little inspiration. The market was sluggish, a morning upturn in the rails was short lived, and the list generally eased after Mid-day.

Some of the rails sold up 1 to 2 points, and Missouri Pacific preferred got up nearly 5, but these advances were mostly lost. Other Norfolk and Western and Delaware and Hudson improved about 1 point, and declines of 1 to 2 were numerous, among them such issues as U.S. Steel, American Steel, Consolidated Gas, General Motors, American Tobacco B., Liggett and Myers B., American Can, Standard of N.J., Union Carbide, Westinghouse Electric, Sears Rebuilders and Borden.

Some traders were said to be turn ing by the hope that final approval of the reconstruction measure, and settlement of the railway wage controversy would result in more "selling on the good news" than in buying. Long anticipated favorable developments frequently bring a rush to take profits, so the fear that with the good news finally out no further upward stimulus can be expected from those quarters. These traders, however, were inclined to fel that fresh news of a favorable character would be needed within the next few days to extend the markets recent advance.

Silver shares were easy, with Castle Trethewey off a cent and Silverado down $ at $1.36. Base metal and oil sections held unchanged.

Must Suppress Anti-Japanese Movement

Shanghai, Jan. 22 (AP)—Immediate suppression of anti-Japanese organizations was demanded of Chinese officials here today by Rear Admiral Koichi Shiozawa, commander-in-chief of the first Japanese fleet in Chinese waters, as an outgrowth of recent clashes in Shanghai.

Admiral Shiozawa's flagship is now in the harbor here. The message was sent by him to General Wu Teh-Chen, Chinese Mayor, and it said unless his demands were met "drastic measures" would be taken by the Japanese naval authorities to protect their nationals' "rights and interests".

Consul-General Murai demanded especially the immediate dissolution of the Chinese Association which has supported the boycott against Japanese goods and of all other organizations whose activities are "directed against Japan."

CONCERT HELD AT CANNIFTON

Proceeds in Aid of Thurlow Township Unemployed

Residents of Cannifton village and Thurlow Township listened Tuesday night to one of the finest musical concerts that it has been their privilege to hear for some time. The Colclough quartette assisted by Mr. Jack Greene and Mr. Allen Gordon presented the entire program and repeated encores testified to the appreciation of the audience.

The Colclough quartette opened the programme with four of Sedy Parker's hymns, "You Go to Your Church Today," "Lead Kindly Light of the Valley", "Jesus Is My Neighbor" and "Do Something For Others" which were followed by the spirited repetition of "Come To the Fair."

Miss Eva Colclough was next heard in a pleasing and expressive solo invitation.

Mr. William Colclough, in his rich baritone voice sang as his first number "Friend", Mr. Jack Greene delighted his audience with his cornet solo, "A Happy Day". Mr. Greene has an established reputation as a cornet player. Later in the program he gave a group of songs, "Lead Kindly Light" and "The World Is Waiting For the Sunrise." The latter number was one of Mr. Greene's choice and received the very hearty applause of the audience.

For his first piano solo Mr. Gordon chose "Rhapsody" composed by Chaminger. As an encore he delighted the audiences with "The Hurdy-Gurdy Man." The artist's next solo and as accompanist was of the very highest quality.

Rev. J. S. McMullen, president of the Thurlow Unemployed Relief Association, under whose auspices the program was given, acted as chairman in his usual capable and cheerful manner in the absence of Rev. Reeve, Robert R. Mitchell, during the course of his remarks he referred to the abnormal times through which the country was passing and called upon his listeners to have the spirit of brotherhood and a high sense of duty to others would we emerge successfully from the present period of depression.

The Colclough quartette was next heard in "Singers' Quarrel" and gave as an encore "The Laughing Song". Miss Eva and Mr. William Colclough sang "Love's Old Sweet Song" Mr. Greene singing "Angels' Serenade" and the latter "Roadways". The quartette closed their part of the program with "Life's Dream Is O'er" and "Come Where the Lilies Bloom." As his final numbers Mr. Gordon gave two very bright and carefully executed numbers, the later being "Tarrant's Vengeance".

A vote of thanks moved by K. M. Bird and Earl Denyes to the Colclough Quartette and Mr. Jack Gordon, followed by the National Anthem, brought this successful programme to a close.

1ST CANADIAN DIVORCE 1750

Record of Proceedings Now in Halifax N. S.

By George C. Murray)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Halifax, N.S., Jan. 22.—Professor D. C. Harvey, Nova Scotia Archivist has uncovered a record of what he believed to be the first divorce granted in British North America. It is dated May 31, 1750, and is signed by Hon. Edward Cornwallis, who founded Halifax 1749, so local lawyers say because other authorities today to show that it may be the first divorce granted by a lay court in the British Empire.

"Sketch of English legal history," by Frederic W. Maitland, and Francis C. Montague accepted as a text book by universities, contains this statement: "The jurisdiction of matrimony and matrimonial causes had remained to the Ecclesiastical Courts until the year 1857 when it was transferred to the Lay Courts, newly established, power to pronounce a total divorce between man and wife was now first given to a court of justice."

Cornwallis, however granted a total divorce more than 100 years before the famous matrimonial legislation passed the British House of Commons. He and his executive councillors set themselves up as a court and assumed powers they could not have received from any authority in England.

A record of the case and the judgment is found in the minutes of the council, one of many valuable documents classified by Professor Harvey since Nova Scotia established the first Provincial Archive building in Canada.

The case is that of William Williams, a private settlement in the British regiment at Halifax and claimed his wife had been unfaithful. Thomas Thomas was named co-form the triangle. The judgment declares the wife, William Williams sans be at liberty to remarry but that Amy Williams should not have power to marry during William Williams life."

No records have been found to tell of Amy Williams' fate. Where she went, at a time, when there were few English settlements along the coast and when Indians lay in ambush to trap the lonely traveller, remains a story untold.

Face Problem of Letting Child Die

New York, January 22— Four physicians were faced yesterday with the problem of deciding whether to attempt a major operation on a two-year-old Brooklyn baby, whose head cavity is too small for normal growth of the brain.

Without an operation the child probably would die, or if she survived, grow up as helpless as she is they said. On the other hand, an operation might save the child, might be successful and restore the child to normalcy.

New - Outlook Editorial Draws Frank Criticism

Dr. Inkster Calls it "Dangerous Theory" to Express

INTERPRETATION

Toronto, Jan. 22.— The attitude taken in the editorial columns of The New Outlook, official publication of the United Church of Canada, that Jesus would have questioned the Virgin Birth as an instance where a starving man stole food from a fellow-creature, set forth the comment from Rev. Dr. J. G. Inkster, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, that "it is a very dangerous theory." The danger of the views contained in the editorial reading public was also pondered by several prominent ministers of different denominations.

Dr. Inkster said: "I think it is a very dangerous theory that the New Outlook is touching on very dangerous indeed," stated Rev. Dr. John Inkster, minister, minister of Knox Presbyterian Church.

"It is touching the fundamentals of our faith. You shall not steal; if you sanction the breaking of that law, which is one of the Ten Commandments, the sacredness of the law is in danger. It is very dangerous to touch that great principle."

The article in the New Outlook is calculated to do a great harm, especially today, when there are so many young people who should be fed, but who should not be encouraged in the New Outlook, he declared.

Rev. Dr. Andrew Hunter, former Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Toronto, and former editor of the New Outlook was advocating the abolition of capital punishment but he is simply saying that the moral character of the act must be taken into consideration, and that the interests of men were always supreme in the eyes of God.

The view expressed by Rev. Dr. T. D. Chown was that "it is a question between property and personality. Christ stood always for personality; beyond that, one cannot go. Those are general principles."

Magistrate Robert J. Browne said in respect of the issue: "The ancient commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal' still stands. That commandment is still in force. If a man were brought before me and convicted of stealing food for his family or himself if they were starving, I would think I would be inclined to be lenient. To err is human; to forgive divine."

Other Means Available

"The references they made in the article to the fact that Jesus would wipe out the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' considered Magistrate Margaret Patterson, "I think there are other means available to every one here today. I think if people are really in need plenty of ways can readily be found without it being necessary to countenance their stealing."

Stating that, of the cases which come up before her of shoplifting and stealing, only a few could be considered as "necessary," Magistrate Patterson said: "One would, of course, have consideration and show sympathy for those who stole out of necessity to support themselves or perhaps more especially those dependent on them, but I still think that other ways of helping could be found."

HAMILTON, Jan. 22—Commenting today upon the editorials in the New Outlook, Rev. W. M. Corkery of the Kingsway Avenue Baptist Church said that, if he was convinced he would steal food, if necessary, to satisfy his hunger.

"If food was opposite me and I was hungry, I would take it, no matter to whom it belonged," Mr. Corkery continued. "I would help myself in the name of God. I know it is dangerous doctrine, but there are many dangerous doctrines."

Rev. W. W. Judd, rector of All Saints' Church, said men were entitled to their food, but men were not justified in stealing.

Rev. Dr. C. A. Williams of Centenary United Church, held that, if in hunger, it must share in his guilt if he steals. But a state of anarchy would prevail if such condition became common and it must be remembered that God said, "Thou shalt not steal." No man, however, should be allowed to go hungry if he is willing to work."

"Two Gun" Crowley Dies in Chair

OSSINING, N.Y., Jan. 22—Calm and composed Antonio (Two-Gun) Crowley went to death last night in the electric chair at Sing-Sing Prison. A slight smile was the only trace of the headstrong which characterized his actions during the 20-year-old gunman pursued him his early years. "Hello Sarge," he said to a guard, as he was led into the chamber to be electrocuted for the slaying of a Long Island policeman. Crowley was pronounced dead at 11.01. Outside Sing-Sing's walls, 17-year-old Helen Walsh, Crowley's one time sweetheart, sat in an automobile, She wept and refused food.

EFFORT MADE TO FIND GUN

Inquest Shows Miss Nolan Shot Down Trying to Escape

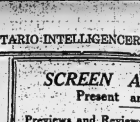
Kelowna, B.C., Jan. 21 (CP)— Police this morning were redoubling their efforts in an attempt to locate the gun used by the slayers of Chauffeur Chadam and Hair-Constable Archie McDonald in Tuesday evening's double murder and robbery throughout this interior town. Up to a late hour last night the search for the weapon, a .45 automatic revolver, went unrewarded.

David Nolan, a former member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, and for three years in the Manitoba Provincial Police, until Tuesday night a resident of Kelowna, police force stands charged with the murders. Yesterday afternoon he appeared briefly in police court and was remanded by Magistrate McWilliams until Monday.

A coroner's jury Wednesday after hearing evidence returned a verdict that Miss Nolan had been killed "by gunshot wounds fired by a man in a police uniform current and a gray hat." McDonald's death, the jury's verdict stated, was the result of gunshot wounds fired through the kitchen window by an unknown man."

LORD READING ILL AT LUXOR

Secretary of State in Firs' National Covernment



CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Lord Reading, noted British statesman and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the first National Government of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, is seriously ill at Luxor according to word received here today. An army aeroplane left here with a doctor and nurse this morning to go to his bedside.

Lord Reading married his secretary five years after the death in January, 1926, of his first wife and his wife spent a week with him at Villa of the Lake. Lord Melchett on the shores of the Lake of Galilee. They left Haifa by train for Egypt on Monday.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 22.—Found guilty of professional misconduct by the disciplinary committee of the law society of Upper Canada, the names of Newton M. Young and Maurice L. Gluster, barristers, have been struck off the rolls of the law society. Both were found guilty by the committee of misapplying moneys received from clients.

At The Belle

"OVER THE HILL" IS YEAR'S BEST FILM

"Over the Hill" now playing at the Belle Theatre, has been heralded as "the finest human drama since the advent of talking pictures."

"Over The Hill," actually, "Over The Hill," tells a double story of romance and love. It deals with the drama, the comedy and the pathos of a mother and her growing brood. It depicts the defeats and the victories of a young couple starting life in a hard and hostile world.

James Dunn and Sally Eilers, as the young lovers, give the finest performances of their careers in the new film. Mae Marsh has surpassed her work in "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance". Returning to the screen after twelve years of motherhood in real life, she gives one of the finest mother performances in the history of the screen.

Director Henry King combines the pathos of his "Stella Dallas" and "Merely Mary Ann" and the comedy of his "Twenty Three and a Half Hours Leave" in "Over The Hill."

The cast includes James Kirkwood, Edward Crandall, Claire Maynard, Olin Howland and William Pawley in the other featured roles as well as Rita Cruz, Joan Peers, Billy Barty and Joan Breslaw.

Of particular interest is the prologue of the story, which deals with the childhood of the principal players and which is enacted by a group of Hollywood's most talented juvenile.

Bars and Stripes, a clever Krazy Kat Talkartoon, irons the Great, an original comedy offering, the popular Belle Sound reproduced, and a new chapter of the thrilling adventure story, "The Vanishing Legion," have been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

HUGE STILL AND MASH ARE SEIZED

A scene from "Whoopee" starring Eddie Canter, opening at The Capitol, Saturday.

At The Capitol

SETH PARKER COMING TO CAPITOL THEATRE

"The Unholy Garden," Ronald Colman's new picture that appears at the Capitol Theatre tonight only is not only Samuel Goldwyn's first screen presentation of the new season, but it also inaugurates the control of United Artists producing activities.

Based on the success of Goldwyn's pictures, notably "Whoopee," "Raffles" and "Condemned", Joseph M. Schenck last year persuaded Goldwyn to assume control of United Artists production, permitting Mr. Schenck to devote himself exclusively to theatre interests and distribution.

Goldwyn thereupon doubled his program, planning eight pictures instead of the four that usually limits his season's work. The Unholy Garden," for which the story was written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, is the first.

As a successor to "Whoopee" Eddie Cantor has been seen in "Palmy Days" in company with the clownish Charlotte Greenwood and a much heralded installment of Goldwyn's most beautiful girls. Then there is the picturization of Elmer Rice's Pulitzer Prize winning drama, "Street Scene," directed by King Vider with Sylvia Sidney, William Collier, Jr., and Estelle Taylor in the cast.

Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never" based on the successful stage hit, is the fourth, while a screen version of the Zoe Akins comedy hit, "The Greeks Had a Word For It" is the fifth. Colman in a picturization of the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Arrowsmith," with Helen Hays, is likely to be the sixth, and then there will be two more.

All these outstanding successes are booked by the management of the Capitol Theatre in addition to Seth Parker in "Way Back Home", Wheeler and Woolsey in "Cracked Nuts" and many more of 1932's big pictures.

By public demand, Manager Holmes brings back Eddie Canlor's greatest laugh and song hit to the Capitol screen on Saturday for three days. This stupendous success of 1931 production "still tops the theatre's receipts record for most movie houses throughout the country.

"Whoopee" needs no introduction, as its peoples and nothing will a strong heart to accommodate an over dose of unrestrained laughter. It is the clever comedian's comedian of the present era and in "Whoopee" he is at his absolute best, so that only conclusion reasonably reached is to see "Whoopee"!

POULTRY SHOW AT PICTON IS REAL SUCCESS

Leading Show of Province Claim Made By Association

LARGE ENTRY

School Children's Pets Feature of This Year's Show

Picton, Jan. 22 (Special)— The ninteenth annual exhibition of Prince Edward County Poultry Association closed last night and was one of the most successful in years. The number presented each of the three days and people motored from distant points.

The school pet is one of the leading shows of the Province and this year had about seventy-five exhibits. The collections of hamsters was one of the greatest seen at any Ontario show except the Ontario Guelph, and the Royal in some years, according to the Judge, J. H. Warrington. There were thousands of ways that the water could be used in the same manner but after the meters were installed and they knew they would have to pay for every drop used at the end of the hose, then conservation began to take root. Nevertheless, as you will see below.

In the summer the consumption rates are higher per capita, and at the peak which occurs some time in July or August the average per person mounts away up to two fifty or three hundred gallons. Now we don't let your sprinkler running all evening to water the lawn or you keep your inside tap running at extended periods to let the drinking water "cool off". The month of February it begins to get good and cold and Jack Frost gets a good grip around looking for water pipes to play with and we find the rate almost as much water then as in the summer by about 10%. It is not all night to keep the pipes from freezing. July, last year, was the highest month in the list of consumption, and April was the lowest. Last April, however, was a month when people just naturally got tired of looking at water in any form. There was too much of it on the street and in the basement, and as much as it is jibed at, and sometimes execrated by those who like their liquids in cans other form, we must have it or rains its popularity, and not only the morning after but throughout the year. 171 Gallons Per Capita Daily Consumed in City

METERS TELL STORY

For every man, woman and child in this city fast year the thousand of water taps in it poured out 171 gurgling gallons of that fluid every day.

Just while this amount may seem a lot to some of the residents it does not compare with records of past years before the installation of water meters began. Then the average was considerably more than that as literally going to waste, and while it may have indicated that the residents as a whole were paying more attention to personal cleanliness, and that little Willie's ears were getting washed more frequently, this is not the real reason for the reduction in record attained some time ago. The fact is that before meters were installed a lot of the patrons considered their water dirt cheap. If they wanted to wash a car they would sprinkle the street comparable with the Johnstown flood, and flood the building; if they wanted to drown out the lawn or the garden they would put the hose down the hole and let 'er flow—and so on. There were thousands of ways that the water could be used in the same manner but after the meters were installed and they knew they would have to pay for every drop used at the end of the hose, then conservation began to take root. Can it Be Done?

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 22.—Under favorable snow conditions a woman can be run down by a man on snow shoes, I. W. Yokum, hunter and trapper of Parry Sound district, claims as a result of Yokum's assertion, the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries is issuing instruction to its departmental overseers and wardens to try this method at the first opportunity.

Yokum's contention, that, whereas a wolf trailed by a dog will travel any distance to escape, when trailed by a man it will frequently hide instead of fleeing. Given sight of a wolf, he claims he can run it down in eight hours' time, under favorable weather conditions.

Bearded Gob Makes Appeal to Smoot

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—Somewhere on the high seas a "gob" growing a beard, despite the commander's orders, will be shave it off.

Torn between obedience to these orders and those of the parents of his fiancee, who say he must grow a beard before he can marry their daughter, the young Lochinvar flies Senator Smoot asking assistance.

He could not see why he should not grow a beard when most of the Admirals have them."

"Anyway," he concluded, "I'm not going to shave."

Fishermen Declines Agreement Present

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 21.—Lake Erie fishermen attending a district convention here yesterday declined to consent to an international agreement regarding closing dates for fishing in Lake Erie. Eric H. Hanley, Pleasant Point, Scholard, informed the convention the States bordering on the south shore of the lake favored closing the fishing season from December 1 to March 1. The convention favored a season extending from March 15 to June 15.

Removal of restrictions on gill net fishermen was requested by the convention. The only restrictions in future will be that gill netters must keep at least nine inches per pound net, if the Department of Game and Fisheries approves the recommendation of the Association.

Exercise Policy of Retrenchment

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 22.—Calling upon governments and individuals to exercise a policy of retrenchment, Rev. Dr. Theophile MacAulay, Ontario Minister of Highways at the same time predicted that Canada would lead the world in the return to prosperity, addressing the Hamilton Auto Club last night.

"We must learn that there is a limit to capital expenditure and to the capacity of the public to pay," he declared.

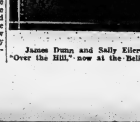
How About Weather?

Scientists Plan Stratosphere Drop



Vienna, Jan. 22.—Count Theodore Zichy of Hungary and Hans Braun, an American engineer, have signed a contract with the United States news service for a balloon ascension in the stratosphere in the next few months.

They plan to descend from the stratosphere by detaching it's gondola from the gas bag and checking their fall with a huge parachute, 144 feet in diameter.

The gondola is being constructed of duralumin with double walls to protect the occupants from heat and cold. It will be larger than the gondola which Professor Piccard or Alphonse Piccard to the stratosphere last year. It will be equipped with a two-way radio.

INDICTED FOR SMUGGLING

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 22.—John A. Fitzgerald and Ambrose McCann local Canadian customs officials, yesterday were said to have been indicted by United States authorities at Buffalo, N.Y., on a charge of smuggling aliens across the international border.

An early Spring is probable although back in the year 1816 Winter commenced in April and continued through the Summer and the Winter which followed. Whether such a thing will be recurrence of this unusual weather remains to be seen, but anyhow the whole thing is too dreadful to contemplate. But it would seem that all there is to do is to let weather prognosticators prognosticate, even though they are as much at sea as the most lowly of the mariners on the high seas. While it lasts though the uncanny pess of the thing will and have been made, long-range predictions still continue while their authors stroke long beards and gaze at bright blue skies through furnaces slowly are allowed to revert back to their dust and coldstorage condition as they were last July. And look as long as you may you can find nothing but prime and thankfulness for conditions as they are.

by PETER B. KYNE

"My dear Mr. Latham:

"I wired you for permission to pay my court to your very lovely niece, Miss Roberta Antrim. In framing the desired permission, for which I am deeply grateful, you saw fit to give me some weighty counsel, say and rather silly advice on how to be successful in love.

"My father, in his callow youth, may have been steeped in the Castilian code of courtship. He had more Spanish blood in his veins than his son. But I have no such fighting operator in the arena of courtship. "I'll have you know that I'm a real live nephew of your own Uncle Sam, because I judge from your telegrams that you think I'm as sentimental and romantic as a Neapolitan street singer.

"My dear Mr. Latham, you know nothing of your charming niece's disposition. The finest way in the world for me to kill my feeble prospects would be for me to serenade a guitar under her window and sing 'Robert Ina Clair'. And, anyhow, what's your interest in me that causes you to be so free with your foolish advice? I suspect you would like to get me in Dutch.

"I think she likes me, but she doesn't know whether I'm crazy about her or not, even when I swear I am. I figure that the best way to get her winging it to me is by a pessimistic, hang-dog label if you have any other suggestions for helping along the game of your friend Patricio Jesus Higuenes' son, let them fly.

Sincerely yours,

J. M. Higuenes."

Crooked Bill read and reread this remarkable document and with a huge sigh laid it aside. "I've overplayed my hand," he murmured, and took up Roberta's letter, which ran as follows:

"Dear Uncle Bill:

"I am ashamed of myself for having neglected you so but the fact is I have been having such a wonderful time at Don Jaime's ranch (I call him Jimmy) that I haven't had time to write.

"Uncle Bill, he's marvelous. Everybody thinks so and says so—consequently it must be true. His lawyer, Don Evaristo Alvisa, whom we visited yesterday, says God only made one Jaime Miguel Higuenes and then the mould was destroyed. He is very bold, he sings and plays divinely, he is a sort of feudal baron and he works hard all day with his men. His hacienda is laid off a day since I came, but he lets me ride around with him. He has thousands of acres of cotton, thousands more of alfalfa, thousands more of cattle range, and all the cattle in the world. He still suffers a little from the wounds Uncle Tom inflicted on him but he will not admit this. She is very humorous and one never grows weary of his society. Mission worships from afar and carries the poon women who kiss his hand after some kindness.

"I haven't thought of Glenn Hackett more than twice since coming here and then only to compare him to his disadvantage, to this amazing Jimmy. If he'd only make love to me like a reasonable man should I think I'd fall for him—hard.

"I enclose a number of photos. The one of Jimmy is excellent. Write soon.

Your loving

Bobby."

Twenty-fourth Instalment

With the calmness of despair Crooked Bill scrutinized the photographs that Roberta had enclosed. The one of Don Jaime showed him on a gray horse with a day-off calf draped across his lap.

"Caramba!" murmured Crooked Bill. "This boy's a throwback and as dangerous as they make 'em. What's more he's about ten times smarter than his father—and nobody ever accused old Patricio of being dull. Say he sized Bobberta up right—not the width of a goat's whig out of line—and she'll win in a walk, as sure as death and taxes, inside of a month—and that is my promise. I dont want Roberta to marry into a mixed breed like the Higuenes—not even if they live in Texas but—well, what will I do, in my old age, if Roberta and Don Jaime live down there? And Glenn Hackett is the best I can do for a son-in-law—and he's one of her own kind. I'm tired of Latin blood.

"Well Roberta says if he'd only make love to her like a reasonable man she'd fall for him—hard. That means she's still safe. . . . Bill Latham, you're an old fool—you're old ass and you're got to get that girl back home in a hurry. Don says nothing about sheep, which proves she is not interested in them—that her interests lie elsewhere. Throw infernal sheep and my foolish scheming sent her to Texas, and in order to get her home those sheep must be disposed of—in a hurry. I'll have to buy them myself—and if that Higuenes bandit ever gets on to the identity of the purchaser he'll induce her to soak me so hard when I'm unable to defend myself, that I'll never have the heart to cut mutton chop again."

Long did Crooked Bill ponder. The question that gnawed at him most as the fire for gnawed at the vitals of the Spartan youth was: whom could he get to buy the sheep for him, and, after having secured them, to whom would he sell them? What would he do with them if they were not readily salable? Would he be forced to rent pasturage for them and hire herders to watch them? If so, he would have to hire watchers to watch the herders.

"Well," he slightly pounded, "it's one thing I'm certain of. I'm in the sheep business right now and the sooner I get out of it the better for all concerned. Glenn my boy, flighting your right is going to be mighty expensive, but as an adjunct to the family I guess you're worth it." He telephoned to his office in New York, instructing it to secure him transportation and a drawing room to Los Algodones, Texas, and the following day was en route to consummate the crookedest piece of business he had ever contemplated—that of swindling himself! He selared himself, however, with the reflection that this was a luxury he could afford.

In due course he arrived in Los Algodones and put up at the Mansion House. Neither the town nor the hotel had changed a particle in the twenty-five years that had passed since he had seen it last. Indeed the only difference Crooked Bill was aware of was that twenty-five years ago Los Algodones and the Mansion House had pleased him thoroughly while today they caused him to shudder.

Nobody knew him, nor did any of the faces of the loungers in the chairs tipped back against the front of the hotel awaken in Crooked Bill the faintest flicker of recognition. At the general store he purchased a pair of overalls, a canvas coat and a gray sombrero, which, combined with a soft white shirt and black tie and the boots (a relic of other days) which he habitually wore, metamorphosed Crooked Bill into a very fair imitation of a Texas citizen of the wide open spaces. Thus garbed he called upon Don Prudencio Alvisa.

"My name's Blodgett, Mr. Alvisa," he announced, and soothed his confidence with the thought that it was—his middle name. "I understand you're the attorney for Don Antrim's estate."

Don Prudencio, a stout and amiable person of fifty, nodded gravely, and with large dark eyes, which showed a yellowish tinge in the whites of them, inquired of what interest the Don Antrim estate might be to Mr. Blodgett.

"I remember this fellow just about the time he got his sheepskin," Crooked Bill soliloquized. "He's developed into about as thought he would. Too confounded easy to open his mouth and ask questions." To Don Prudencio's eyes he replied:

"I understand old Tom left quite a smear of sheep."

Don Prudencio nodded.

"Are they for sale?"

"A sale might be arranged, worth the consent of the court, Senor Blodgett," Don Prudencio answered guardedly.

"Fine," said Crooked Bill. "I'll buy them. I've a notion I can make a turn on those sheep. I understand Antrim's heir lives in New York, so I presume she'll be glad to sell and get rid of a nuisance."

Don Prudencio shrugged. "Maybe so." With his eyes he inquired what Senor Blodgett's offer might be. Having looked up the market quotations in an El Paso paper and fortified himself with further knowledge of the market in a conversation with a sheepman he had drawn into conversation on the train coming down, Crooked Bill promptly named a figure one dollar per head above the highest market quotations.

Don Prudencio stirred slightly. "You have seen these sheep?"

"No, but I understand they're a good lot."

"I will sell you those sheep, subject to the confirmation by the court," Don Prudencio purred. "I am the executor and I'm sure the court will confirm the sale. Those sheep have been count' recently and I will guarantee the count. I will write for you an offer for all those sheep, sheep, sheep, will sign." Then I will accept, subject to the confirmation by the court and you will pay me the amount in ten thousand dollars, no? I am sure you will—like me, you."

"I have the money wired to the credit of the estate in your own name. It will be there tomorrow," said Crooked Bill grimly.

Don Prudencio Alvisa might have looked sleepy, but behind those slightly lidded eyes his mind was wide awake. He knew there were a number of cattle in that lot of sheep—old ewes with wrinkled necks, decayed teeth, old rams that were merely bundles of diseased breeds of uncertain sizes and ages, and generally speaking he had agreed sheep and lambs he had received on account of the estate and in offer he did not hesitate. Within ten minutes of that William E. Latham sewed up on a contract of purchase and sale, and with this signal advantage. In the first reason, it was considered undesirable for the estate to go through with the sale, it could get out of the contract, while for the purchaser there could be no escape, even though he should change his mind, provided the court approved Don Prudencio's action as executor.

MR. AND MRS. — THE PRELIMINARIES TO A PUBLIC SNEEZE

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 19.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Of the scores of savages who had crept upon Tarzan a single warrior managed to escape the horde that had overwhelmed his people. This one was Magambi, the chief. Only the keen eyes of the ape-man saw him disappear into the tangled forest. Leaving his companions behind him, Tarzan of the Apes pursued this single survivor of the ferocious fight.

He saw the fleeing black, making with headlong strides for a war-canoe drawn well up on the beach. Noiseless as the fabled shadow Tarzan raced after the terror-stricken savage. Before he could strike a blow in his own defense the black was hurled to earth, while a giant's form fingers closed about his wrists. "Who are you?" asked Tarzan in the language of the West Coast.

"Magambi, chief of the Wagambi," replied the black. "I will spare your life," said Tarzan, "if you will promise to help me leave this island." "I will help you," answered Mugambi. "But now you must come to where the paddles." Tarzan allowed his prisoner to stand up. A magnificent specimen of manhood, the fellow was a black counterpart of the white man.

"Come!" said the ape-man. "They could still hear the snarls and growls of the feasting pack and Mugambi hesitated. But Tarzan forced him on and soon they were in full view of the grisly spectacle upon the beach. At sight of the two men the beasts now looked up with angry growls, but Tarzan strode in among them dragging the trembling Mugambi with him.

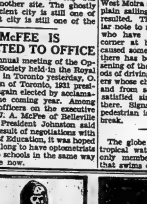
PEOPLE IN TERROR

Sewage Mains Destroyed and Telegraph Lines Are Down

Mexico City, Jan. 22—Guatemala City was threatened with destruction Thursday by an earthquake which shook the city and its vicinity severely twenty times within an hour. The volcano of Acatenango is in violent eruption, and smoke covered skies have virtually plunged the city into darkness.

Inhabitants of the city are terror-stricken. Telegraph lines are down; water and sewage mains have been destroyed; houses of the lower classes in suburbs are cracked open beyond repair; three bodies have collapsed.



Towns in the valley around Guatemala were also badly struck by the quakes.

The Acatenango volcano, in a previous eruption, did awful destruction. According to tradition, Acatenango in ancient days buried numerous cities in the valley. Archeological excavations confirm the story.

The City of Guatemala once before was completely destroyed by earthquake and the capital city was abandoned. A new city was built on another site. The greatest wall of ancient city is still one of the ancient city is still one of the Soviet Russia Mourns Two Days

Moscow, U.S.S.R., Jan. 22—Soviet Russia began two days of mourning today in commemoration of the eighth anniversary of Nicolai Lenin's death and the "bloody Sunday" of 1905.

Work went on as usual but will cease tomorrow for a universal holiday. The great tomb in Red Square where Lenin's body lies became a centre for thousands who paid silent tribute. There was no formal ceremonies, nothing except the slow march of workers and peasants past the catafalque.

Silent Cop Guards Dangerous Point

One of the worst intersections for the pedestrian to cross, and one that has always been a hard one for motorists to negotiate safely has at last been adjusted and concerned. Car drivers rolw use precaution, residents of that section who use that corner to and from work no longer have to hop, skip and jump through the traffic at that point and likelihood of accidents has lessened considerably. Yesterday the foreman of public works placed a traffic gaur after an silent policemen at the the intersection of North Front street and West Moira at the Upper Bridge and plain sailing, for all concerned has resulted. The sign was an unusual one to many of the car drivers who have formerly rounded that corner at break-neck speeds, and caused some confusion at first, but it has been an agreeable undoing of the go as you please methods of driving there and many motorists whose children pass that way to and from school are feeling more satisfied since the post was put there. Signs are evident that the pedestrian is about to get an even break.

U.F.A. GRAPPLE WITH PROBLEMS

Has Russian Experiment Anything to Offer Canada? Question

(By Frank Flaherty)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 22—Was the Russian experiment anything to offer the farmers of Western Canada? That is the form the question in the mind of the members of the United Farmers of Alberta as they discuss their difficulties at their convention here.

Already they have heard Russia discussed by two prominent public men from two different angles, and the speeches been given on the same programme as they have been a debate. Hon. J. R. Brownlee, head of Alberta's United Farmer Government, replied to a speech made by J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member of the House of Commons for Winnipeg North Centre). Mr. Woodsworth visited Russia during the summer and gave some of his impressions.

He compared the activity and construction going on in Russia with the depression and unemployment in Canada. He said there was room for everyone in Russia, he said, and there was a shortage of labor, not money.

Mr. Brownlee said the Russian people were striving for things which had been achieved in Canada and in British countries many years ago. In Canada civil and religious liberty was established when taxation was within the reach of all; illiteracy was unknown; universal suffrage had been enjoyed for years and the standard of living was high. Russia was still working for these things.

There is a Difference

The only difference between what Russia aimed at and what Canada had already achieved was a more rapid progress in Canada and a great utilization of the resources of the country for the benefit of all the people.

British people had conquered other problems and were already well advanced towards better social conditions. Canada's problem was much alive to the need of getting more wealth into the hands of the masses of the people as the Russians. Canada's standard was high.

Mr. Woodsworth had found the standard of living in Russia low. There, though, Mr. Brownlee, they had a population of 150,000,000 Russia and the unemployment in Canada.

"We can keep every man in Canada busy" he said, "and yet disregard our standard of living." The aim here was to preserve and raise the high standard built up in recent years. When men were willing to work they were paid trade union waged if in a trade and reasonable wages if not."

The Premier said he had no patience with a man who was afraid of new ideas. He had been criticized for letting the people of Alberta to study Russia but he repeated his intention. He asked them, however, to face the facts and make sure their judgments were sound.

Yesterday was the third day of the convention and it has to end tonight. Tuesday the two chief officers of the Association were re-elected for another year, Robert Gardiner, president, and Norman F. Priestly, vice-president.

QUINTE W. I.

The members of Quinte Branch W. I. and their husbands were entertained on Monday evening, January 18th at the home of Miss B. Jones, Bellleville. On account of illness the attendance was not as large as usual. Owing to the absence of President of the President, Mrs. Burnett, Miss Gardsutt had charge of the meeting.

The Secretary read letters of appreciation from Shill and Consecon centres. It was decided to send a box of provisions to the Shill Hospital as their appeal was most pitiful. There were also letters of appreciation read from sick and bereaved members. Mrs. Lorna Riddey gave a solo, which was greatly enjoyed. The delegates who attended the Institute meeting held in Belleville on Nov. 12th and 13th gave their report on the same. Mrs. Roderick gave a humorous reading in keep time which afforded lots of laughs and many a good chuckle on to the fair maidens.

Community singing was indulged in, and several old time tunes enjoyed. Mrs. Fred Hollingsworth from the Wallbridge branch was present, and spoke a few words on Relief Work, and told that their branch at Wallbridge had undertaken to finance the teaching of sewing to two schools this year. Mrs. A. Clarke and Mrs. A. Greavis rendered duet entitled "Juanita", in their usual pleasing manner. Mrs. Burnett addressed the members on Institute work. Miss Miss Keene in her splendid childish manner entertained us with an instrumental solo.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem after which dancing and progressive euchre was enjoyed. A dainty lunch was served by the members.

NO LIQUOR ALLOWED

Whitby, Jan. 21—No person on municipal property in Whitby will purchase liquor, the Whitby Council decided at its meeting. Adopting the report of the Relief Committee, the chairman was instructed to forward the list of names of those on local relief to the manager of the Oshawa Liquor Store.

Members at the Round Table Conference committees now on the way from England to India will hold their first meeting at New Delhi on Jan. 28.

Thwarted Emotions Cause of Insanity

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian Press)—Thwarted emotions, not intellect, is the cause of mental instability Dr. E. C. Menzies of the Verdun Protestant Hospital told members of the Lions Club here recently in an address on "The Problem of Mental Health."

Dr. Menzies pointed out that to the City of Montreal there was more hospital accomodation for cases of mental disorder than for those who are physically ill, yet there was a hopeless lack of interest among citizens of the general public in the fight against insanity. He said, "Two out of this be thought lay in the widespread though erroneous impression that most insanity cases could not be cured. Psychosis in a mental hospital accumulate from year to year" Dr. Menzies said, "giving the impression of a hopeless situation. Similarly," he pointed out, "if a visitor to a mental ward were to be suddenly surrounded by all those who in the last twenty years had died or had been discharged as the various tuberculin institutions, general medicine and surgery wards took quite as hopeless."

Suffice, meanwhile, the doctor said, had their mind intact, but had suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of their failure to support emotional needs. People who were unable to stand insecurity in the emotional life, people who failed to face emotional problems squarely these were the mental patients of the future, the speaker stressed.

WRITERS FEEL DEPRESSION

Inez Haynes Irwin Explains Situation to Authors' League

New York, Jan. 22—The death of mezzines, the starvation thinness of those connected with the unenviability of book sales have for most writers become what was the luxuriousness of writing into a too excessive. Inez Haynes Irwin, author, is the president of the Authors' League of America, said yesterday at the twelfth annual meeting of the National Association of Book Publishers.

"The annals of the poor," Mrs. Irwin said, "are full of well simple Many authors lived by writing for the magazines. Now many of the cheaper magazines are dead. The younger authors depended have gone out of existence. The others are thin and the editors are filling them from their stores. They have seem to have inexhaustible supplies of unpublished material, enough, it seems, to last a hundred years.

"Magazine articles are being written by first writers, considered who were steady contributors no longer find a market. Their work is being bought in much less quantity, fewer stories are printed in the little magazines, and I know of one case where each paragraph of a story was divided so that it could be made to fill as much space as was typographically possible.

Price Cut Up to 50 Per Cent.

"In practically every case prices have been cut; sometimes they have been halved.

"And for writers with no private income or the certainty of serialization, a book has become luxury too expensive to be written."

The luncheon, which was held at the Ambassador Hotel, was preceded by a business meeting at which Jesse Canfield, president of Harper and Bros., was elected president of the association.

Robert Lynd, author of "Middlesex" who is here on the first stop of consumption habits for President Herbert Hoover's committee on Social Trends, spoke on "The Book in America" in the north December. He praised the recent Cheney report and said that he regarded it as a pledge that the book industry is "taking its mission seriously."

Lisa Lenatsky's Husband

As "hurdles that must be taken by the industry" he mentioned the high cost of space for books in the smaller stores of the country, the lack of a unminished role of the home as a social centre", the new competitions for leisure time offered by the radio, motion pictures and the automobile, the "prohibitive" cost of the places of residence and the consequent breaking up of libraries resulting in loss of literary interests.

He is means to "take these hurdles," he urged, "more books, more books, and "that you stop feeding the business man only a steady stream of detective stories and inconsequential fiction, and that you begin to feed instructively the solid books that he should and really wants to read."

FRANCHISE BILL DOWN TO DEFEAT

QUEBEC, January 21.—(CP)—The women of the province of Quebec will have to wait at least another year, perhaps, as J. Filion, Liberal member for Laval, put it until the next election, to get the vote, before they will be able to participate in provincial elections.

Yesterday in the legislature a bill aimed at granting women the provincial franchise went down to defeat by a vote of 52 to 32, when an amendment moved by A. Belanger (Liberal-Levis), giving the measure six months' hoist was carried. The bill was sponsored by Dr. Camille Piante (Liberal-Montreal), and Hon. J. H. Dillon, minister without portfolio.

Canada's Hydro-Electric Progress in 1931 Reviewed

Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, Minister of Interior, Spokesman

MANY CHANGES

Activity General in Nearly Every Province of Dominion

In a review of hydro-electric activities in Canada recently issued by the Hon. Thomas G. Murphy, Minister of the Interior, substantial progress is indicated for the year 1931. New installations completed and placed in operation totalled 548,650 horse-power, which, brought the total water-power installation in the Dominion at the figure of 6,666,000 h.p., after allowing for several replacements of old by new turbines.

Additional to this substantial total of completed undertakings, construction was advanced upon a number of projects, some of which are of great magnitude. It is expected that these will be brought into operation within the next three or four years and will add more than 1,000,000 h.p. to the country's water power development.

110 Millions Expended

Capital to the extent of at least $110,000,000, it is estimated, has been expended in providing for the development, transmission and distribution of the new power developed in 1931, while more than $280,000,000 will be required to bring to completion the projects actively under construction. These large expenditures in the development of one of Canada's most valuable natural resources are most timely in providing equipment to thousands of citizens in a great many lines of endeavour. It may be considered that with a present lessened demand for power, due to the prevailing business conditions, the program of waterpower development is too far in advance of existing needs, but it is confidently expected that with improved conditions, of which there are already signs, the power demand throughout the Dominion will quickly absorb the available supply.

In British Columbia the Powell River Company brought a new plant into operation on the Lois river with an initial installation of 34,000 h.p., the power being transmitted to the Company's pulp and paper mills at Powell River. On the Bonaparte river the Ashcroft Water, Electric and improvement Company completed an installation of 400 h.p. The West Kootenay Power and Light Company virtually completed the fourth development on the Kootenay River at Corra Linn where and installation of 97,000 h.p. is expected to be ready for operation early in 1932. The Bridge River Power Company continued the construction of its undertaking on the Bridge river which will have an initial installation of 85,500 h.p., with provision for double capacity of about 600,000 h.p.

Power in Manitoba

In Manitoba two large hydro-electric developments were brought into operation on the Winnipeg river. The Northwestern Power Company, a subsidiary of the Winnipeg Electric Company formally opened its Seven Sisters plant on July 16 with an initial installation of three 21,500 h.p. units working under partial head and producing about 55,000 h.p. The City of Winnipeg also completed the initial stage of its new development at Pine Falls and formally opened the plant on September 1 w th two 12,000 h.p. units in operation. New steel tower transmission lines carry power from these two developments to Winnipeg. The Manitoba Power Commission extended its transmission system to Lac du Bonnet by the construction of 86 miles of new line and also brought service to ten additional municipalities.

In Ontario the Hydro-Electric Power Commission brought into operation a new development at Chats Falls on the Ottawa River. This development is half in Ontario and half in Quebec, the Quebec half being built by the Ottawa Valley Power Company. The first four 28,000-h.p.-units of this joint development were installed and placed in operation and a 220,000-volt transmission line was completed to carry the power about 200 miles to Toronto. In northern Ontario the Ontario Power Service Corporation began the construction of a 230,000 h.p. development at the canyon on the Abitibi river. This is expected to be ready for operation in the autumn of 1932. Part of the power will be supplied to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for transmission to the Sudbury mining district, while the remainder will go to the mills of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company of Iroquois Falls. At Sault Ste. Marie the Great Lakes Power Company installed a new unit of 50,000 h.p. in its hydro-electric station, replacing three smaller units of 350 h.p. each.

In Quebec as has been already mentioned, the Ottawa Valley Power Company brought its Chats Falls development on the Ottawa river into operation. The Alcoa Power Company completed its Chute-a-Caron plant on the Saguenay river with a total installation of 260,000 h.p. from which power is to be used for the reduction of aluminium ores. This plant is the initial step in the development of power which is to have an installation of 800,000 h.p. The Canada Power Company installed the seventh 34,00 h.p.-unit in its Shawinigan plant on the Saint Maurice river bringing the total in this plant to 238,000 h.p. The Shawinigan Water and Power Company also installed satisfactory progress with its Rapide Blanc development on the river. Maurice where four units of 40,000 h.p. each are being installed. On the same river at its La Gabelle plant the Company has a new unit of 25,000 h.p. while it has in view the renovation of its Diarell Falls on the Gatineau river replacing the present installation of 4,000 horse power with one of 14,000 h.p. Rapid progress was made in the construction of the Beauharnois development by the Beauharnois Power Corporation, where the initial installation of 200,000 h.p. is scheduled for completion by October 1, 1932. The McLaren-Quebec Power Company commenced the construction of a 130,000 h.p. development at Masson falls on Lleve river which is planned to come into operation in 1933. The Ontario Paper Company continued the construction of its plant on the Lievre river, project near the mouth of Ouderates river.

No Developments

In New Brunswick no new water-power developments were made during the year but the New Brunswick Power Commission completed and brought into operation a new plant at Newcastle Creek on the shore of Grand lake in Nova Scotia the Nova Scotia Power Commission constructed a new plant of 1,250-h.p. at Rapid Falls on the Mersey river and the town of Annapolis Royal completed the renovation of its plant on the Lequille river by replacing a 245 h.p. unit with one of 1,200 h.p. Important transmission line extensions were made by the Nova Scotia Power Commission and the Avon River Power Company.

FULL POWER BEHIND BILL

United States Believe Organization Will Shake Depression

Washington, D.C., Jan. 22 (by Ken. Clarke, Canadian Press Correspondent) — The end of this week will see the full power of the United States government behind a gigantic organization created to shake the grip of depression on the business of the country.

The wealth of United States concentrated a bill of $2,000,000,000 will be under the command of President Hoover's reconstruction finance corporation headed by General Charles Gates Dawes of the unerring pipe and direct speech.

Congress rushed the administration measure to agreement between the House and Senate during the past ten days, President Hoover is reported pleased" with the bill, and about one month from the beginning of the year and ten months from the presidential election the corporation bill will almost certainly be in operation.

Its supporters claim it will:

Re-establish confidence.

Provided highest grade credit.

Prevent hoarding.

Prevent bank failures and railroad bond disaster.

It has almost no detractors.

One hundred millions is the agreement upon the corporation bill the house and Senate passed a measure to increase the debt limit of the federal Aid Banks by $125,000,000.

Re-establishing confidence among this measure the Senate manufacturers' exemption from the bill to prevent the Senate a measure providing $125,000,000 for direct unemployment relief this winter. The bill probably will be vetoed by President Hoover, who has stood out all along for no direct governmental assistance.

While these enormous and protentious measures of the United States of Congress, Washington has noted with interest but not alarm during the past few weeks the resumption of the wilderness of French gold from New York.

Three Score Quake Shocks in Mexico

Guatemala City, Jan. 22 —A series of more than three score earthquake shocks, which sent a part of the Republic of Guatemala into a shiver yesterday damaged communications and as was feared today considerable damage might have been wrought in the sections around the two volcanoes Fuegt and Acatenango which began to rumble a few days ago. The volcanoes are fifty miles from here.

THE POOR BOOB

by David William Moore

Lowel Trevor, alias the Professor, was a mellow mood this evening, as usual. He stood waiting, in the darkness, around the corner of the Elm Street parochial school. His high stick was well protected him perfectly.

He might have half an hour to wait, but he didn't mind. He enjoyed leisure. It gave him time to think. The Professor was considerable of a thinker. He read books; he knew history; he could handle intricate subjects in philosophy.

He could always amuse himself by thinking about silly people who shared the world with him. Bah! Ha ha! They shared it with him, all right. They scurried about like frightened ants to accumulate gold, which the Professor easily took away from them.

In a little while, Batchford, the bank manager, would be coming along. The man would be carrying home the money taken in at the store. Maybe there would be two or three hundred dollars! Batchford was a silly fellow, an ignorant person. Just the sort to strive so the Professor could enjoy life.

Trevor chuckled to himself as he pictured in his mind how the bank manager would be coming along, thinking of a dull wife and whining kids. The poor boob would be anxious to get home.

But the Professor would step forth, pull a gun, and walk away with the money. It would be cheerfully concluded Trevor, almost as easy as thinking about it. It would be easy, because the Professor knew how to do such things, because he was of a superior intellect.

He peeked out. There was no one in sight. Perhaps the grocer had stayed late, to take in an extra dollar or two. Well, Trevor could use all the money available. Maybe there would be four hundred dollars.

Hmph. Maybe the professor would go to Sandy City for the week-end. He was needing some sort of diversion. Down at Elm Street was fairly well lighted. But Batchford, the dolt, wouldn't be expecting anything. So there was little cause to bother. Unless there was Batchford, now, half a block away, coming along, and Trevor had pictured he would be. Just a few seconds now.

No, it wouldn't be bad at all to have a week-end at Atlantic City, Trevor decided with five hundred dollars!

Then suddenly, the Professor leaned forward tensely, staring at the grocer. What was the matter with the fool? At Trevor watched, he saw the man begin to sway violently, holding a hand to his head.

Surely, Batchford couldn't be drunk. A moment ago the grocer was walking vigorously along. Too, the Professor had got pretty well "acquainted" with the man during the past few days. The grocer wasn't a drinking man.

There was only one other conclusion. The man was sick. And now, the Professor saw Batchford sway more violently and with a lurch fall to the sidewalk.

A sudden impulse swept over the Professor. The man out there was probably dying. Something had to be done. Trevor rushed out to the grocer lay. It didn't matter if the fellow was a stupid fool. He couldn't be left there on that hard concrete to die.

The Professor bent over Batchford. "What is it, old man? Can I help?"

"I—I——" gasped the distorted lips.

The Professor, half carrying the man, hurried as fast as he could toward Number 344. He knew it couldn't be far. Batchford's legs were stumbling along, and the poor man was clinging to the Professor pathetically.

"Poor devil," muttered Trevor to himself, half aloud.

The grocer seemed to hear. "I'm fine—I'm sorry—I—have—bother—ed—you."

"That's all right," said Trevor. "I'm glad to help. You'll be home in a jiffy now."

They reached the door, and when the Professor pushed the bell a woman quickly appeared. She was a fat, stupid woman, such a wife as Batchford would be expected to have, . She saw at a glance some thing terrible was wrong, and with a plaintive cry took hold of her husband. "Oh, Henry! What is it? What is the matter?"

Batchford seemed to have revived a little. He was able to stand feebly. "Oh, I'll soon be all right, Mary." Then he motioned to the Professor. "This man has been kind. I don't know what I'd have done if he hadn't helped. We must repay him somehow."

"Forget it, said Trevor. "But maybe I'd better help get you to bed."

Batchford shook his head. "No, thank you. I'll get along now. Mary can call the doctor. I won't keep you any longer. My name is Batchford." And he held out a hand.

"I'm William Trevor." said the Professor, shaking the grocers hand. It made him feel good to realize that he could shake hands with this stranger and not have to worry. He hadn't robbed the boob. No, he was just a man of a gentleman as Henry Batchford. But it was time to be going. "Hope you're soon all right, Mr. Batchford," said the Professor.

"Well, I surely do thank you Good by, Good by," and Batchford the Professor thought, closed the door with real tenderness.

As the Professor walked along the street, Lowel Trevor, alias Lane was again meditating. "The poor boob! I really feel sorry for him. I suppose I should have taken his dough, but he was having enough bad luck as it was. I hope he doesn't, croak."

Meanwhile, back at the Batchford home, the grocer mysteriously recovered from his "attack." He fell into a chair and laughed up at his wife, a rather hysterical laugh, screaming relief and delight. "I wasn't sick at all, Mary. I've been putting a fellow hanging around the store the last few days, and I was worried. Then, this evening as I came along by the school I saw a head peeking out. I decided I had to do something mighty quick. So I got the idea of being sick.

"But Henry, maybe Mr. Trevor wasn't going to rob you, after all."

"No? Maybe not. I don't know that he was going to.. But I do know that he didn't. I reckon I was too smart for him, eh?"

SASK. FARMER GROUP FORMED

Hope to Organize Party Which Will Be National in Scope

ONE-FARM POLICY

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 22—Farmers of Saskatchewan are now organizing a party which they are confident they will sweep the province at the next Provincial election and send a substantial representation to Ottawa at the next Dominion election. This information was brought to the United Farmers of Alberta by a report by A. J. Macaulay, president of the United Farmers of Canada, Saskatchewan section, speaking as the fraternal delegate from the Coldwater convention.

While the Saskatchewan farmers looked first to the Alberta group for more experienced in politics, he said, they were already doing things for themselves. They were hopeful hoping for closer co-operation with farm organizations in all other provinces in political action. A national meeting of farmers should be called and one farm policy for the whole country evolved.

Greater security of land tenure was needed, Mr. Macaulay stated. In Saskatchewan a new land policy had been worked out and after the next election it would be put into effect.

Every rural constituency in that province had been organized by the farmers in preparation for an election and an alliance had been made with labor which would be certain to place an associated Farmer-Labor group in power.

WRIT DISMISSED BY JUDGE BOYER

Held Contract Made to Be Illegal and Contrary to Order

Montreal, Que., Jan. 23 —A contract which places an employee at the mercy of an employer is illegal and contrary to public order, Judge Boyer declared in Superior Court today in dismissing a writ of injunction by which A. St. Hoyt, owner of a Toronto doughnut firm sought to restrain Lothen LaDuke from working for another doughnut company, LaDuke had signed a contract with Hoyt in which he agreed to refuse employment with other doughnut companies for a period of twelve months in the event of leaving Hoyt's employ.

In rendering judgment, Judge Boyer explained that such a contract were held valid an employer might cut wages to "practically nothing" and yet force an employee to remain with him or prevent him from securing work with another firm in the same business.

REPRISALS MADE AGAINST NATIVES

Homes Burned, Villages Pillaged Because of Evidence Given

Geneva, Jan. 22 (AP)—Natives in the Republic of Liberia who testified before the League of Nations National Commission which inquired into reports of slavery and economic conditions in the Negro republic have been visited by severe reprisals, representatives of humanitarian organizations reported today.

Homes have been burned, they said, even whole villages of those who reported to the League on the labor situation in the republic. They submitted the report of these incidents to the League Commission for consideration.

The Commission's own report said "senational" revelations will be submitted to the League Council next week. A preliminary report, given to the council last May, said many conditions existed in slavery or forced labor survive in Liberia.

FOUR YOUTHS ARE ARRESTED

Toronto, Jan. 23—Four youths charged with having been responsible for a number of robberies throughout the city, were arrested after a spectacular roof-top chase by Toronto detectives on Tuesday, the four are Fred Day 17, Frank Smith, 18; Gordon Brennan, 17; and Frank Aci, 18.

Arrest of the quartette was effected when police received information that the youths were hiding in a supposedly vacant house. With drawn guns, detectives surrounded the building and forced an entrance.

As they entered, the police said, the four made a dash for liberty and made their way to the top flat of the building. They refused to surrender and succeeded in getting onto the roof through a balcony window. From here they jumped to the ground with the detectives closely following. After a brief chase through the streets all were placed under arrest.

STRIKE IN BARCELONA SAID TO AIM AT SOVIET?

Co-operative Commonwealth Sought in Alberta

Producer to Have All Proceeds of His Labor Aim of Alberta Farmers

U. F. A. Not Awed By Niceties of Economic Problems

HEAVY DEBT

Moratorium of Former Debts Brushed Aside

By FRANK FLAHERTY,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 22.—Firmly committed to their ideal of a "co-operative commonwealth" in which the producer will get the whole proceeds of his labor and the distributor or financial powers will be abolished, the United Farmers of Alberta brought their annual convention to an end here last night.

They planned and settled to the satisfaction of a majority of the delegates at least practical farming problems, problems of Provincial and Federal politics, problems of national and international finance. They marched into the field of international affairs and discussed peace and disarmament and they were not awed by the dismal science of economics.

Heavy debts, the bugbear of the western farmers, caused much of the time of the convention to be devoted to the farmers' reduction of interest charges together with the larger one of effecting a change in the economic system, which would prevent the accumulation of debts.

The expedient of a moratorium on debts in the province for a limited period was thrust aside after a spirited debate as of no value. In the end the convention left the matter of any provincial political leader, Premier J. E. Brownlee, or the party to which he had for the credit of the province.

Last night Brownlee in the convention attempted to revive the question by introducing a resolution expressing confidence in the Premier's judgment in connection with the moratorium with a view to defeating it. The ladies were tarred on them, however, when an amendment made it a simple vote of confidence in the Premier without reference to the moratorium and was easily passed.

On another issue, however, the advice of the Premier was disregarded. He said the government would not increase the gasoline tax and a resolution favoring an increase was passed.

The use of the airplane in surveying and mapping the lesser known parts of Canada is rapidly becoming general.

Lusitania Medal Goes to Front and is There Captured

Belleville Man Owns Medal Struck to Mark Sinking

How a medal struck in commemoration of the sinking of the Lusitania found its way to Belleville was related today by Mr. W. J. Thomas, superintendent of the Belleville Cemetery. The German Government struck commemorative medals of iron to mark the event. One of the sub crew who had a medal was later transferred to Germany's army and while fighting on the front was captured by an English soldier, who took him from found this medal in his pocket. The German lad said, "Remember I have had been on the U-Boat on the day in question when the Lusitania was sunk and I have kept the medal.

When Mr. Thomas was last in England the English soldier gave the medal to Mr. Thomas who brought it here and has since kept it in his possession.

Last evening while listening to the radio, Mr. Thomas heard a speaker tell of the sinking of the Lusitania by the German submarine which is to be run down to the sunken wreck. This brought to Mr. Thomas' mind the fact that he possessed a commemorative medal. He found it and brought it into the Ontario Intelligencer office today to exhibit it.

The medal is large, thick and heavy. It is of bronze and has a reverse side "Keine Bann Werke" which means "No steamship in bold relief while beneath are the words "Der Grosskampfer Lusitania, Durch Ein Deutsch Tauchboot Versenkt am 7 Mai 1915." "The steamship Lusitania sunk by a German submarine 5 May 1915."

On the reverse is a sargonic drawing, a bitter sketch under the legend "Geschaft Ueber Alles." ("Business Before Everything"), while beneath the words are figures in bold relief, while at the other window is a skeleton, and under the other window are the words in German "Fahrkarten Ausgabe" (ticket office).

Mr. Thomas treasures this as an evidence of the claim made at the time of the wrecking of the ship that it was done by a German submarine.

New York, Jan. 23.—Slogans such as "an apple a day keeps the doctor away" and "early conditions to "brush your teeth twice a day" are no more than modern survivals of the magic of the primitive savage, who, when common sense failed him, fell back on amulets and talismans, according to Dr. Clark Wissler, anthropologist, who delivered the address as retiring president on "The Primitive Background of Civilization" at the annual dinner of the New York Academy of Science and affiliated societies.

"The drug store of today," said Dr. Wissler, "is still the magic shop of ancient man, and medicine is still the basic background of magic. When common sense fails we in turn to magic just as the savage did. Magic is still the basic gesture, the last threw in the game.

Miss McNamara is reported to be suffering from head injuries while Miss McWilliams escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The accident occurred at the Marysville hill when the car driven by Rosch ran into the side of a transport driven by Percy Wesse of London .The driver of the truck said that he saw the car approaching and pulled as far to the right side of the road as possible in order to avoid collision. There was a sleet storm at the time the accident occurred and driving was extremely hazardous. It is thought that in the face of the storm Rosch failed to see the truck approaching. Rosch's car was a complete wreck and damage to the extent of about $1,500 was caused to the transport truck. The injured were attended by Dr. H. A. Dolper, Dr. Wright and Police Thomas, investigated the accident.

A corporation to manufacture and subsequently to operate transcontinental air lines was recently formed in Chile.

BOYS SAVED BY ALERTNESS

Driver of Car Mounts Curb to Avoid Striking Children

A quick twist of an alert driver's wrist which sent the car he was driving skinid up on the boulevard on North Front street early last evening saved two small boys from what might have been serious injury or possible death under the machine.

While other children played with their sleighs on the more-secluded and less traveled hill of Grier St., these two boys had other ideas, and a belated delivery wagon drawn by a horse, which was just then passing at a slow gait provided them with a means of fun for the time original ideas, which were uppermost in their minds. A rope from the front of the sleigh was attached to the rear of the wagon and the occupants of the freight which dragged behind the horse continued to jog along the street. He was then on North Front street, and turned north up the hill, but when the crash of the load of the two boys who were sliding on it the steady rope from the sled parted almost as soon as they had turned the corner, and a car which by that almost instant from the delivery wagon, slammed on the brakes, swung over to the right at almost a right angle and mounted the curb in an effort to escape running over the boys who had then begun to slide backwards down the street. The driver, Mr. Bert Wagenger, scrambled up, retrieved their sleigh and continued his journey after joining street leaving a nerve-wracking automobile driver to continue his journey.

SALT MEANS OF REMOVING ICE

After Sprinkling on Walks, Ice Soon Melts

Every Winter for years and years the city furnishes a load of coarse salt from its rest, poked his head out of his nearest window, observed that ice-covered streets in front of his home were being sprinkled with granular and emerged therefrom with a full pan of salves from the factory. Hurrying down on a ladder he proceeded to strew liberally on the ice. Then he called his neighbors and the despair of the busy housewife inside, who knew that on a bright, still luster trying to clean up the foot tracks of the children who had been carried into the house by the salt-laden feet, who tramp through the ashes.

The answer to all this is simple, and the children of Canada know how to keep the ice off my sidewalk without salt or any thing else that is liable to be tracked into the house by dirty feet. And it takes about half the time. All you have to do is to take a small handful of salt out on the walk and sprinkle it on the ice or snow and in ten minutes you'll see it all melted and running off. It doesn't take much, and it's clean. And it's also a sure way to help keep peace in the family."

FOWL CHIEF TRADE BARTER

Large Number in Evidence at Local Market on Saturday

Under ideal weather conditions a rather large market welcomed both purchasers and vendors to the Belleville market on Saturday morning. Especially was the inside market, where the building was crowded to capacity all morning. Prices, at the inside market, remained about the same as they were last week although there were a lot more fowl in evidence. Fine young chickens were offered for sale at 20 to 25 cents according to their size and weight Butter remained the prevailing prices of 22 to 23 cents per pound, while eggs sold at 20 to 25 cents a dozen. None-made headcheese was offered to the citizens at 15 cents a pound while fine cuts of sausage sold for two pounds for 25 cents.

The outside market was a little hive of industry, when the vendors were busily engaged in disposing of the wants and needs of the housewives. Potatoes brought 40 to 55 cents a bag, while cabbage sold for 5c a head. For the first time this year fresh fish was offered to the buyers at 15 cents a pound and dressed hens for 25 cents. They were very fine specimens of chickens and were soon disposed of. Beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips sold at the prevailing price of 30c per bag.

Plenty of apples of many varieties, as well as pears, were in the counter. Cord wood sold at $8.00 a load and hay at $15.00 per ton. Several fine young porker pigs were also offered at $5.00 a pair.

IDEAL NIGHT FOR REAL FUN

Children Enjoy Riding Down Hills on Sleighs and Skiis

A round full moon riding high in the sky that was clear and frosty rendered an ideal night for coasting last evening and provided an ideal night for the youngsters of the district to have fun from with their new skates and sleighs that have been so inactive all season.

Nearly every hill was covered with the scores of shouting youngsters who took possession of them and soon turned the slopes into a glassy surface to the detriment of the occasional car, which dared validy to take the grade. A few were able, but the majority of them stuck to the sleds, which were in as great a variety as the children who used them. Bobsleds, steered by the aid of the city with skates, and combined locally as the ingenuity some of the householders showed by clearing the snow off the walks in front of their houses. The old-time bob sled was not in evidence on any of the hills, as even the relics that were used did not resemble those of years ago. Only Gas Chief fashioned spring skates are not so apparent this year as they have been in the past, but the spirit of Winter still exists.

A very interesting parlor meeting under the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Miss B. Jones, Dundas St., Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Denton, superintendent of Parlor Meetings, presided. The meeting opened with singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," The Scripture lesson as found in Proverbs 20 was read by Mrs. R. Vivian following a humbles for 25 cents. Farnsworth.

The collection for the months was "Wines of the Bible"—a study of the use of wine in the days of Old Testament but, "the cup," the fruit of the vine, "Which Mother Eve Knows," was rendered by Mrs. Hagerman and much enjoyed by all.

A helpful and inspiring address was given by Mrs. (Dr.) Bishop. The temperance forces have today a powerful ally in scientific temperance. This reveals to us truths about alcohol and its effect on the human system that were formerly unknown. Alcohol, unlike foods, passes from the stomach directly into the blood stream in its crude state.

Sidney Liberals are Reorganized, Optimism is Voiced by Speakers

J. A. Lott is Elected President of Township Association

WOMEN'S CLUB

Dr. J. A. Faulkner and Hon. N. Parliament Speakers

The Liberals of the Township of Sidney were out in force last night to attend their annual meeting in the town hall at Wallbridge. The hall was filled to capacity when president J. A. Lott of the Liberal Association of Sidney Township, called the gathering to order, and invited the speakers to occupy the chairs on the platform. Hon. Nelson Parliament, Chief Liberal organizer for Ontario, Mr. C. Harold Hollon, president of the South Hastings Liberal Association and secretary treasurer of the newly created Central Ontario Association, Dr. J. A. Faulkner, president of the West Hastings Liberal Association and Colonel Reeve Vandervoort, D.S.O., came forward, amidst applause, to the front of the hall. Mr. Lott was unanimously chosen chairman for the evening and filled this position admirably during the evening's proceedings. He thanked them for their kind words and was delighter to see so many present, which evidenced the sincere interest taken in Liberalism and political matters in general, in the Township of Sidney.

M. B. Sine, secretary-treasurer, read the minutes of the last annual meeting, which were adopted.

The officers and poll chairmen elected at the last annual meeting after explanations were made on each by the chairman (with the relative to poll chairmanships) were unanimously re-elected.

Women's Organization

The matter of a women's organization in the Liberal movement was opened for discussion, this was decided to be left in abeyance, but later in the evening the subject was re-opened and a motion to organize was chosen as president and Mrs. Clarence Vermilyea, secretary-treasurer. The details of the new organization is to be carried out later by the women themselves.

The chairman next spoke of the organization of the young men of the township in the interest of Liberalism, the association to be known as the 30th Century Club and membership therein confined to the manhood of Sidney born since January 1, 1900. He then called on Mr. Hollon for further explanations and he explained the proposed club. Mr. Hollon said the idea originated at the banquet in Ottawa two years ago, since that time these clubs had been organized throughout Canada, supplying Liberal literature and fostering Liberalism, he thought such should be formed in Sidney as well as a women's organization. Hon. Nelson Parliament here suggested that officers pro-tem be chosen, and these to get in touch with the president of the Ontario branch of the 30th Century Club in Toronto, who would come and organize the local association. The chairman would give further explanations as that the new clubs were not to be formed by the proper authorities. Pursuant to Mr. Parliament's suggestion and to act along the lines of Toronto, Mr. Lott was elected president and Frank Thayer secretary of the club.

Dr. J. A. Faulkner

Dr. J. A. Faulkner, speaker of the evening next called on, gave an evidently capably thought over address. He had met tonight to deal with serious business, although electious might be near at hand, this was the opportune moment for thorough organization of Liberal Wire offensiveness from the public platform. He spoke on Liberalism, the social life of a community or business. He spoke of the recent meeting in Ottawa of the 400 ardent Liberals being present, and the enthusiasm for the principles of true Liberal party there demonstrated. If the Liberals who stay at home on election days would come to the polls a different result from that of late would be the outcome, and organization in the Liberal ranks would accomplish this. Today the organize is the day after you're licked. The recent municipal elections were indicative of coming change, working from the smaller governing bodies upward and Liberal principles were gaining ground in strong Conservative constituencies. Liberal organization today was to progress along lines of educational campaigning in Liberal ideas and ideals, debating clubs and the holding of meetings where speakers of prominences should be called on topics of general public concern.

One Leader

The Liberal party is behind but one leader and that leader is Mr. Mackenzie King, the Liberals are a leader of the party, followers in the legislature. Our leader has been making statements about the bankruptcy of this province, but what do them and been contradicted. The provincial debt has increased but are not we ourselves to blame? The government in power in Queen's Park, responsible to the supervision of township and county expenditures, how much their councils can borrow and in what manner, and yet when fantastic gathering than that which congregated in the old town hall of Wallbridge, last night.

The officers of the association and various poll chairmen are as follows:

President—J. A. Lott.
1st Vice President—Retha Lloyd.
2nd Vice President — Walter Harder.
Secretary-Treasurer—M. B. Sine.
Poll Chairmen—Sidney Turney, W. Davis; Glen Ross, Percy Sanders, E. Bonisteel; Walbridge, J. McPherson; Wallbridge, Clarence Ford; Avondale, Fred Denyes; Harders, Walter Harder; Stirling, Mrs. McGee.

Free Traders Remain Though Cabinet Split Over Tariff Question

No Resignations Expected By Premier Ramsay Macdonald

PRECEDENT MADE

British Cabinet Unanimous Upon Other Issues

By THOS. T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canadian Press Cable

London, January 23—Less than three months after its appointment the national cabinet finds itself divided over tariffs.

Nevertheless there is no expectation that any of the ministers will resign, as ordinarily happens when one or more ministers become out of harmony with the remainder. Those in dissent will be free to speak and to vote, as opposed to their colleagues who are in the majority.

This was made clear in an official statement after Friday's meeting of the cabinet, which stressed the solidarity of the ministry united on all other matters of policy.

It would be daring to say the position is without precedent in the ordeal even in peace times, but the situation is generally one of the most extraordinary that has arisen since the present constitutional practice was established.

Yesterday the Cabinet sat for four and a half hours; today for two and a half hours. Shortly after the breaking up Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald handed an official communique to the press which said:

"The Cabinet has considered the report of its committee on the building trade and has had considerable discussion it has been found impossible to reach a unanimous conclusion on the committee's recommendations. However, the Cabinet is deeply impressed with the paramount importance of maintaining national unity in the presence of the grave problems which confront this country and the whole world.

"According it has determined that some modification of the usual ministerial practice is required and has decided that the Ministers shall find themselves unable to support the conclusions reached by a majority of their colleagues on the subject of import duties and cognate matters are to be at liberty to express their views by speech and vote. The Cabinet, being essentially united on all other matters of policy, believes that in this special provision it is best interpreting the will of the nation and the needs of the time."

The Cabinet committee which deals with the problem of readjusting the adverse balance of trade consisted of Sir Herbert Samuel, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Secretary for the Colonies; Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary; Viscount Snowden of Ickornshaw, Lord Privy Seal; H. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, and Sir Herbert Samuel, Home Secretary.

Free Traders to Stay

The committee's recommendations regarding tariffs, to the full cabinet, were made by Viscount Snowden, Rt. Hon. Mr. Runciman and Sir Herbert Samuel. Former free traders, were willing to accept the views of the majority, favoring imposition of a 10 per cent duty, to be from 10 to 15 per cent. on manufactured semi-manufactured goods, with establishment of a system of quotas and bounties on certain industries.

Sir H. Mr. Runciman and Sir John were amenable to the views of the two Conservatives, Viscount Snowden and Sir Herbert Samuel, still staunch free traders, were irreconcilable. But when the proposals reached the full cabinet the objections of the latter two were supported by two Liberal cabinet ministers, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Scotland.

MEN TRAPPED IN BLIZZARD

Two Die and One Lives to Tell Story of Hunt

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 23—Snatched from death in a blinding snowstorm just as he was lapsing into unconsciousness, Eugene Dalton revived Friday afternoon and told about the blizzard that swept the coast of Newfoundland Thursday night and claimed the lives of his two companions on a hunting expedition.

Search parties sent out by the department of Fisheries, hunting the little craft anchored off Shag Rocks Thursday morning. In it were Eugene Dalton, worn out from exposure and hunger, and the dead bodies of Mark Dalton and Levi Eddy.

The blizzard blew up without warning and trapped a number of other hunting parties which escaped to land after terrifying experiences. It was accompanied by severe frost and early this morning thermometers registered 30 below zero.

Taking advantage of the fine weather for bird shooting, the Dalton brothers and Eddy set out in their boat Thursday afternoon. Suddenly the wind changed and blew in from the northeast, with blinding snow. Not knowing whither they went, the three moved the boat about until their strength was spent. Darkness shut down, and the temperature dropped. They ran for Shag Rocks but were unable to land. The boat was overturned and they anchored under the rocks to await their fate.

There they sat, practicing every possible method to keep warm, then soaking at each other as ice formed around their boat. Levi Eddy was the first to succumb to the intense cold. Through the long hours of the night the two survivors stared off death, wondering which would be the next to go. Then at 6 o'clock Friday morning Martin Dalton died. Alone now, except for two corpses, Eugene could but philosophize that the steadily falling temperature. He had not expected to see alive his brother died, and he was in a semi-delirious state when rescued by seamen of the fisheries department.

MARMORA GETS NEW INDUSTRY

Manufacturing of Artificial Stone to Be Undertaken

A new industry is just about ready to start operations in the thriving northern village of Marmora. Some years ago marble deposits were found near the Crow River north of the village and two years ago the owner of the property, Benjamin Demas, gave Mr. Tom Potts of the Royal Hotel and Mr. Allan Blakely of Marmora an option on it. This option was turned over to Mr. Blakely who, after a period of quarrying, crushing and shipping it, to be used in artificial stone manufacture.

The Key Stone Co., Ltd., promoted and financed by interests in Belleville, Hamilton and Toronto have now acquired the property and also acquired and taken over the old stone mill at Marmora and are renovating it in preparation to the manufacture of artificial stone there.

It is also rumored that another industry may locate somewhere, and in a hindered line of manufacturing is also to locate at the village.

TERSE TALKS ON TIMELY TOPICS

by Adam Dobb's Little Plumber

Fellow Citizens:

The approach of Washington's Birthday anniversary told a lie reminds me that one thing that county needs and a Good President Hoover will do something about it. That is a good directory of high class liars. Being a politician, he must know most of them. Such a book is a help and a comfort to us all while a fellow requires the services of a liar he can't tell by looking at a man's agent, or something, but where can you find him? If I knew the number you want you can call up an employment agency and get one mighty quick. If it's anything like the call up a bureau and get one, perhaps, that will be somewhat slower, but won't send you a liar, and is too busy to come himself.

There are a lot of good liars in this country, but the trouble is that they are always busy when you're over feet when you don't want them, and never handy when you need them most. If some fellow will get up a book or start a bureau I guess he will make a lot of money. Accomplished liars for instance, could be furnished who accompany husbands home from the poker game, or wives home from the bridge party when words fail you, and this is one of the times. In fact there is hardly a month goes by that I don't use the services of a good liar now and then, or ever could, and from that can do an amateur job, but when a man comes home at 4 a.m. what he needs is the services of a professional.

There are lots of good openings for lots of good liars. Wouldn't it be great when you oversleep if you could have someone fix it at the office before you got there? And when the goods you ordered for a customer failed to arrive, because you forgot to order them, and a mighty fine liar, wouldn't it be nice if someone could take care of the customer for you as a matter of fiction? I hope this letter will catch the eye of some good liar somewhere, although I don't see how it possibly can in the Plumbing and Steamfitting industry. But, if it does, I hope he will write the book, or start the bureau, or both, and then call me up.

The fact is that I have told the truth so long about practical plumbing that I don't know how to tell anything, much. We don't have to lie about our work and products. We might if we had to, but we don't have to.

Truthfully yours,
GARN DOBBS,

PRESERVING RECORDS

Local records of weather conditions do not go back for years beyond human memory second hand. Diaries of weather written in the forties and fifties of last century would today prove interesting for the weather is the most fertile topic, from that of the swain and the lass, to the premier, and the king. The weather is our great canopy, our surrpunding tent which governs us somewhat, and not a little. Someone should keep records of weather and other facts of experience.

Then there should be some means of keeping these records. Nearly a vast amount of lore is going into nothingness as those who could speak fall into silence and decay. Talk in no more of the winter's rages and the balmy breezes of the merry month of May and the doings in the long ago again time plays havoc with old records (where there are records) and these fall into the crumbling maw of the ages.

The time cries for a good historian of this age of transition to preserve its weather which will be of vital value in the days which are to come a century hence, it cries for a novelist to record the manners and language of life in this twentieth century. At least if we cannot have a historian we should possesses a historical society and get some lover and interpreter of the lore about us as Napanee possesses in Mr. W. S. Herrington, to make the past live again in studies of the life of the past all pressed.

Meanwhile let some one keep diaries and let some one start a society.

GROWING THOUGHTFULNESS

Despite new methods of conveyance which have made life hazardous for animals on the road, the dog yet has his champions.

Motorists who do not mind striking a dog and maiming or possibly killing him should read what a Michigan Judge said when a case of damages came before him for the killing of a dog. Hugh King Harris writes in "Our Dumb Animals" that "in justice court at the Woods, Mich., Judge Harry Cresswell, recently held that mankind's best friend, the dog, has the same right in the eyes of the law as consideration from motorists as would a child. His instructions to the jury were so stated.

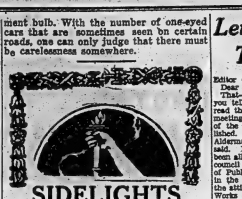
"Such dog and a child are irresponsible, the court ruled, and a motorist who negligently runs down a four-footed beast is liable to the animal's owner for damages under the same principle which would make him guilty of negligent homicide were he to strike and kill a child.

"Thus specifically instructed the jury returned a verdict of $90 and costs against Herman Stein, of that city, who, last summer, ran down a valuable American foxhound, owned b John C. Hankiewicz, while driving a motor car on the main thoroughfare. Defense that the animal was struck by accident was offset by testimony of a motorcycle officer who witnessed the accident. Officer Brown stating Straub purposely ran the animal down, permitting his car to cross in front of the car in the line of the street, although there was no other traffic to cause him to turn out. Three other witnesses testified as to the dog's owner hunting animal. The dog had been trained to draw a small cart, and also to carry the owner's two small children on its back.

There seems a greater tendency towards greater care of animals which are upon the streets and highroads. Motorists today will do their utmost to prevent injury to a dog or cat or other animal even though there might be a chance of their escaping prosecution on a charge of cruelty or escaping a law suit.

There is business sense towards animals and their place seems to be evident.

It seems strange that there once was a day when a careless driver would not think nothing of driving furiously and overrunning a poor animal which happened to get in the way but this is now a rare occurrence. How many drivers there have been seen to turn their cars to avoid injury to the animal creation.



PROTECTING THE PUBLIC

An old car figured recently in a police court prosecution of a young man who had struck a pedestrian fatally with his car. The car had no horn, it was a 1928 model, lights, brakes and steering column were sworn to be defective. The driver was given five months.

Toronto Telegram states that the Department of Highways can issue a licence for anything in the shape of a car. Motorists are asked to enumerate their physical defects but to prevent it all of the condition or the age of the car which he is to drive. That there should be a check-up of old cars is obvious. Decrepit cars should be refused the highways and even the sideroads.

Fortunately there is inspection of cars for brakes, but sometimes this does not take place until after an accident when it is too late to prevent injury.

The number of monocle cars ought to be decidedly reduced. The law is strict that the driver of a car must have a horn built in his possession or that if a light should go out there is at least a replacement bulb. With the number of one-eyed cars that are sometimes seen bn certain roads, one can only judge that there must be a carelessness somewhere.

"I WILL"—A NEW YEAR RESOLVE

I will start afresh this new year with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbour's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear. . . .

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I may tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another gets ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rivals' wealth is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but will try to prove my own;
I will try to find the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach YOUR duty and be more concerned with MINE.

JACK MINER, noted naturalist, and authority on wild birds, Tuesday addressed an audience of about fifty persons in the Collegiate auditorium Wednesday evening, and a Jack Miner meeting-in-Sidelight Fan, asks us to broadcast the fact as a disgrace to Belleville. Just a minute, Jack Miner has been given a greeted by capacity audiences in Belleville, but his coming was always heralded with adequate newspaper publicity. This time there was little or no newspaper advertising in a week when entertainment competition was keen and the result was what might have been expected, deplorable. However, Jack Miner addressed a large audience in the afternoon composed mostly of school pupils, and got over his message where it would do the most good—with the rising generation.

Other Papers' Opinions

EATING ON HALF TIME

At the meeting of the Association of Provincial Proper Housing for Girls it was stated that some girls cannot afford to eat this year. College authorities and certain education clubhouses keep close track of the girls' diets, and if they spend their working or studying time eating they do not nourish themselves, how they get along with each other and with students, the directors know, who try to lead the girls into pleasant and profitable pursuits.

It is easy to find out how much eating time one has in a clubhouse cafeteria. The number of residents and the number of meals supplies are compared from year to year, and for some this has been no great change. But this year, in one cafeteria, less than half the usual number of meals have been served, and the amount spent has decreased even more.

The directors are worried about the girls' health. They cannot afford to eat in such a moderate-priced place, they say, and remain hungry. Certainly they should not starve themselves, but perhaps they have found their own ways of making up the apparent shortage. Cooking at home is considered, but may be forbidden, but if it can be managed it is advised. England has the lowest priced resaurant. —New York Times.

FINDING THE FORMULA

The root fact of the whole situation is that no money is coming just now for the League. Mr. Lloyd George had the option of accepting this situation by consent or refusing to accept it and have it happen anyway. The former would seem the easier course, but it is made practically impossible by the impolency of the Liberal Party and the schism of its pupils, and got over his message where it would do the most good—with the rising generation.

Letters to The Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:
Thanksboy, Alderman Donahue—you tell 'em. It did me good to read the report of the last council meeting last Tuesday. It was one of the best report you have published. It mentioned nearly every Alderman and what they actually said. In the past, the reports have been all too brief. We have a good council this year, the chairmanship of Public Works is the right man in the right place. And I admire the attitude of Ald. Donahue, Public Works chairman, when he affirmed the principle of the elected representatives of the people to have the power to make decisions and act upon them.

FIND CAUSE FOR CURE OF HEADACHES

They Are Symptoms of Disorder and Should Be Studied as Such

(By Lewis E. Risch, M.D., Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Headaches are of various kinds and brought on by various causes. Indeed, one should not look upon headache as a disease by itself, but rather as a symptom of some other disorder elsewhere in the body which produces pain in the head.

Many people suffer not only as to causation but also as to location in the head, duration, intensity and quality. Some headaches are in front of the head, some in the back. Some start on one side and travel to the other. Headaches are also variously described as pounding, burning, aching feelings of tightness, etc.

That many persons are more prone to develop headache than others there can be no question. Even the general nervous disposition of the patient is of prime importance.

Eye-strain that is left uncorrected with proper glasses is a most frequent cause of all sorts of headaches. Even when it may be stated that merely wearing glasses is not enough. The lenses of the glasses must accurately compensate for the defects in the lenses of the eyes. If relief is to be hoped for. Besides, the glasses must be worn as prescribed, not only now and again to suit the whims of the patient.

Constipation is another potent cause of headache. This does not mean that all such cases of self-poisoning, so to speak, will give pain in the head. But many do, and in all cases of headache it is well to keep the digestion and the elimination in the very best of condition.

Organic conditions of severe nature, such as brain tumors and abscesses, etc. may produce the most violent types of headache. In these cases there will always other symptoms present which, all together are sufficient to make a diagnosis.

A cause of headache not generally appreciated, yet frequently present, is mental and emotional disorder. Long hours of hard work, too much ambition, irregularities in the love life, etc. What it usually comes down to is conflict of some sort, repressed ideas, wishes, repressions and the like cause the individual to get into a state of confusion and doubt which puts an extra burden on the mind and gives ache.

Most of the vague headache cases fall within the latter category. Usually the sufferers are high-strung and highly specialized individuals. They may realize that they are in a state of raging within and they may not in any event, far see the cause in the realm of medical psychology.

Migraine or "sick headache" is in a class by itself. Usually the pain is only on one side of the head. Nausea and vomiting are common accompanying symptoms. Video may likewise be affected and the patient see strange sights before the eyes. Blindness may ensue. The attack may spread to the head in general, the back of the head and even into the arms.

Migraine is a most intense condition and often prostrates the patient for days. Even rest in bed does not give relief at times. The slightest noise makes the pain worse. Often the attack disappears as mysteriously as it came.

All migraine patients, as well as headache suffers in general should study their case and bring on an attack. This one might speak of her pain as agitating cause, in distinction to the underlying or basic cause. Avoiding the precipitating cause such as indigestion, for example, will prevent an attack; but for complete cure, whatever the nature of the headache, the underlying cause must always be found and removed.

To teach children proper eating habits be sure meals are regular, that plenty of time is given to avoid hurting the food and care taken to chew the food well. Never give a second helping, or allow the child to refuse a certain article of the diet.

3 Bullets in Head Singer Recovering

Hamilton, Ont., Jan. 22 "Unless complications set in, Anderson will recover," declared Dr. Allin F. Brown, assistant medical superintendent of the hospital, tonight announced today in regard to the shooting of Anderson, well-known local choir singer who was the victim of a murderous attack on a locally road Sunday evening.

For days, Mr. Anderson's fate hung in the balance.

"He was a very lucky man," Dr. Brown continued, "any one of those shots could have caused instant death by deviating only slightly from the course it followed."

The fathers of progress are the children of great experiences.

Poet's Corner

IN AN OLD GARDEN

Lo! here my lady waxed on quiet feet,
Treading the shadowed pathways one by one—
At morning, when the breath of earth was sweet,
At highest noontide, and at set of sun.

Lo! here she walked in gown of silk brocade,
Her light heels tapping as she went her way,
While, even as now, the gentle breeze strayed
From boon to bloom, and toyed the leaves in play.

Who knows, but even still at twilight hour
An old-time fragrance steals upon the air
And mingles with the scent of grass and flower
As, silken-gowned, and very young and fair,

My lady softly comes again in view
The old familiar paths that once she knew.

DEGREE TEAM VISITS TWEED

First Degree Conferred By Thomasburg Monday

Tweed — The Oddfellows Hall at Tweed was comfortably filled on Monday evening when about seventy members of the Order turning out when the Thomasburg Degree Team visited Tweed to confer the First Degree.

Three applications had been received for this degree, two from Tweed and the third from Plainfield.

The visiting Degree Team presented a smart appearance in their full regalia, and their work under the capable direction of their Degree Captain, Irvin Bateman, was a pleasure to watch, and elicited favorable comments from many of those on the side-lines.

Prior to the degree exemplifying this degree by the visiting brethren, the Degree Team of the local lodge under the leadership of Degree Master H. Smith initiated a local applicant into the mysteries of Oddfellowship.

At the conclusion of the degree work lunch was served by the Tweed brethren.

At an early date the Tweed Degree Team will pay a visit to Thomasburg to confer the Second Degree on a number of candidates.

WILL DRILL TO REACH GRANITE

There are many in the town who have asked the question whether they are still drilling for water at the foot of Mount Pelion and the answer to this is that they are. The big drill once again started up at New Years and has been running ever since. At the present time they are going through hard rock formation, called the Grenville series, which generally goes to a depth of some hundreds of feet. However it is estimated that the series doesn't usually approximate that depth in this locality, and it is thought by those who study such things, that the drill will only have to go down about one hundred and more before coming down to the granite. To date they have reached a depth of 615 fee.—Trenton Courier Advocate.

Knowledge Hunters Ascend to Top Rung in Big Six by 3-1 Win in Kingston

Belleville Lose Effective-ness When Ranks Riddled By Injuries

Should Have Won in Last Frame With Two-Man Advantage

Paying two such short practical-ly the entire game through injuries, Belleville intermediates got to be-lieve in the short end of a 3-1 score with Queens on Friday night in the Limestone City. The period scores were 1-1, 2-1 but the score does not indicate the play, the locals having fired as much of the play as the students but the breaks were against them all night. The win put the Knowledge Hunters on the top rung of the Big Six group but it still looks as if the teams will be deadlocked, when the last game is played in the city on February 8, as the locals should take Queens at that time and also win their remaining fixtures. Belle-ville has from now on the break in the schedule and should win every start. If the locals need the win to tie in the last game, it will be one of the biggest hockey attrac-tions ever to be staged in the Quinte city.

A Bruising Contest

The game was a bruising, battling contest, replete with clever poke checking, sweeping rushes and legitimate bodychecking and hair breadth saves all the way through. In all fairness to the winning team, Belleville should have won the con-test in the last two minutes of play, when Queens were riddled with penalties. Only two men were fit-wards on the ice and Belleville four, but over anxiousness on the part of good chances offered. Injuries were prominent in the game and more than one player on the ice. Belle-ville came out of the battle with three on the casualty list and three serious. "Boomer" Holway received a nasty cut over the eye as he was thrown heavily backwards on the ice by "Barney" Reist in the first five minutes of play. He came back into the game in the third period but his visible injury stayed and he was not the "Boomer" of old. Rob Campbell received a bad head with a stake, when falling and he was taken to the Kingston hospi-tal and three stitches were re-quired to close the wound. Archie Campbell was thrown heavily head-ing the dying moments of the pastime and he received a bad bruise on the upper thigh muscle. Alex Weir was brought down on the ice by rushing players and three teeth in front were loosened. Les Tice, who might certainly be called the star on the night, sustained a bad shaking up, when one of his own team mates fell upon him, as he was lying on the ice after clearing the puck. Fortunately, cold, these injuries demoralized the team to a large extent and made it impossible to present a regular front to the opposition at any one time.

No Shooting Star

It was a typical Queens-Belleville game. Nothing startling for the quarter nor received it. Every time either team came down the ice-lanes they were hit hard and often, while bodychecking on the rush from the wing often the rule than not. A feed started early and the climax came in the last period when Squires lost his head, when check-ed by Weir, and threw a punch into action. Cooler heads prevailed but Squires drew a five minute penalty for their short bout. The game was clean considering the fierce attack and counter attack of offenders. Twelve penalties in all were handed out by Referee Mitchell of Hamilton, a first time starter in the district, of which Queens drew seven and five of these came in the last frame, the stu-dents certainly feeling the need of help, rapped everybody over the head with their sticks when the referee was not looking and the sly little trip was held in for good mea-sure. The major stuff was noticed by the referee but the petty stuff be-ing was not seen at all. Probably some day a referee will go into a town and fine all the players for a break and protect them to some ex-tent at least. The work of the game otherwise was good, he, watch-ing the play from where he could up smartly on offsides and loafing.

Checked by Rosters

Les Tice was hastily checked by the rooting section at the game, but took it in good part and is the idol town of Kingston. Every shot that Tice made was hailed with more than three feet in front of the hemp and in two cases he stopped the puck with his defence and took over the rebound or the man tak-ing it. The goal in the second period was a gift as Morris and Weir si-multaneously let off through be-tween them, after he got his shot and Tice had the first part of the puck picked it up to blast it into the hemp as Tice sprawled on the ice. The third goal also came as a gift of a hand. Johnnie Leachman was any-thing but effective and Campbell was too clever for him. Between the two of his shots nearly found the hemp, in fact, Morris scored the one, that was drifted his way not-ing the close of the second period. He stuck out his foot with a prayer on it and accidentally the boot heel and the shaft caught the carom into the corner.

Not so Effective

McKeezin in the early part of the contest had his goal closed, working in centre ice but he did not display the effectiveness that his mon was laxed in this respect-ble. Bob Scott played fair hockey till his ankle went and after that was hardly out of condition. This boy is a find and will be heard from. He is arriva in condition towards the end of the season will be the man to be-ad for some goal tenders. The wings bored their opposition fairly well but there was considerable bunching in centre ice. It was not the fault of the men in the front line passions but the interest crested and the defence gave the centre ice con-cession.

Queens Methodical

Queens is still the methodical plugging team. They have a spien-did defence, a combination that is the lines of almost equal strength with a great goaltender and a star man in particular player. Murphy and Patterson are fair and they are mat-ured there body well, but they cer-tainly do lay on the hickory as every opportunity offers and are supposed-ed to the wing and he looks better than ever. Referee Pridham was not the opposition is difficult but Pat-terson and Murphy had a little mix-ture with Lee and McDowell a close second. Belleville scored the first goal of the game after a fine team effort. Play had been limited from the beginning until Alex Weir car-ried down and hitting the defense he sifted out which bobbed from over the blue line, Morris looking bed on the play. At this time it looked a question of how many, for when Benny is off he is like the cheese in Denmark but the boys did not bore in and he collected him-self and thereafter played a stella-but lucky game.

Score Tied

The score was tied shortly before the period ended, when Patterson took a perfect aimed from Squires and beat Tice. No one was covering Patterson at the time and he made use of the golden opportunity. The second and third goals secured by Queens have been described and in the last frame, Belleville did everything but score. Lack of co-hesion and systematic play spelled their own defeat and on the night's play they were as good a team as the winners. The lineups and sum-mary follow.

Belleville—Goal Tice, defense, Holway, Weir; centre, McKeekin; wings, Campbell and Scott, subs, Morris, Leachman, Hull, Morgan.

WESTERN "STAR PICKER"

Western Canada's premier hockey promoter is through—temporarily, for the second time in two years by W. (Wes.) Champ of Regina has gone the Canadian pacific and scores of some six years standing has been cremated partly owned by Champ, formed the famous Regina Caps to play in the then newly organized Western Canada Hockey League. Four years later a series of reverses forced him to sell the team and the fans turned sour on Champ for his business foresight. Last season, Champ again piloted a winning team and gave Regina another world championship hockey, winning the senior amateur title of the province, but the fans' five years of fidelity to un-wreathed Bronx cheerleaders de-cided Champ against operating any more hockey teams in Regina and Champ is noted as a picker of stars. Eddie Shore of Boston first signed on Champ's Dick Irvin, now of the Toronto Maple Leafs, Art Ross, Lester Patrick, Frank Nighbor and Hugh "Red" McCusker are others that all battled for goals for Champ.

SCHMELING AND SHARKEY SIGN

Fight to be Held in Greater New York Sometime in June

New York, Jan. 23 Chy Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer—Managerial shadow boxing all over, Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey signed articles for a ten round heavyweight championship bout to be held somewhere in Greater New York sometime in June.

One of the high-powered confer-ences among managers, promoters, boxers and lawyers began early last night in the official signing, only a few hours before Schmeling embark-ed for Europe for a short visit to his home in Germany.

The exact date for the bout is to be named within sixty days after the bout has been approved by the Yankee Stadium. The date probably will be June 16. The of-ficial announcement said Schmeling would receive 37½ per cent. and Sharkey 25 per cent. of the gate receipts, the champion's and chal-lenger's purses to be the basis of the New York State Athletic Com-mission.

Although Schmeling signed for the bout, Jack Dempsey, Madison Square Garden obtained an option on the Ger-many's service for one title defence in that arena should he defeat Tom-my Gibbons. This second bout would be held sometime in Septem-ber.

Signing of the contract ends a year long situation in which Schmeling, apparently eager for three title defences this year, seemed unlikely to arrange for even one.

COLONIES WANT BRITISH FILMS

Company Forms to Distribute Such Films to Fill Demand

New York, Jan. 22.—Organized for the purpose of distributing British films throughout British Dominions and colonial possessions the British United Film Producers Company was formed today, says the New York Times in a special cable from Lon-don.

The company contends British films will be demanded in such in-stances never seen in parts of the British Commonwealth, because the distribution of these films by indi-vidual companies is impracticable.

A spokesman for the company, which has the support of the gov-ernment, declared that no one dare nor intention to interfere with ex-isting distribution arrangements or to establish a monopoly of British films throughout the commonwealth.

MANY UPSETS IN BIG SEVEN

Varsity, Kitchener and Marboros Pull Unex-pected Wins

Toronto, Jan. 21 (CP) — Univer-sity of Toronto today took as strong contenders for a play-off berth in the "Big Seven" group of the Ben-O.R.F.U. when they defeated the startling 4-3 triumph over National Sea Flies last night.

While the Blue Varsity squad were strengthening their position Kitchener Greenshirts and Toronto Marlboros pulled a pair of unex-pected victories by downing Wan-derers and Niagara Falls respec-tively.

Tying the score with only a se-cond remaining to play in the final period, and going in front shortly after the third overtime session got under way by scoring twice, the Varsity sextette toppled the league leading National club and now re-main a single game out of fourth place. After a slow first period the game developed into a wide open af-fair and the Varsity squad proved to be the more clever in the fast and Twin City entry well deserved their win. Champ for the latter has now had scored for Kitchener the de-cision was never in doubt. The sec-ond place in the group standing two points behind the Toronto Nationals. Bill Thoms, flashy Marlboro centre, and "Buzz" Boyer, his right-wing partner, each added two points to their scoring records as Mr. Underwood's team counted for the other Duke tallies.

EDDIE RAN IS SMASHED DOWN

Billy Petrolle Wins By Knockout in 6th Round

New York, N.Y., Jan. 26 —Billy Petrolle, doughty, battle-scarred veteran, added a right hook to his heels last night to knock out Sammy Mandell, the lightweight champion of Poland and one of the hardest right-hand punchers in the ring, in the sixth round of one of the fastest battles in local welterweight career.

Billy came in a junior welter-weight, scaling 140½ pounds, to bat-tle the youthful Nan, welterweight champion of Poland and one of the hardest right-hand punchers in the ring.

After flooring the youngster three times in the first round, Petrolle opened up in the second and the first thing he knew Nan was battling a right-hand punch on his chin and driving 17,000, almost a capacity turnout, into frenzies of excitement.

Out of a clear sky in the sixth round, Petrolle shot a right-hand punch from his heels and laid it with all the power of outraged superiority on the chin of the young upstart. Nan crumpled and slumped to floor. Half sitting half lying he listened to the referee on one side of the ring, wearily shaking his head as the referee, Patsy Haley, counted him out.

Golfers' Praise For Canadian Climate

While Pasadena, and other places in California are basking in the sun-shine of their Rose Festivals on New Year's Day, Toronto golfers were playing ex-cept of snow, recently, Belleville golf-ers, including the Belleville Country and perspiration trying to make a hole in one, two or three, as the case may be, and the Belleville Re-cord let it be said that on Janu-ary 7th, the Rose Bowl day, the holders of Scotland's grandest game, were Messrs. It's a long, a nice day, all were keen on their golf, and as the old time journalist would say "a good time was had by all."

Ancient history sometimes brings out surprises. It was just 39 years ago this week that Bill Beckwith Belleville's second hey team journeyed to Peter-boro to return home with the short end of a 1 score. Captain Park of the "Peter-borgers" was then in his prime in the hour's pastime. The Belle-ville line-up included Ledger (cal); Wallace, point; Connolly, cover point; Grover, rover; Sym-ons (Sammy) centre; Ford and Beckwith, wings. Harry Dra-peau relieved the contest. Sam Symons returned home quite well balanced up as he was the recipient of a nasty cut on the face.

But on the other hand Belle-ville had a good junior team that year for the last game week the juniors defeated Picton Jun-iors 8 to 6.

They are even man hockey and two periods of thirty minutes each, no subs were used and it was a case of every man for himself. Bert Ford and Art Scott was manager of the juniors then. That was the first season of hockey after the rink was moved to its site on Turnbull Street.

Belleville's junior team in-cluded Frank Fitzgerald, goal, Ted Whalen, point; Harry Mc-cover point; Bill Wallace, rover; Ted Whalen, centre; "Peanuts" Wilson, Bill Finkle and Gunter were the wing men. Good enough. We wonder how that team would stack up against the present team for speed? This is a question which the old-timers would like to answer.

Two volleyball teams from Picton afternoon and evening in the city of volleyball games at the Y.M. C.A. tonight. Both teams are made up of business men from the two cities.

Coach Thompson introduced a new player into the game on Thursday night, in the person of Jimmie Hall, Belleville's star football player. Jimmie made quite a hit with the fans on the floor, as they realized it was his first game but they soon got altogether acquainted with the other players and their methods of attack. Jimmie showed that he has nice goals and filled Nich-ols shoes in good style. He is laid up at present but will be back in the line up next week.

It was definitely decided last evening that all games in the Juvenile and Junior series will be played in the Belleville Arena this year. The players will therefore have to wait until there is some-thing doing.

Every Ki-J league player must fill out a certificate and registration card on or before Monday, January 25th, or the team retry will be cancelled. The schedule will not include teams that have complied with the rules governing the Ki-J executive. All teams are warn-ed to be present at the next games on short notice as the schedule will be arranged for Tuesday. Mr. J. Shortt will issue all information, certifi-cates and registration cards at the Y.M.C.A.

Although the local intermedi-ate championship is not a matter of the season last night at Campbellford, they were de-cissed by any means. The Green's boys were there the goods" throughout the entire sixty minutes. The homesters hit the goals with ev-erything except the goal posts. But when they got in the vi-cinity of two more players from Dean Gordon and Ted Wilson should have organized them-selves into a line, for they at-least tied the score. Instead they acted as rovers and Reagh More with the result that no scoring was in evidence.

Les Tice again displayed his wares last night and was the outstanding player of the night. If his last night's form had given Tice any protection on the sec-ond goal Campbellford would have barged his way through to help himself to an easy counter. Tice has been a star for a long time and he has been another story to tell. But now we are assured of a big battle when Queen's come to Belleville next month.

MADOC WINS FROM TWEED IN OVERTIME

20 Minutes Overtime Re-quired to Defeat Visitors

PLAY GOOD

Henderson and Watson Stars For Winning Combination

After battling for eighty minutes the Madoc hockey team emerged vic-tors over the Tweed pocksters by the score of 2 to 1 last night. The game which was played at Tweed was of a clean nature only a few penalties be-ing meted out by Referee Les Bar-rett.

Although the Tweed team opened the scoring and held the lead for the greater part of the game, they fal-led to clip many moments only to see the game slip from their grasp. The Gerald boys, all members of the town-ship team, were the mainstays of their local heady game while Clarke and Boyd also gave the fans plenty of action.

The Madoc, Watson and Hender-son, are the village heros this morning as they combined through the entire game, Watson scoring the win-ning goal after sixty-five minutes of strenuous hockey. Besides the fa-vorites did manage to pull a win out of the game at last minute but they were, as a matter of fact, quite lucky to pull out on the win. Fred Wil-son, Madoc is the nets for the Madoc team, was practically invincible as he has time and time again come to the save his team from ultimate defeat.

Madoc scored the first goal by bom-bardingMcGee at will but soon the Tweed team settled down and were in play into the Madoc territory. Hen-derson and Watson combined nicely, but the latter failed to register. The Tweed team also tested Wilson but the Madoc goalie was just too clever for them and remained unbeaten by Hulin each time. The period ended, Tweed 1, Madoc 0.

Both teams opened the period re-testing Hulin from the face-off. Gerald Gerald also tested Hulin but the Madoc goalie was just too clever for them and remained unbeaten by Hulin each time. The period ended, Tweed 1, Madoc 0.

With the opening of the final frame Madoc had it all over the play and pressed hard on the Tweed half of the rink until Hen-derson received the pretty pass to tie the score 1 to 1. Again and again the Madoc forwards tore in on Mc-Gee to bring him to his knees but the lad stayed off defeat, for the time being, by his clever work-ing. Just as the period ended Hen-derson and Watson worked nicely only to miss an open net when Hulin came out to meet them.

The first overtime period saw no scoring although the Tweed boys had the better of the play. In fact about four minutes of the sec-ond overtime period elapsed be-fore he was rebound to eventually give the victory for Madoc by the score of 2 to 1.

CONFISCATION

Urges That No Further Public Land Be "Alienated"

Edmonton, Jan. 23.—Public owner-ship of land is favored by the United Farmers of Alberta, Condemning the land policy adopted at the last ses-sion of the Alberta Legislature on the instigation of the United Farmer Government, the association at its convention here declared no more public land should be alienated eith-er by homestead or sale, but should be let on long-term leases for actual users.

While the confiscation or purchase of land now privately owned was not asked, speakers on the question de-clared the ultimate object of their policy was the ownership of all land by the State.

Complete revision of the monetary and credit system of the country was demanded. Members of the U.F.A. group in the House of Com-mons were urged to continue their battle for credit reform.

The public ownership of land, it was declared, would prevent specula-tion and immediate benefits from fair labor and involve no outlay of capi-tal. It would also retain for the people the "socialized unearned value which they had developed."

Economy is Developing Generation Good Cooks

If the poor old over-worked dear husband has nothing but thrift, it's been worth while. But it has really done much more for the nation. It has developed a generation of good cooks, new deliverers of votes. A "good cook" not only makes up delicious meals but gets full value for every precious copper she spends.

Very few housewives consider fuel costs in planning their meal. Grand mother, living the hungry mouthed kitchen stove did. She counted, not only the sticks of wood but the back aches that went into procuring them. So the modern housewife, with her gas and electric stove, should consider fuel headaches that go into the business of paying for these services.

It is frightfully extravagant to bake part of the meal and boil the remainder. The fuel that heats the oven should be utilized and all the space taken up with dishes for the meal. This means that one and one half hour's fuel used for a meal of meat will also cook the remainder of the meal, as a vast number of vegetables and puddings can be placed in the oven when the heat is reduced after searing.

An excellent combination for an oven dinner, giving a well balanced meal, is baked beef, scalloped potatoes, baked shredded cabbage, and chocolate souffle, scalloped potatoes of heat.

THE LITTLE TIN BOX

There was an officeholder with a little tin box,
Who only took the wages appertaining to his place;
He never heard the wherewithal to speculate in stocks,
So he hadn't any money in his little tin box.

Another officeholder with a different view of things
Was fairly up to the knuckles in the rackets and the rings;
He pulled in a million and six thousand and six tin box.

But he'd never lost some money in his little tin box.

No funds that he could handle gashered dust upon the shelf;
His kept their top and kept their earning interest for himself.
Said he, "If Opportunity is answered when she knocks, You'll always have some money in your little tin box."

"And if you pay attention to the proper ways to please,
And all the other chances for emoluments and fees,
The contracts and the buildings and the ferries and the docks,
You'll have a lot of money in your little tin box!"

Valuable Relics In Quebec Church

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian Press)—Two silver statuettes, one representing the Blessed Virgin and her child and the other St. Joseph in the Church of Notre Dame de la Jeune Loretta, near Quebec, are valuable relics, according to Abbe Arthur Professor Ramsay Traquair, of McGill University, who says: "The statuettes are valuable both historically and from the most interesting artistic point of view. They are regarded and preserved as precious national relics."

The present church at Jeune Loretta was built in 1730, but contains relics which date back to 1670, when brought from the original Jesuit-Huron mission on the Georgian Bay. The treasury contains some fine pieces of old silver work, one of the most important of which is a monstrance of the year 1664. Some embroideries of the late 17th century, owned by the church, were traditionally made and given to it by Madame de Maintenon and her ladies, but it is doubted whether any of almost certainly have been made in Canada.

WILL RETAIN RURAL BEAUTY

British Government Considers Bill to Enhance Countryside Beauty

London — The government issued a new town and country planning bill recently calling for permanent guarantees that the beauty of the English countryside shall be protected against the spread of dingy and poorly planned residential cities.

The bill-is designed chiefly to control industrial building in the famous rural lands of South England. To protect places of historic interest and to maintain the attractiveness of the region.

In addition it would improve or abolish slum districts and aid in providing playgrounds for owners of the army of 2,500,000 jobless.

The new bill introduced in the House of Commons prior to publication by Minister of Health, Sir Hilton Young, widens the 1925 act to include provisions for the protection of areas which already have been built up by growth of industrials projects.

It authorizes compulsory purchase of property and provides for owners to be charged for property improvements. A more extensive extension of crown lands in the improvement scheme, with the government paying the cost, also is authorized, but it does not provide for any direct financial aid to local communities making changes.

The powers of local authorities, particularly in the south, has been increased by the recent rush of American and other foreign manufacturers to establish plants in England because of the expected erection of tariff walls. A determined effort will be made by the Government to prevent the disfigurement of the countryside by factory industrial towns, as has occurred in the north and south, it declared.

Already 42% local communities have started work on a building development which will involve some 7,075,000 houses, mostly factories. The attractive homes for workers are springing up in many sections to relieve the congestion in the old factory centres.

The London area many important and new towns are being built. Here, in a current report, the figures giving work to 120,000 persons have been built on the edge of London, necessitating tremendous changes of housing and transportation facilities.

The present bill replaces the former Labor Government measure, which was dropped last summer. The act of 1925 applies to 61 urban centres of over 20,000 prepare and submit a town planning scheme by 1929.

Correct Manners

Personal Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: Is it ever correct to send a thank-you card to a firm thanking them for a wedding gift?

Yes, and those days just as proper as a personal "thank you" letter.

There are very few things in the social world that are in worse form than ready-made thank-you cards. They should never be used if one have any claims to being well-bred or well informed at a wedding. It is always present that the bride-to-be receives, should write a personal or a personal note that she herself writes. And, if she does it really correctly, she will write each one a note for each present that has been received from that person. Then after her wedding trip, she will have all of her note writing done.

Greeting the Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: Kindly advise me whether it is correct for a patient or client of a physician, attorney, or banker, to greet him after having consulted him at his office or place of business, with the following: "Good afternoon, Dr. (or Mr.), how are you today?" K.

If the relationship is as casual as Emily Post would suggest, it is best to better form for the patient or client to say the more conventional "How do you do, Doctor (Banker, Mr.)" or "Good afternoon, Mr. Maltby".

Remember that a title is after the title of doctor, we should add the name.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers).

DON'T BITE LIPS

CHICAGO, Jan. 23—(AP)—Warn ing that biting the lips, which, especially in men, might cause cancer, was given today by Dr. Arthur W. Waldron of Minneapolis, in addressing the Chicago Dermatological Society.

Five thousand deaths annually occurred in this country from cancer of the mouth, Dr. Waldron said, he estimated, adding that a large number could be prevented by keeping the mouth healthy.

Cancer of the lip might occur in young persons, he said, and it was 13 times more common in the lower lip than the upper and affected men 14 times more often than women.

Bit O' the Brogue

by Elizabeth Moore Joyce

Probably if the good-looking young postman had not had a touch of the brogue Miss Courtney's new school would not have given him a second thought. Nora would have had followers enough what with her rosy cheeks and the glint of red in her wavy-brown hair, to say nothing of her Irish blue eyes. But Nora was "choosey", she was also a trifle homesick for the old country she had lately left.

"Any mail this morning, Nora?" Miss Courtney inquired.

"Just a circular, Miss Courtney.

"When I was young like you, Nora," Miss Courtney went on, "there was no lack of letters. Invitations, notes from girl friends, love letters, too. Now, nothing."

"Too bad, Miss Courtney," symathized Nora, "and you after being so sweet a young thing to please." sighed Miss Courtney. "Don't be like me, Nora."

For days at a time the postman did not stop at the Courtney home. On the rare occasions that he did stop with his dreary circular, and perhaps a remark that it was "a foine day", the whole day was brighter for even if a trifle downstorm came up later on.

Overlong day a letter from Ireland came for Nora. Her blue eyes danced and the young mail man smiled sympathetically.

"From me father in the old country," Nora explained, and a bit of shamrock in it for luck, I'm sure. Maybe they're after wantin' me to come back."

"But you won't be goin' back—I hope?"

Nora smiled. "I may. Its lonesome here."

"Too bad. I'm sorry," he said as if he meant it and, for the rest of the day Miss Courtney caught snatches of "The River Shannon" in the kitchen wailing for the postman.

Several days later, another circular came for Miss Courtney. Then for a week no letters for Nora. Nora sighed and frowned. Every day she laughed once right.

Early Monday morning a letter came for Nora. The handwriting was certainly not feminine but its postmark was that "dear old" heart. There was no mail but a engraved card for Miss Courtney.

The following Monday another letter with the same masculine writing came for Nora. She was evidently expecting it and was on the watch waiting for the postman.

"Then the boy friend," he said as he handed Nora the letter. "The lucky boy friend."

Every day morning after that brought Nora a letter, all in bold masculine handwriting. Every Monday Nora was waiting for it and as the weeks went by, the young mail man noted that Nora's less cheerful as he delivered it. But Miss Courtney was happier and brighter. He was jealous. There was no doubt about it.

One morning, however, the old smile was back on his face and Nora's eyes were dancing. Therefore she saw him.

"Then the boy friend," he laughed. "Never forgets you, does he?" He had evidently erased the day Miss Courtney heard no singing from Nora that day.

It was the next Thursday morning that Nora's letter brought Nora another letter, one she was not expecting.

"Here's the job, the lucky boy friend," he said cheerfully as he handed Nora the letter.

The handwriting was similar to the regular letters and Nora tore it open eagerly.

"The top o' the morning-to you," it began, "I'll not be able to be after taking a little trip to the park with you this morning with a bit of supper afterward? It's your day off, I'm thinking. I'll be waiting for you this morning by the mail box at the corner where you pick up the letters every morning. I'm longing for a chat with some one from the old country.

Yours,

"Patrick O'Dunne."

Patrick O'Dunne, indeed! who could he be? Curiosity and loneliness overcame Nora and at noon o'clock Nora slowly approached the mail box. Who should be standing there, large as life, but the postman.

"Then and are you after being Patrick O'Dunne?" asked Nora, her face aglow with blushes.

"Sure I am," he answered, his eyes twinkling merrily. "I thought the new girl friend would be minding" if we went to the park together."

"I know he won't, because there isn't any other boy friend," confessed Nora.

"Don't I know it!" laughed Patrick. "Several Sundays I've happened to see you mailin' a letter at this box. I confess I was pretty jealous for awhile. But the last letter you didn't seal and a blank piece of Miss Courtney's best Stationery, letter head and all, dropped out. So I took heart and wrote to you myself. Shall we be goin' to the park, now that you know all?"

"Sure, we shall," laughed Nora gaily. "Now that you know all, too."

THE END

The Beauty Box

When the beauty supplicants line up at the waiting wall, those who holler loudest and longest are the ones who are afflicted with oily hair and shimmering complexions, these two pulchritude griefs going hand in hand as they do. Often these babies need is a corrected diet, less butter on the bread, no rich sauces or gravies, no fat meats or pastries. The sebaceous glands have too much to do, are less likely to rage and spout, if the diet includes plenty of green salads, raw vegetables, fruit toast, milk and fruit juices. A simple and inexpensive method of shaving and shetting the over-worked glands that attach a beet red face give a temporary dull finish to the high-lighted beaming nose.

Nose has decided color definitely, on the short bob. Not the shingle, mind you, but the short bob—only a few inches below the hair line. And that's why there's no time these days to play with bams or pigtoons, women are too busy, doing things, going places, and looking. And what does a roll of hair from the nape of the neck look like? Uncurled upward or under; or laid in sculptured waves? And the only ways that nest inward sweep just about the ears.

Elbows don't get a look-in at the beauty feast. The skin surface is coarse from over-exposure to cold. Scrub with soap and water and a brush, then dry and massage well, rubbing in well. Atop the cream put powder which doesn't light with the palms or hands for five minutes. Remove with warm water, dry and finish with warm water, dry and finish with cold.

Five minutes of setting up exercises before an open window directly one arises in the morning will do wonders toward clearing and beautifying the complexion, because it stimulates the lungs, stimulates circulation, puts the blood where is the body'in order. Try it and say I told you so.

Take a look at your toes. If they bubble together, shoes are too narrow. Get a pair of wide sports shoes and give the poor little pigs a chance to sprawl.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Paddy and Mrs. Paddy Are Anxious

By Thornton W. Burgess

'Tis those who for the worst prepare,
Who in the end the best will fare.
—Paddy the Beaver.

In this matter Mrs. Paddy agrees with Paddy. They always have agreed in perparedness. That is why they always lay in a plentiful supply of food in the autumn and carefully and frequently inspect their dam to make sure that it is not leak in any place. Then when their pond freezes over they know that no matter how hard the winter may be they will not suffer for lack of food, and no matter how bad the spring freshs may be that a chance of a break in their dam is small.

When Old Man Coyote started down the Laughing Brook, as if going to see if Little Joe Otter was playing on his slippery slide, Paddy made straight home. Mrs. Paddy awoke as he entered and the knew at once that Paddy brought disturbing news.

"What is it, my dear?" she asked as she saw Old Man Coyote and he told me that Little Joe Otter has not been seen since he left Laughing Brook, where the water is frozen solid. There's no time these days to play with bams or pigtoons, women are too busy, doing things, going places, and looking. And what does a roll of hair from the nape of the neck look like? Uncurled upward or under; or laid in sculptured waves? And the only ways that nest inward sweep just about the ears.

Elbows don't get a look-in at the beauty feast. The skin surface is coarse from over-exposure to cold. Scrub with soap and water and a brush, then dry and massage well, rubbing in well. The shipment of American electrical equipment to Russia has increased greatly in the last year.

"What is it, my dear?" she asked.

"I should hope so," said Mrs. Paddy.

"So," continued Paddy, "we must never give him a chance to get either of us alone. We'll keep together. When we are here in the house one will keep awake while the other sleeps. When we want food we'll go out together for it. When there are bare sticks to be added to the dam we'll take them there together. I would feel better if I knew just how little Joe Otter has fared during the bad times every one but us appears to be complaining about."

"Don't you think that there are more fish than usual in the pond?" asked Mrs. Paddy.

"I haven't noticed. What if there are?" replied Paddy.

"Little Joe would rather have fish than anything else, and as long as the fishing is good he isn't likely to bother us, is he?" said Mrs. Paddy.

Paddy's eyes brightened. "That is true, my dear. I hadn't thought of it," he replied. "The snow and ice may have made hard times all through the Green Forest, but it doesn't mean that there are not as many fish. Little Joe will keep for the best and meanwhile we will be prepared for the worst."

WOMEN PAY BETTER

An analysis of the accounts charged to profit and loss in 1930 by fifty-four stores in a Southwestern department store group, the accounts charged off, 66.4 per cent. were accounts of women, and 33.6 per cent. were accounts of women; and 62.1 per cent. were married, while 37.9 per cent. were single.

LIBRARY CORNER

The adventures of an Irish writer, and English photographer, a Russian tiger-hunter, and a Salvation Army lassie in the remote jungles of eastern Bolivia make up the contents of "Green Hell" by Alfred Mathews. "Green Hell", the chief hazards of the adventurers were encounters with wild animals as one would imagine, but insects and lack of water. A more surprise was in store for them however, when it was attacked by Indians from the forest. Her Excellency Marquess de Merry del Val, Lady Canada, wife of Sir Malcolm Ramsay the King of Spain to the court of St. James in 1913, introduced the book speaks first to the author and then to the reader: "To write a book is like trying to make love to another. You in "Green Hell" have reached the unsurpassable. We simply live your life with you." A book for MEN, by all ages, the seventeen ill describes thrill and shiver the more because true." This book will be enjoyed both for its vivid description and its humourous style.

Turning from one extreme of climate to another the reader may find himself in the north in the Barren Lands of Canada, the last of the great unexplored areas on the continent. Here two gentlemen adventurers John Hornby "Hermit of the Arctic" and Critchell-Bullock, a young Bengal Lancer risked their lives to have the privilege of being the first white men to live off the country in the winter year supported only by their rifles. "Lone man" by Malcolm Waldron is the story of his mad test of endurance which ended fatally for one of his members. The narrative is a tense one and holds the reader to the last to the end.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

Minerva Chapter Welcomes Visitors From Afar

Installation of officers of Minerva Chapter No. 138, Order of the Eastern Star, took place last evening in the chapter room, Moose Auditorium.

The hall was all too small to accommodate the large gathering of members and visitors who were present in large numbers from the local star chapter, the district and all parts of Ontario and various United States Chapters. The auditorium was beautifully decorated with the colors of the order, white flowers in profusion, floor lamps with their vari-colored shades and lights. The beautiful dresses worn by the women added in making this one of the outstandingly pretty and brilliant evenings in Eastern Star history in Belleville.

The beautiful and impressive installation ceremony was in charge of Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Anna Boyd, of Belleville, who was assisting for the evening were: Mr. T. Hallman, as Grand Patron; Miss Ella Bleecker as Grand Chaplain; Mrs. Rodney Wilson as Grand Marshall; Mrs. J. Hibbard as Grand Organist; Miss Caldwell as Grand Warder; and W. Whiteman as Grand Sentinel; also taking part in the ceremony were Mrs. Ethel Morgan of Wooler, Grand Sentinel; Mrs. C. McGuire, Madoc, and Morgan, Mrs. W. D. Embury and others.

The Grand Matron and her efficient staff were warmly commended on the impressive and dignified manner in which the work was carried out.

It was an unique occasion indeed when Miss Shirley Rainbird and Mr. Walter Bell, Jr., were united with the highest office in the gift of the members, in that day, Miss Rainbird, father of the Worthy Matron, and Mr. Bell, father of the one installed his own daughter, in the Matron's chair. Each part of the work was very impressive and at the conclusion he presented her with a corsage bouquet of roses from her mother and himself. Mrs. Rainbird, Worthy Matron, Minerva Chapter, No. 55, had the honor of installing her husband, W. D. Embury into the office of Worthy Patron. The Worthy Matron's mother, who was also honored in that she was escorted to the East and the West, had the same mark of honor at the right of her daughter.

The retiring Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Robert Andrews, before the installation and investiture, extended a hearty welcome to all and thanked the officers and members for their kind support during the year and bespoke a continuance of that co-operation to the newly elected. A gavel was presented with a Past Officers' Jewel to Worthy Matron Rainbird, made.

The Grand Matron, Mrs. Boyd, and her Grand Marshall and Grand Chaplain were then presented with gifts from the chapter, as a memento of their visit, as also were the retiring principal officers, chief among which was a beautiful dinner wagon presented to the retiring matron by the members of the chapter, to which feature the table is made.

A feature of the evening also was the musical program by Mrs. Cliff Kinnear and Dr. McQuaid of Trenton. Mrs. Kinnear rendered the musicians on behalf of those present and presented each with a small gift from the chapter. The accompanists were Mrs. (Dr.) McQuaid and Mrs. Joss.

Refreshments or an elaborate nature were served at the close of the installation ceremony, and a social hour spent by the happy throng. Mrs. Biggs and her able staff of waiters and waitresses are to be accredit in seeing that everyone in the hall had plenty of the good things to eat.

Dancing to music supplied by the Minerva Chapter orchestra, continued to a close an evening long to be remembered by those who had the fortunate enough to attend such an outstanding affair as last night's.

At The Belle

"FRANKENSTEIN" AND MARIE DRESSLER IN "EMMA" COMING

Manager Forhan of the Belle is jubilant regarding the Feature Film Bookings, to be exhibited during the February Festival-month at the popular Playhouse.

Commencing with William Powell and Evelyn Brent in "High Pressure," the following attractions are announced: Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in thei! latest vehicle, "Emma," Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery in "Private Lives". The greatest thriller since the invention of the Talking picture screen, "Frankenstein". William Boyd, Robert Armstrong and Jimmie Gleason in "The Cohens and The Kellys". Worthy Buck Jones and Shannon in "The Reckless Age," return of the greatest picture of all time "Ben Hur," not a picture but the thrills in its new synchronized form. Jackie Coogan in "Sooky," Phillips Holmes and Marion Hopkins in "Two Kinds of Women," Alfred Lunt and Lynne Fontanne in "The Guardsman" and William Boyd in "The Big Gamble."

BANKHEAD AND PICCOLI CO-STAR IN "THE CHEAT"

Manager Forhan of the Belle announced he arranged to provide each lady and gentleman attending Monday evening with a gift. As usual each lady will receive a beautiful rose keepsake gift. Commemorating the Bobbie Burns Anniversary, Monday, January 25th, he has decided a fitting gift to be a bottle of Scotch," which each gentleman will receive as he enters the theatre, from a son of The Land Of the Heather, saying the gift.

The new and absorbing Paramount drama, "The Cheat," featuring the international favorite Tallulah Bankhead, comes to the Belle Monday for two days, matinee daily.

Sharing acting honors with the celebrated Tallulah is Irving Piccoli, the distinguished character actor who has recently scored so favorably his the military presenting attorney in Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy".

"The Cheat" is one of the most interesting stories on the screen in some time. It is the drama of a woman's struggle to keep her deep love for her husband, entirely from a strange past with another man; a man who plots to ruin her by his power. How this woman finally attains freedom and herself from the sinisters influence of the other man, without telling her husband of her unfortunate predicament, is unbroken vitality to the vivid, fascinating story of "The Cheat." There is a climax of compelling power and great beauty.

In the role of the woman who "should have committed suicide but in so doing, jeopardizes her life and her happiness of her husband, Tallulah Bankhead comes into her own. It is a role which Miss Bankhead interprets with deep understanding and sympathy. This role should firmly establish her as one of the screen's foremost players. And Irving Piccoli as the man who menaces her life is superbly cast, gran-

In keeping with the Burns Anniversary, Sir Harry Lauder is appearing on the program singing perhaps his most popular hit, "I Love a Lassie." The Fox Movietone Daphne Pollard, the half-pint comedienne is featured in her new comedy "Sold At Auction." "Strange as it Seems," with its gift of entertaining and interesting freaks of nature, completes the program.

At The Capitol

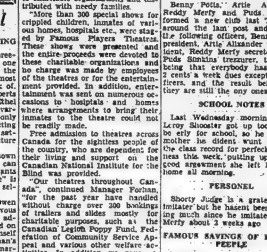
"WHOOPEE" HAS EVERYTHING

"Whoopee" which opens a three-day run at the Capitol today is one of those pictures which give the public its money's worth in almost any direction you want to think of. Hilarious comedy from such experts as Eddie Cantor, the star, and Ethel Merman, tuneful songs of every variety, beautiful girls galore as only Ziegfeld can place them, an affecting love-story, and a general air of settled happiness make it a picture in a million.

Samuel Goldwyn has here shown that the talking color screen can out-do the stage whenever it wants to take the trouble. Moreover, a rich treat of a sort which is seldom seen.

The story, taken from Owen Davis' stage play "The Nervous Wreck" is concerned with the adventures of an immune invalid and a western ranch who finds himself called on to rescue the ranchman's daughter from an undesirable marriage. After turning he-man and doing a satisfactory job of getting her married to her real love, he finds himself in the hands of the domineering nurse who wants to marry him; but he has been anything but an invalid for a few days and refused to think himself one any longer.

This plot, with Eddie Cantor as the hypochondriac invalid, offers a million opportunities, nops of which are missed. Both in comedy and in spectacle, of which the "Invocation to the Sun" scene is the end is the most striking, "Whoopee" leaves nothing to be desired.



The role of the heroine is taken by beautiful Eleanor Hunt, Samuel Goldwyn's latest discovery. The red-haired loveliness and appeal make her ideal for the part. Chief of the beauties who adorn the spectacular scenes is Dorothy Knapp, never more deserving of her stage title of "the most beautiful girl in the world." Chief Caupolican's performance as the Indian Medicine Man turns out to be a perfectly good white man in the end is excellent. Busby Berkeley, as dance director, sets the action at top pitch and has made the spectacular scenes memorable in motion picture history.

"Whoopee" is one of those things that no lover of sheer entertainment can afford to miss.

Says Amalgamation Not Dead Issue

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 23.—Amalgamation of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways "is not dead issue so far as the Conservative Party is concerned," in the opinion of Hon. George P. Graham, Liberal M.P. for West Lambton. Addressing a Liberal rally here last night, he said "We will hear more of amalgamation at the next session of parliament."

"Prime Minister R. B. Bennett stands by his pledge to carry out his promise made at Winnipeg; 'condition ever, amalgamation never,' declared Mr. Gray.

Referring to charges of the Canadian publicly-owned railway system, he blamed the Government in large measure the difficulties it is in with both the railroads of the Dominion and Government.

"Mr. Bennett," he said, "has not yet realized that the International Trade cannot be built up on a one-way street. Until trade flows freely there can be no good flow into the coffers of the railways."

Forgetfulness By Driver is Costly

Hamilton, Jan. 23.—An instance of how closely motorists are checked by Hamilton police was given today in court when Mabin Gordon of Dundas was fined $25 for having given false information to A. P. Whitney Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

Inspector Whitney swore that Gordon was asked to look at his operator's license he made a declaration. Later on he was involved in an accident. But a subsequent scrutiny of records disclosed that Mabin was involved in a traffic accident in St. Louis, Mo., four years ago and paid a fine of $75 upon being convicted of reckless driving.

OPERATION NOT YET PERFORMED

Mother Anxious to Have Operation Performed Upon Child

New York, Jan. 23—Surgeons at the Neurological Hospital were non committal yesterday on reports that they are preparing to operate on a 13-month-old baby girl, whose mother insists surgery be performed properly unless surgical aid is given.

The child is Diane Moore, daughter of Mrs. Mary Moore, and the babe's mother has urged doctors to perform the operation rather than let Dine live as a mental defective.

Though reports said that surgeons felt they could enlarge the brain structure to prevent it seemed that it would aid the normal development of the baby's brain, most of the doctors involved would be quoted tonight.

Mrs. Moore though agonized at the prospect of the operation, expressed more utmost willingness for it tonight.

"Even though there is only one chance in a thousand," she said, "I am willing to have the operation performed. Therefore happens, Dine cannot lose. There is no life before her if the operation is to be subnormal. I'm willing to take the chance that she will be normal after the operation."

The child's skull did not expand properly after birth and the baby has not had a chance to grow properly.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

When Crooked Bill had the contract safely tucked in his pocket he commenced talking with Don Prudencio about the deceased Don Antonio, and learned that for a few days following Antrim's death the sheep had remained in charge of one Bill Dingle, Antrim's foreman. Later Dingle had been rather forcibly relieved of his charge by Jaime Higuenes, of the Rancho Valle Verde.

"That Dingle might be a good executioner sheriff to cause for the sheep in case the court agrees the sale," Crooked Bill suggested hopefully, "Where might one get in touch with him?"

Don Prudencio gave him minute directions for finding Mr. Dingle, and with a heart beating high with hope Crooked Bill took his departure.

"I'll sell the dog-gasted sheep to Dingle, and take a chattel mortgage on them if he hasn't got enough money to pay for them—and I dare say he hasn't," the old schemer decided. "Of course I'm bound to lose some money, but then I expected that, and I can pay for my fancies. Well, tomorrow I'll hire a car and driver and his me out to saw those sheep off on Bill Dingle. I'll give that geese thief a bargain but naturally won't have the heart to refuse. Then I'll get an airplane to freight me back home in a hurry, because I mustn't waste any time with that Higuenes bird always on the job. Once home, I'll wire Roberta I'm very ill and to come home immediately. After that —the Deluge."

Twenty-Fifth Instalment

For a long time after Crooked Bill had left his office Don Prudencio Alviso sat in his swivel-chair and stared hard at the opposite wall. Presently he took down the telephone and called the proprietor of the Mansion House, and with him held a conversation in Spanish. Then he hung up and waited. Presently the telephone rang and Don Prudencio answered "Diablo", Mr. hung up and wrote on a scratch pad the initials W.B.L. Thereafter he continued to stare at the wall for another hour. About sunset he took his large black head in negation and defeat and went home.

The following night he appeared at the Rancho Valle Verde, Roberta was dressing for dinner, after a day in the saddle with Don Jaime and his men, and Don Jaime was lying in his long chair on the gallery, with Ken Hobart beside him.

"Hello Prudy, what brings you out?" Don Jaime hailed him.

"I am mystified," Don Prudencio replied, and forthwith related in detail his impending sale of Antrim sheep to a fat-headed old gentleman for a great deal more than they were worth. "He said his name was Blodgett, and signed the contract William L. Blodgett, the lawyer continued. "He did not say where he was from, but I could see he knew nothing of sheep and was a city man. His eyes were soft and white and his shirt was too expensive. He did not bargain with me and he seemed to me to be quite too anxious to buy the sheep. So I telephoned to the Mansion House to inquire if he was stopping there and when I described him they said they had a guest there from New York by that name, but that his baggage carried the initials W.B.L. "Hum-m-m!" Don Jaime grunted and sat up very straight. "He isn't a very good liar, is he? Any fool in this country would have known better than to leave a trail like that. What does W.B.L. of New York want of the Antrim sheep, and why should he pay such a high price for them? This is indeed very mysterious, Prudy. Did he deposit the ten thousand?"

"He did. It was telegraphed from New York."

"I wonder what the old idiot is going to do with those sheep?"

"I imagine he'll turn it all Bill Dingle to care for them for him."

"Not on my ranch. Within a minute those sheep pass out of possession of the estate of Thomas Antrim, deceased, they're going to get over there'll be a fight or a footrace."

"Do you suppose Miss Antrim will agree to sell the sheep, my friend?" Don Prudencio queried.

"Sell them? Of course, she'll sell them. You are her executor and you recommend the sale. I am her business adviser and I recommend it and as the probate judge knows nothing of sheep and will be guided by such experts as you and me in making his decision, naturally he will sign an order of sale. And while he has the pen in his hand, Prudy, I think his honor should consent to the sale of the wool at the market price. Wool is going down. The growing popularity and cheapness of rayon is going to cost the estate some money on its wool, we get busy, Prudy."

The following morning Don Jaime motored in to Los Algodones, and Roberta accompanied him. As they swung down the main street past the Mansion House, with its row of chair-warmers on the front porch, Roberta started and laid a half-detaining hand on Don Jaime's arm.

"Jimmy, look! See that man sitting on the right of the line—the one in blue overalls and canvas coat?

"Yes."

"He's a replica of my Uncle Bill. If he had Uncle Bill's clothes on, I'd get out and kiss him without question. Good gracious, what a startled resemblance! Why he and Uncle Bill are as near alike as twins."

"Soft" murmured Don Jaime and stepped on his foot-throttle. "Now that's mighty interesting."

He parked in front of the bank, excused himself to Roberta, entered and sought the cashier.

"Ed," he said, "yesterday ten thousand dollars was wired here to the credit of the Estate of Thomas Antrim as a first payment on account of the purchase, by one Blodgett, of the Antrim sheep. That young lady outside in my car is Antrim's heir, Miss Roberta Antrim. I want to know what New York bank wired it."

"Certainly. I don't think I violate any confidence. The Twelfth National."

"Who ordered the transfer?"

"A man by the name of Glenn Hackett."

"Thanks," said Don Jaime, and clumbed back into the car with Roberta. When they were half-way back to Valle Verde he said to her casually, "do you know a man in New York by the name of Glenn Hackett?"

Roberta jerked erect with surprise "Why, yes! He's one of my dearest friends and my Uncle Bill's secretary. Do you know Glenn, Jimmy?

"No—and I hope I never do, I dislike him very much."

"You shouldn't. He's a fine gentleman."

"He is love with you?"

"That's none of your business, and besides, if he were, Jimmy, you couldn't expect me to discuss the subject with you. What has been telling you about Glenn Hackett?"

"The fairies," Don Jaime replied enigmatically. And though Roberta pressed him to tell her more and employed every feminine wile to break down his resolve not to, he refused, and in the end, incensed at the failure of her powers, Roberta lapsed into a scornful sullen silence. As they alighted at the hacienda the outrageous man still further mystified her by saying:

"And I don't think so much of your old Uncle Bill, either."

This statement, when there was not apparently any reason why Uncle Bill should ever be the subject of thought, was the final feather that broke the back of Roberta's curiosity. "Jimmy," she pleaded, "would you care to save a human life?"

"Some humans. You, for instance."

"Then tell me what has lowered my innocent Uncle Bill in your estimation."

"He's crooked."

"Oh, Jimmy, he isn't! His friends call him Crooked Bill because he's—well, rather joyously sly, cunning and prudent. But dishonest—never."

"He's out to boost the stock of this the Ojenta Indian tribe to a point to depress mine."

Roberta smiled a small and knowing smile, but said nothing. The extent of the man's occult powers fascinated her.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 20.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

As Tarzan taught the apes to accept Sheeta, the panther, he taught them to adopt Muganda, the man. In a short time even Sheeta understood she was not to harm Muganda. The next few days the ape-man dragged to weaving a back-cloth tail. He wondered if it would be possible to teach the apes to paddle the canoe. If required weeks of patient training before the beasts would even enter the sturdy boat.

During short trips he placed paddles in their hands and they attempted to imitate his rowing motions. Almost from the first, Akut the king-ape showed an interest in this new sport, for his intelligence seemed higher than the rest of the tribe. He appeared to grasp the idea of the paddles, and when Tarzan saw this, he took much pains to explain his purpose to the great ape.

Muganda told Tarzan that the mainland lay but a short distance from the island. At length Tarzan decided to risk the journey. Anything would be better than remaining upon this evidently uncharted island where no ship might ever be expected to come. And so it was that when the first fair wind arose he embarked upon the cruise with his strange and fearsome crew.

Sheeta crouched in the bow at the ape-man's feet. Behind Tarzan in the stern was Muganda. In front of him squatted Akut. Twelve hairy apes sat upon their haunches, blinking dubiously this way and that, now and then turning their eyes longingly back toward shore. Thus the war-canoe with its savage load moved slowly toward the break of the reef through which it must pass to gain the open sea.

ELISHA MAYNES HEADS TWEED FAIR BOARD

Reports Submitted at Annual Meeting Most Encouraging

NO REDUCTION

Strenuous Opposition to Cutting Purses For Race Events

Tweed Agricultural Society held an enthusiastic meeting in the Council chambers yesterday afternoon, named new officers and laid plans for 1932. The members were more than pleased at the results of the annual Fall Fair in 1931 and this year's Exhibition should be bigger and better than ever.

Considerable discussion centred around the rental paid to the Parks Association for the use of the grounds, which the Society claimed are not adequate to take care of the exhibits. After it had been thoroughly threshed out, it was decided to take no action in the matter until after the next session of the Ontario Legislature when the question of grant to Rural Fairs will be considered.

The financial report showed a surplus of $51.09. The receipts were $1782.09 and expenditure $1,737.88. There was a balance in 1930 of $43.-86 while the balance this year was slightly over $8.00.

Dr. Bowlby and C. R. Brown, Sec'y, were named a committee to collect unpaid special prizes for the last Fair.

Those in charge of the various departments rendered their reports and in the course of discussion, Dr. Bowlby pointed out that there should be better accomodations for the showing of fruit and culinary products. He suggested the construction of an apple rack. The matter of lighting the building was taken up and it is the intention of the Society to secure information in this regard.

Departmental Judges

The question of departmental Judges was taken up, and it was felt that the number might be cut down. However, it was the final decision of the meeting that the number could not be reduced from the previous year. It was proposed to make a saving here.

Mr. T. C. Graham observed that the rental for the fair grounds is too high. James McCowan suggested that the Parks Association shareholders turn over their stock to the Fair Board making it a stock company. The meeting was informed that in cases where Fair Boards raise half the amount, the Ontario Government will accept the mortgage for the remainder. It was stated that a valuator is sent from the Ontario Board to place a valuation on the property. C. R. Brown, Secretary, told the members that the Government will make no grants to Societies operating a joint stock company.

Mr. Elisha Maynes said that no progress could possibly be made unless the two boards get together and agree on a reasonable price for the grounds. This matter was left over until some later date.

T. C. Graham felt that $397.00 was too great an amount to spend on purses for horse racing. It was also the opinion of some members, that the horsemen should be paid on their prize money directly after the races.

Opposition to Face Cut

Mr. James McCowan strenuously opposed any reduction in the purses. "The races are one of the best attraction of the fair, and we should be very careful in taking any steps to reduce the prize list. Other members said that village Fairs in places voted much smaller purses than Tweed. Mr. McCowan eventually with the assertion that in these times the high-class animals were not entered.

Mr. T. S. McCrea the retiring President thanked the officers for the support given in the past year, and urged them to give the new President the same co-operation.

Mr. Elisha Maynes of Thomasburgh, always an ardent worker and a member for the past fifty years of the Fair Board, was named to succeed Mr. McCrea. WEDDING DOCUMENT DATES FROM 1674

Last week the Trenton Courier Advocate published a story about an old army discharge paper of 1775 which was believed to be one of the oldest documents in the province and which is to the possession of Mr. John Redpath of Cobourg. Mr. W. H. Paterson, Trenton grocer on Marmora street has two marriage documents,—one bearing the date 1674 and the other 1721. They are both yellowed with age but the writing is discernible, although in the earlier record, it is hard to make out the quaint spelling which perhaps might be written by Charles' 8th documents came from Scotland.

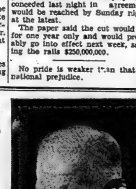
U.S. RAILWAYMEN ACCEPT WAGE CUT

Ten Per Cent Reduction Will Go Into Effect in Week



CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 22.—The Herald and Examiner said today in a copyrighted article that Railway Labor of United States was expected to accept a 10 per cent wage cut soon.

The paper said leaders of both the workers and the railroads, conferring here since last Thursday on pay reductions and unemployment, conceived the wage cut in agreement would be reached by Sunday night at the latest.

The paper said the cut would be for one year only and would probably go into effect next week, saving the rails $250,000,000.

When You CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Aspirin was meant for just such times, for it insures your comfort! Freedom from those pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block that threatening headache while it is still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you've caught a cold, and relief comes by the end of it.

Carry Aspirin tablets when you travel. Have some at home and keep some at the office. Like an efficient secretary, they will often "save the day" and spare you many uncomfortable, unproductive hours. Aspirin is harmless, so keep it handy. Keep it in mind, and use it. No man of affairs can afford to ignore the score and more of uses explained in the proven directions. From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains which seem almost to bend the bones, Aspirin tablets are ready with quick relief—and always work. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. They are of perfect purity, absolute uniformity, and have the same action every time. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there IS economy in the purchase of genuine Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

Competition is Ruining Railways Says Hackett

Dictatorship Over All Rails in Canada Urged Would Return C. N. R.

Competition Today, Says Hackett, Ruin For C. N. Railways

DANGER TO C.P.R.

Fears C.P.R. is Going Under, Expressed By Hackett

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 25 (By The Canadian Press)—Appointment of a dictator to temporarily take over all railways in Canada and the handing-back of the Canadian National Railways to private ownership were laid today by Sir Henry Hackett, K.C., member of parliament for Stanstead, Que., in an address before the Canadian Club here today.

Competition as it is known at present between the Canadian National railways and the C.P.R., the speaker claimed, "is not competition but destruction for the C.P.R." he said.

"We have subsidized the National to the undoing of the Canadian Pacific. The result is that the C.P.R. is going," he said.

Opposes Monopoly

"Monopoly of the National Railways would mean a state within a state," he declared. "We would have an organized power inside the state, that could easily become subversive to constitutional government."

Canada can support little more than one trans-continental system, Mr. Hackett said. There is not enough room in Canada to maintain both.

"The railways have been a great drain on the public purse. Hard times have made it exaggerated possibly, but certainly to point out the difficulties, but they are not remedied for them.

Question of Service

"The Royal Commission investigating the technical questions, I hope will find it possible to continue the service to communities that are receiving it now. But I hope also it will find that the railways must in the future maintain themselves. They must pay as they go."

The advantages of railway-dictator would be manifold the Montreal lawyer suggested. "A dictator appointed in the crisis, could undoubtedly effect savings, possibly by cutting out some of the still undiminishing losses resulting from competition and could even suggest ways to the people of the Dominion taxation tax.

"The question which is before the Canadian public today, Mr. Hackett declared, "is whether Canada desires a state monopoly of railways? If it does, it is on the direct road to it. My objection is, it does not, now is the time to consider what should be done."

PETERBORO MAN KILLED IN CRASH

Car Travelling on Wrong Side of The Road

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 25—Lawrence S. Bristow, 32, Peterboro, was instantly killed and Herbert Bigelow of Bethany, seriously injured in automobile accident on the Peterboro-Port Hope highway late Saturday night. Bristow's car, driving the car rolled over into a ditch about four miles west of this city.

Following the accident, Provincial Officer A. E. Herrick stated evidence indicated the car was travelling on the wrong side of the road, that the tread marks showed no sign of skidding and that the car had not diagonally across the road in the ditch where it turned over.

Bigelow sustained a concussion of the brain, a broken collar-bone and several fractured ribs.

Bull Moose Fights Motorcars at Path

Butte, Mont., Jan. 25—A bull moose with positive ideas about traffic rights has done its bit for pedestrianism and retired to nurse its wounds.

Two motor cars were damaged and nearly a score were hurled by a belligerent bull which took possession of a snow-banked highway north of Butte yesterday and held it more than an hour.

The moose charged machines in both directions. It rammed into the front of one car, striking the driver with its hoofs, and then crashed through a window, cutting its legs.

SERVICE ONE OF DIGNITY

Rt. Rev. C. A. Seager Will Be Installed as Bishop Tonight

London, Ont., Jan. 25 (CP) — Plans have been completed for the installation of the Rt. Rev. Charles Allan Seager, M.A., LL.D., as Bishop of the Diocese of Huron. The ceremony will take place this evening at St. Paul's Cathedral and from present indications the Cathedral will be taxed beyond its capacity. The service, which is one of the most dignified in the ritual of the Anglican Church will be witnessed by one of the most representative gatherings that has ever been present at a local service, including representatives of the church, governments and various organizations.

Church representatives will include high officials of the Church of England, United, Baptist and Presbyterian churches. Representatives of the Dominion and Provincial governments have already expressed their interest in the event while the city council will be represented by a body including Mayor Hayman. Defense Argues For Acquittal

HONOLULU, Jan. 23.— (AP) — Hopling to free Mrs. Granville Fortescue and her fellow naval defendants, at least, temporarily of all charges for the slaying of Joseph Kahahawai, defense counsel will argue in circuit court for the dismissal of the charges, entered against the quartette today.

The plea is based upon delay of the county prosecutor in presenting the case to the Grand Jury, which considered the facts for two days last week, but adjourned until tomorrow without returning an indictment.

General Strike Breaks Out in Only Two Cities

Madrid, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Communists' and Extremists' general strike, widely heralded to take place throughout Spain today eventuated only in Seville and Malaga, according to reports reaching here up to shortly after noon.

A small bomb was placed on the railroad track at Malaga at dawn but only small damage was done. There was an exchange of shots between strikers and troops, but the city was quiet at noon.

In Seville business was at a standstill, shops were closed and street cars were not running, but elsewhere quiet prevailed except that heavy contingents of troops were on hand everywhere to prevent possible disturbances.

The failure of the promised strike was credited to the policy of Premier Azania which rendered the preliminary strike revolt in Catalonia last week, abortive and struck hard at the extremist organizations before they could complete plans for a demonstration of strength today.

Russell Lattimore, Ont., Jan. 25— (By the Canadian Press)—An attempted jail-break was foiled by Turnkey Robert Dundas and Governor John Dundas of the Lincoln County jail here last night when only after both had sustained painful injuries.

The cell he says was attacked by Kavanagh. The latter threw him into a cell and locked the door. O. B. C. NOTES

Among the latest arrivals at Ontario Business College are three more students from Quebec, Messrs. Marcel and Benoit Champagne (brothers) of Three Rivers, and Mr. Martin Cossette of St. Narcisse. At present nine young men from Quebec are at the College.

Miss Lorna Middleton has completed her course at O.B.C. and returned to her home at Ormstown, Que.

A few days ago Mr. Alex. Scott, of Sioux Lookout, Ont., and his son Arthur visited the College. Both are O.B.C. graduates and bore testimony to the great benefit they have had from the O.B.C. training. Mr. Arthur Scott is planning to send his young son here to follow the example of his father and grandfather.

Many families have sent two, three, four or more members to the College. This is most encouraging evidence of the value of the O.B.C. training. A good many here now is the fourth Member of her family to attend. The record in this regard is held by a Belleville family of which the father and nine children all attended O.B.C. Some years ago six brothers came from New Richmond, Que. A family now living in Belleville has sent five sisters to the College with the result that good positions were secured by them afterward.

Some interesting orders have been received this month for text-books published by the College, among them two book store orders from Montreal, one from a book store in Sherbrooke, Que., a family in Sawyerville, Que., and another from a school in Bermuda.

Miss Jane Parker, who completed her course at O.B.C. in December, is now in Europe and will return in the spring when she will decide where she expects to take a position.

Friday afternoon Mr. E. J. S. Wallwin, B.A., of Trinity College, Toronto, visited the College and gave an excellent address to the students on practical Christianity with regard to qualifying for commercial teaching. Mr. Wallwin, a Canadian is the immediate past president of The Fair will probably be of two-day duration.

The Canadian Women's League held a food sale a few days ago and realized $100, which was sent to help the needy in Southern Saskatchewan.

County Cheesemakers held their annual banquet at Bayside on Thursday evening. Speakers were Mr. Griffin, secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association; H. E. Collins, M.P.P., and C. Bailey, Dairy Instructor in Madoc district; Mr. Lee, vice president of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association; J. E. Irwin, Cheese Grader of Belleville; W. I. Hicks, Prince Edward County Dairy Instructor; H. J. Platner, representing a chemical firm; Eugene VanDusen, president County Cheesemakers' Association and J. deC. Hepburn, who acted as chairman.

Must Do Justly Not for Material Gain Says Pastor

Armageddon Has Been Going on For Many Generations

RELATIONSHIP

"Safety First" was the subject dealt with by Rev. Dr. Bell in his sermon last night in Bridge Street Church by the pastor, Rev. Dr. R. H. Bell. In some respects it was very a propos of the discussion that arose in the past week in the daily papers over the editorial appearing in a recent issue of the New Outlook published under the authority of the United Church as "Opinion concerning which the editor is challenged over properly rights."

Rev. Dr. Bell based his remarks upon the story found in Numbers 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20 and 21 of Joshua. Hodah. "The inevitable lesson" he said, "is that we should do justly not for what we get out of our conduct but because of our need in living properly and others' safety also." There is the immediate past presidents. The Fair will probably be of two-day duration.

The Canadian Women's League held a food sale a few days ago and realized $100, which was sent to help the needy in Southern Saskatchewan.

"When merely for our selfish purposes it is not well-pleasing. We should be square in our dealings even if it do not get out of our element. Yet safety measures are not to be ignored nor heedlessly observed. Christianity demands wholehearted consecration and not mainly self-interest. Our lives are much like a desert or prairie where roads lead off at right angles to the obvious directions.

We can thus stamp the old truth of the body of Christ being the church today as it is.

"We have a moral responsibility for the success of the Lord's work. Many of the Hebrews wandering in the wilderness can scarcely be compared with the advancing increase of certain evils confronting youth in particular these days. True God is in His heaven, a place in the earth, but all is not well with our world. Many friendliness and good will are still needed here for the common welfare of our race. It is harder to live aright now than ever.

Life is a warfare. Armageddon has been going on for many generations. Major, then, on the term of a change, the great climax of victory. Shall we have a part or place in achieving laudable results?

"While emphasis is made upon our relationship with the Divine at the same time let us be concerned with others less. Let us study our day and generation from the standpoint of a slave, a hireling or a friend and Willet of Belleville.

Buildings Ablaze and 95 Inmates Wounded in Dartmoor Rioting

Grim Prison Scene of Battle Over Porridge Without Sugar

HAND-TO-HAND

Governor and Commissioner Threatened as 300 Men Revolt

Dartmoor, Devon, England, (AP) January 25.—Three hundred convicts at grim Dartmoor Prison engaged overt a mess of porridge, waged a bitter, futile battle with prison guards and police Sunday in the most violent penal outbreak in British history.

Ninety-five convicts were reported wounded in all all-day conflict in which the prison burned the principal buildings and attempted a wholesale escape over the walls. Twelve warders and police were injured.

The Home Office in London issued a statement, saying no prisoners had been killed and none had escaped. Only about 20 remained in the hospital Sunday night, this source said, and none of the injuries to guards or police was serious.

The prisoners, who claimed to have been goaded on by mistreatment which reached a climax when sugar was omitted from their breakfast porridge, rioted all day Saturday and seriously threatened the life of the governor, W. H. Roberts and a commissioner, Col. Turner.

Long before dawn the prison was in a hubbub with the inmates beating on their cell doors and walls in protest.

Battle Is Begun

When the men were paraded into the courtyard for exercise previous to church, their banner demonstration began to battle with their guards. Led by cries of "Hunger!" the men of the rioters were attempting to gain their freedom when police reinforcements arrived. They were driven back to the cells with tear gas and batons charges.

In the meantime, one group had broken into the governor's office and burned his papers. Then they set fire to the administrative buildings and destroyed them with the official records.

A late in the afternoon before the fire was brought under control and the outbreak was thoroughly quelled.

Outside the walls the male residents of Princetown had armed themselves with rifles and their womenfolk hid behind locked doors. The flames could be seen for miles. Police came from all directions and troops at the Devonshire barracks turned out with steel helmets to await orders to proceed. Fire engines were dispatched from Plymouth to cope with the blaze.

Fire Is Seen

More than a hundred prisoners attempted to escape over the walls and scale the walls. Anticipating the move, the warders sniped at the rioters from strategic positions with the intention of wounding rather than killing.

JURY RENDERS ACQUITTAL OF YOUNG BARKER

Manslaughter Count is End of Trial For Cafe Death

DOUBT WHO HIT

Toronto, Jan. 25—After Chief Justice Rose had pointed out to them that they were dealing not with the guilt of the man before them, and not to distribute the blame for the death of Lung Lip Yen, formerly of Hamilton, but to Harry Barker, the jury in the case of Mr. Justice Hahn was an ordained minister, had been out 2½ hours, and was spokesman for the militant portion of the church.

Every car coming across the Lewiston bridge yesterday afternoon had to be stopped as was the custom when for Mr. Hahn, everyone coming to Toronto might have been out of doors for further questioning, said Mr. Hoffman. When word came in, he was shown a letter signed by Chief Draper, he said, in which Mr. Hahn was stated to be a Communist.

Attacks Hahn was hated by Buffalo Communists, as an admitted Socialist who had served in a co-operative commonwealth, the speaker declared.

Recently he had been barred from the air by the Buffalo Broadcasting Corporation, but the Communist party is going to Washington today to appear before the Federal Radio Commission, Hoffman went on. He said emphatically Mr. Hahn is being vigorously supported by the Federation of Churches of Christ in America, representing 30 Protestant denominations, by the American Federation of Labor and 20 fraternal brotherhoods.

"What are we to solve these problems as intelligent citizens if we don't use in an orderly way?" asked the speaker. Hahn had been discussing what he considered Jesus' way out of the present depression, he said. If his ideas were wrong, the jury should have ignored them, but they were right, nothing could stop them. Attempts to throttle the Anglo-Saxon heritage of free speech only made people more determined, he declared.

Upholds Free Speech

Mrs. Rose Henderson declared that there could be no democracy without free speech, free press and assembly meant something, and they might as well recognize that that right has been taken from us in Toronto."

GYPSIES POUR INTO NEW YORK

Fortune Telling Boom Draws Fifteen Thousand

New York, Jan. 23—Gypsies are migrating by the hundreds to New York, attracted by unprecedented boom in fortune telling. Knowing members of the clan say that the foremost authorities on gypsies, said in an interview today. He blames the depression and the fact that there are now more than 15,000 of the clan here.

The depression has caused a boom in fortune telling in Greenwich arts and along Broadway and Sixth Avenue, the gypsies have set themselves up to make a killing.

"They're all prosperous," said Berrovich, "nobody has ever respect the money they earn. A gypsy treasures what he has at hi earns it."

Berrovich considers the situation as salutary, from the standpoint of the gypsies themselves since prosperity-lasting errors are being dispelled by their presence in the city.

"Gypsies and kidnapping," the author suggested, "are associated traditionally but without foundation. Gypsies love their children. I'll admit they steal, but they steal only when they're in need. The greatest of all sacrifices in the clan of gypsies is to sell a child. If a gypsy lies to another gypsy, he is expelled, excommunicated, thrown out. He becomes an exile with whom other gypsies will not associate. Never travels fast in the cities, and within a week every gypsy from coast-to-coast will know about it."

Seemingly, the wide world has gone to the bottom of the pit and dug in its toes. The trend from forth must be upward.—Alfred E. Smith.

Authorities at Rev. H. Hahn, Border Bar Radio Speaker

Is Detained on Way at Request of Toronto Police, Claim

SLATED SPEAKER

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—Rev. Herman Hahn did not address the audience which packed the Bloor St. auditorium last night to hear him speak.

Instead, one of his helpers from his church, Salem Evangelical Church, Buffalo, asserted that Mr. Hahn had been detained at the border yesterday afternoon by immigration officials acting at the request of Chief Constable Draper in Toronto. The immigration officers set forth a series of volleys against Rev. Hahn, they claimed, had ignored their rights of free speech. And at each verbal attack, the audience registered its approval or disapproval as the case might be by a militant vocal enthusiasm.

Plainclothesmen from the Toronto police department were also present.

When the meeting commenced 15 minutes late and the chairman, G. W. McCollum, president of the National Labor Council, announced that the speaker of the evening would not be present, through no fault of his own but because police and government regulations, the crowd booed and hissed for some seconds.

Then Robert A. Hoffman, secretary of the radio committee of Mr. Hahn's church, explained why his leader had not arrived. Mr. Hahn was an ordained minister, had been for 20 years, and was spokesman for the militant portion of the church.

Every car coming across the Lewiston bridge yesterday afternoon had been stopped as was the custom when for Mr. Hahn, everyone coming to Toronto might have been out of doors for further questioning, said Mr. Hoffman. MILL WORKERS OUT ON STRIKE

Ahmedabad, India, Jan. 25 — Seventy industrial workers struck out on strike here today in protest against the imprisonment for one year, under the new emergency ordinances, of the Secretary of the Ahmedabad Textile Labor Union.

The strike affected seventy-six textile mills, it was reported. Pickets are "untouchables."

A heavy force of Ahmedabad patrolled the mill area after an attempt had been made to burn the police station.

SHARP REPLY MADE HITLER

Chancellor Bruening Accuses Nazi Leader of Partisanship

Berlin, Jan. 25—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening today made reply to Adolph Hitler today, accused the Nazi leader of being actuated entirely by partisanship and political motives in rejecting the cabinet suggestion for extending the term of President Paul Von Hindenburg by a vote of the Reichstag.

German's Troubles, the Chancellor said, are not the fault of the present system which Hitler was trying to upset, but are due principally to the World War and the Nazi Government, he said, could do no differently than is being done.

Belgium's huge new order for British war 'planes—the biggest ever placed by a foreign government with the British aircraft industry—has its origin in a series of dramatic events which took place fourteen months ago.

Then, as now, the Belgian government proposed the purchase of new aircraft and the placing of fighting aeroplanes to replace obsolete craft in the Belgian air service. A preliminary competition was held at Every aerodrome, and several makes of European aircraft were flown before the Belgian air and military authorities. WHAT ONE MAN ACCOMPLISHED

Robert Burns is one of the few poets who have won so great acclaim and recognition as to have their songs pass into the common language of the people and to have a day set apart to their memory. January 26th is a never-to-be-forgotten day in Scots history when the nation's greatest contribution to the world was born.

The nights have been full of song as the time of Burns anniversary draws near. Why?

Burns probably better than any other man who ever lived understood the people, and the emotions they experienced. He deals with their every care and joy, and he runs the gamut of every human emotion, and he plays the chords of human life with an unfailing hand. For more than a century many his words are wedded to immortal music, most of it folk in character and many of the songs set to music by the greatest composers. Burns possessed the soul of music and he had stored in his mind from childhood the tunes and the words of Old Scots songs. When the time came for him to express himself it was natural that it should be in song, and that he should base many of his songs on the popular music so national in character, and with a plaintive something which is difficult to define. It was natural that he wrote were of the same high standard of poetry and expression and they were suited for the genius of such great men as Schumann.

Burns' command of human emotion and accurate expression is one of the greatest in literature. His dash from the plaintive to the sportive and the gay, is unsurpassed a power of speech few if any can equal.

Burns the man was even greater than Burns the poet. No one who has read these songs, so sweet, so touching, can ever think that the instrument which gave voice to them was not supreme in his emotional equipment. The singer is greater than the song.

Scotland if it had not contributed philosophy, religion, a solid type of character, and a ruggedness to the world would still be one of the world's chief benefactors —it gave Burns. How eagerly the English world has taken up this singer and made him English by incorporating Scots words forever in the English tongue! He and a few other Scots made a national language of a dialect; they and Scots songs had more to do with this than any other factor. Modern English does not owe so much to its poets and writers as Scotland does for Scots.

In these days when everything is in turmoil and men doubt institutions and seek remedies, doubtful remedies and practise expedients until they are sick of them, Burns comes with especial appeal. His primary belief in life values in the "Scots Wha Hae" That song will totter faulty governments and adjust unfair dealings and institutions because back of all things is the man who is "a man for a' that." Greed, cruelty, selfishness, bitterness, caste, flee before the sun rays of Burns' political philosophy.

Burns' man must never be forgotten when one is thinking of the poet. If it had not been for the child Burns who was born in a humble cottage, there would be no songs to go by that name and the world would have been infinitely poorer. Burns' emotions and his themes are vital and will reche in human life until time is no more. Not only Scots know this, but a world of admirers and devotees.

MUSIC IN COURT

In Toronto county court a judge adjudicated in a case of ownership of a violin which the plaintiff believes is a Stradivarius. A Polish laborer sought on possession of the instrument or five hundred dollars in settlement while the defendant set up the defence that it was his by reason of having been given him for room rent.

The judge called for the two to play. The old court room was flooded with music as the plaintiff played "The Fair Land of Poland."

This recalls the story of an Eastern potentate, known to Bible readers as Solomon, the wisest of men. Solomon put a test before two litigants once about the parentage of a child and knowledge of human nature led him to a decision as to the parent.

SO MANY CREEDS

There are more than a thousand religious creeds or "isms" in the United States.

It seems almost a thousand times more easy to "spread out" a new denomination than it is to bring together two denominations. Yet there are signs of movement towards unity, such as the rapprochement of the Anglican and the old Catholic communions of Europe. Recently the Pope in an encyclical "Lux Veritatis" (Light of Truth) made a gesture towards unity.

Canon Gates preaching at the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York said that many "isms" had led the world astray from the right way. He urged the congregation to see that if you want to help prepare the way you have got to be unlike a reed shaken by every wind of fanciful doctrine".

TO HAVE THE HONOR of being offered a reduction of ten thousand dollars in salary and being able to survive the shock is really an experience which few men could hope to have. Babe Ruth, however, rum rum specialist, looks at the prospect of a ten thousand dollar cut in his salary without batting an eye. He drew down $80,000 for his last summer's work on the baseball diamond, and his employers opine that for next summer the Bambino should take a cut of ten thousand dollars because the baseball season is not the essential preliminary training. That is a lot of money to get used to in a single year, admitted. It is not to be expected that in the early years of practice the calling will prove very profitable, and later on when the young man has become well established and has worked up a steady clientele is the time when he is most backed forward to for recouping himself for the heavy educational expenditures of the training period. What man can expect to earn then? According to the official survey, not more on the average than $4,250 a year. Now, that means that those practitioners will be earning less than this sum; while some will be earning more; it is a fact that an average doctor may anticipate receiving an average income only. Years and years of hard and patient work and study, and finally the reward of $4,250, if he is among the fortunate. It doesn't seem much to make such a fuss about.—Hamilton Spectator.

LYTTON STRACHEY

Lytton Strachey should have died hereafter, not in his prime. A great source of curious entertainment has gone. To a world content with long solemn, jejune Official Lives and Letters and Public Services he brought the new biography that was in essence the old. These poor dears! Those lives were taken out of the Victorian mummy cases, made alive, with restorations, decorations and inventions by an accomplished and subtle artist. Sketching in the mailcoach backstairs gossip. Tacitus with his irony and his epigrams. Boswell with his vidness and his Old Adam prowess at establishing the case for human nature's daily food. Proissart with his flashing pictures and paragraphs who knows? Even masters Mr. Strachey had studied? His style of biography as distinguished from his own style as a writer, might be called mimic. If we may apply the term to a wealth of detail, sometimes fantastical, instead of concentration. Inch by inch he fills out a picture. Sometimes, as in the case of Gordon, it is evident to be distorted, disfiguring and unlike. But in Gordon fate let him be the reader's eye and mind. That was his merit. Like Macaulay's biography, as Emerson thought. Strachey recreated or rearranged certain episodes of history and driven them deep into our consciousness. Mr. Drysdale may shut the book with a bang and say, "That isn't Gordon." Well, but somebody soaked in permutations and combinations may calculate how many million pictures of Gordon can be constructed according to each constructor's fancy. Mr. Strachey merely showed us his Queen Victoria, his Gordon, the moving thing that engaging, homely, narrow but powerful and domineering body, as arbitrary and cruel as George III and every inch a Queen, though her longitudinal inches were under nine stone. You see her as he sees her. She is the masterpiece of his method. So with Essex and Elizabeth, though with perhaps too much sensual melodrama.

Nobody is ever going to know "the thing in itself" completely. Mr. Strachey exhibits it as he thinks it has happened or may have happened to be congenial with the conception of the Elizabethan universe. He was to much of a philosopher to reveal the "naked truth, as Pronde did, or thought he did, about Carlyle. Mr. Strachey dedicated himself to an amply clothed and highly civilized truth. The "As if" school of biography, the use of fictions to find one's way in reality, seems peculiarly suited to biography, history, which is uncertain, unstable and shifting in conclusion from age to age.—New York Times.

GIVE

What's the true test of living?
A life that's spent in giving.
What's death without awaking?
A life that's spent in taking.
When the sunbeams cheer thy way,
Do they not give?
When the bright flowers paint the sward,
Do they do it for reward?
When the birds sing clear and long,
Does he want thanks for his song?
Give talent, thought, and voice,
To the deaf and blind;
Give work, and love, and will;
Give pains and zeal and skill;
Pour freely out thy whole,
Thyself, thy very soul;
So live thy fellow-men,
Nor ask for aught again;
And, as thou giv'st, thy store
Shall grow not less but more.
—Alice Cary.

SAVING COUNTRSIDE

The idea of taking elaborate measures to preserve the natural beauty of the Sussex weald and the Surrey hills, and to keep the picturesque villages for future generations to enjoy is one that has been put into concrete itself to the public generally. The prohibition of cutting down trees that beautify the landscape is one that might well be copied over here. Almost every new lovely Quebec roads have been sadly marred by the cutting down of trees which could have formed beautiful avenues in the summer time. It is a good thing to be able to look after the commercial beauty spots for the citizens of tomorrow as well as those of today. —Montreal Star.

DOCTOR'S EARNINGS

The Ontario Medical association recently carried out a survey to learn the earnings of doctors and the cost of their practice. The results are most illuminating and interesting. In the first place, the figures relate to years before the medicus is in a position to hang out his shingle to those financing him, must be prepared to spend no less than $25,000 on the essential preliminary training. Celebrate 25 Years of Existence

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian Press)—The 25th anniversary of Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, will take place this February and special functions will mark the celebration of this important event in the history of McGill University. The occasion will be used particularly to commemorate the gifts of Sir William Macdonald who was McGill's outstanding benefactor, and Thomas O. Macdonald.

With a view to meeting the needs of the country at large, particularly the rural districts, and to afford better facilities for the training of teachers in the province of Quebec, Sir William founded Macdonald College in 1907. It was designed to include three schools, one for agriculture, one for household science and one for normal training. The gift for buildings, grounds consisting of nearly eight hundred acres, equipment and endowment amounted to over six million dollars. The College was incorporated in the university as the faculty of agriculture which stands today itself an outstanding monument to the farsightedness of its founder.

Among the donations of Sir William Macdonald to McGill amounted to over three and a quarter million dollars.

In the opinion of many people the three greatest men in the history of McGill's development were Sir William Dawson, Sir William Osler, and Sir William Macdonald. Dawson became he saved McGill at a time when it was almost on the point of closing its doors; Osler brought to the medical school a world-wide reputation and Macdonald because of his outstanding benefactions which made it possible for McGill to fulfil her destiny and become a famous university.

Great Menace to Narcotics Noted

Montreal, Que. (By The Canadian Press)—Labelling the use of narcotic drugs as the "most persistent evil outside of hell," Dr. A. J. Vining associate secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, in an address before the Rotary Club here recently, recommended to the government the preparation of a small booklet setting forth the evils of their use. This booklet, he suggested, should be distributed among the high school pupils and pupils of the last grade of public schools.

The creation of government institutions where all narcotic drug addicts could be confined, was advised. Such institutions, the speaker stated could cure some 15 per cent of the addicts while the remaining 85 per cent of hopeless addicts would be kept permanently within these institutions.

The third major recommendation was that the laws governing the terms of imprisonment of convicted narcotic drug peddlers be made more severe. Dr. Vining advised the penalties and the lash upon conviction.

"There is no hope for the hopelessly confirmed addict," the speaker declared in describing how the habit of narcotic drugs changed a man into a "mean lying, snivelling coward."

The most urgent plea of the speaker was for the protection of Canada's greatest national asset, the youth of the Dominion. Dr. Vining quoted statistics to show that drug addicts were now more than 1,500,00 narcotic drug addicts in the United States. Anything of importance of this nature is no hope for the baneful influence of Canada, he said, in pleading for co-operation of all citizens to fight against the "greatest menace that faces the North American Continent today".

The greatest obstacle to international order is the enormously heightened nationalism which governs the attractive but misapplied name of patriotism.—Albert Einstein.

HOCKEY GAME TRANSFERRED

Campbellford Play in Belleville Wednesday Instead of Home

Wanting to be assured of good ice and due to the uncertain weather conditions lately, the Campbellford Intermediates have made arrangements to play their home game, on Monday, January 25th, at the Belleville Arena, instead of Wednesday. Intermediates on Wednesday, January 27th. Manager Fay Morris was in Belleville on Saturday and made the final arrangements with the Belleville Arena.

This move was made by the management of the Campbellford club solely because they were not certain of having good ice for the game in Campbellford. On the other hand it benefits the local hockey fans to the extent that they will be able to witness the game. Manager Perrie of the opinion that it is a good attendance is in evidence on Wednesday night that the Northumberland will continue to play their home games in Belleville. This is good news to the hockey fans and no doubt they will take advantage of the situation and be present.

Manager Perrie feels that his crew has at last found themselves and after Friday night's victory over Canadian Comets are ready to stop the aspirations of the league leading team. Manager Perrie has a fine line-up for Campbellford with Coach Mason and Fred Ingram holding the defence duties. Ken Davis, "Buster" Whitlock, Jack Pyeatt and Harry Ingram will share the front line duties and Manager Perrie is thinking very seriously of moving Bush and Hendry, his two fast junior forwards up. These two lads will give any intermediate a tussle which they will be forced to quite some time, as they are standouts in junior company.

Belleville, on the other hand, are smarting after their defeat at the hands of Queen's last Friday night and are out to run their string of victories to 10 straight games. All the locals are to stay in the running they only suffered one loss and more games as the leading Queen's team have yet to be defeated. The locals are still in pretty good condition and will be out to practice on night and tomorrow night in preparation for their game on Wednesday night.

Coach Bouwmer Holway is up and about again and feels that his injuries are simply "rarin' to go." Joe Thos. Jr. will be in the nets defending for the locals. The defence will be picked from Morris, Weir, Shannon and Holway. The forward line will consist of the rapidfire Campbell, McMeekin, Scott, Hull, Morgan, Leachman and St. Denis. The latter combination on the defence has not been made as yet but all that is necessary now is a bumper house to make the night one to be long remembered in hockey circles in Belleville. The last time these two met, the score was 1-1 and it was "nip and tuck" with the locals getting the verdict by a 4 to 3 score. Manager Perrie is of the opinion that his pets will surprise the locals in the game. Wednesday night tells the tale.

'TWAS EVER THUS

The N.H.L. seems to be gradually coming to the "abolish the blue line idea." Art Ross of Boston and Lester Patrick of New York have been in conference on "How to stop the forsaite hockey"—and emerged with a couple of real suggestions. The first is to allow attacking players to enter the opposition's defensive zone once the puck has passed centre ice. That will do away with that exasperating play-stopping whistle-tooting because some attacking player has followed the puck into the hockey holy of holies —the opposing defence zone. Suggestion No. 2 is that any team which shoots the puck up the ice twice successively, without having carried it out of the defensive zone, be penalized by a face-off right in front of their nets. That should stop "icing the puck." The idea suggestion deals with penalties. The Ross-Patrick duo suggests that all minor penalties be raised from two to five minutes and that penalized players, including those hoisted for match penalties, be subbed. In other words, there would be no teams at full numerical strength at times. The first two suggestions are worthy of real attention, but the latter is the bunk. Any team penalized would be the loss of a player's individual service. That would leave the team short of manpower and thereby being sent out to "take it out on" star players. Penalties inflicted on other words to deliberately injure them or drag them into battles which would take them out of play game.

FOUR TEAMS IN C.O.S.S.A.

Belleville Collegiate is Reported to Be in Good Shape

Four teams have been entered in the Bay of Quinte group of the C. O.S.S.A., according to an agreement reached, Tuesday, January 19, at the annual meeting of the association held in the annual league meeting. Trenton, Albert College and Picton were not able to enter teams this season.

Mr. Lester Shiels represented the B.C.I. at the meeting and arrangements for the season's play was completed the schedule of games being drawn up for the year. It is of the home-and-home league system and will cover the next six games. Three at home and three away. The first game of the season will play all of their games at the Belleville Arena while the O.S.D. will play their games on the same place if they cannot get the consent of the visiting team to play on their open air rink at the O.S.D.

Both local teams boast of good, smart hockey material and it is expected that some contests of keen rivalry will be the outcome before the winner is declared. The association takes in all High Schools and Collegiate Institutes in the district.

Last year Belleville C. I. had defeated Picton Collegiate Institute in the final game, which was played on the Belleville Arena ice. These teams play excellent hockey and the interest shown only adds to its prosperity.

The following is the schedule for the Bay of Quinte group.

RANGERS, LEAFS STILL ON TOP

Leafs Win From Canadiens 2 to 0 in Fast Game

Toronto Can., Jan. 25 (CP) —Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers strengthened their grip on the top rung of their respective groups in the National Hockey League over the week end when they won by a pair of victories at the expense of Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Only the smooth-working combination of Hainsworth, who was sufficient to stop the fast stepping Canadiens in New York last night after they gained a 2-0 triumph over the Bruins in Boston the previous night. The Maple Leafs' 2-0 victory came at the most opportune moment as a setback would likely have cost them the group leadership before the present week is ended. However, the win placed them five points in front of the Rangers, Hainsworth and seven points in the van of the big New York Americans.

Boston's goal in the final minutes of the first and third periods was the only scoring that was recorded for the entire sixty minutes, the Maple Leafs gained their first victory on Toronto ice this season over the Montreal Canadiens. The game was packed with excitement from beginning to end and the efforts of the rivals in doubt until the final minute of play, when Frankie Finnigan scored for Toronto and Hainsworth for Toronto's second tally. Finnigan, the Leafs' ace centre, Chabot in Toronto cage was the outstanding feature of the game, a major portion of the credit must be given to Jackson, Toronto defence, who figured in both goals. Only five penalties were called, the former of the Leafs, serving seven minutes to six for three Canadien players.

PETERBORO WIN AT VOLLEYBALL

Took Six of The Eight Games Played

Two teams of volleyball players which Physical Director Douglas Arnold of the Y.M.C.A. has built up into the camp of the local Y.M.C.A. met Saturday night evening for the home talent, in all, eight games were played, Peterboro winning six of the eight. Besides the fact that the Kirkcock City aggregation won the match Visitors played the best exhibition of the game of playing heard of in this district the practice tonight and are rarin' to go.

The local juniors are scheduled to play in Trenton next Wednesday night and will practice tonight and tomorrow night in preparation for the game. Nicholls, Ross and Yeo will be in the nets, as a matter of fact all three will be out to get a practice tonight and are rarin' to go.

Coach Lee Stokes announced on Saturday that the schedule for the local intermediate hockey team has been let. The top this year includes the Oshawa Generals, O.S.D. and Belleville Collegiate. Trenton is the only team that can enter a team this year. It is expected that the O.S.D. team will play their games in the Belleville Arena as will the College. Coach Stokes is pleased with his boys out to practice a few times and feels that he will have a good a team as last year. "With a few games practice I expect to see a real smart team of puck-chasers," said Mr. Stokes at the meeting. The opening game for the locals is with the O.S.D. boys and is expected to be a battle to say the least.

Weather permitting the local curlers have their annual bonspiel now right when they meet the Oshawa curlers on Wednesday though the curlers have not had very much practice they are ambitious to show Oshawa how to business. Both junior and senior rinks will be entered.

Jack Starkey is at last satisfied as he has been assured of another game with Manager Max Schmeling. Max, after losing the title, left Germany where he will holiday until March. The bout will be staged in New York or Jersey. The "Boston Tar" had better practice hard on his boxing for this battle and not be disqualified as did his recent tilt with Herr Maxie.

Current Sport

By The Observer

It was with much satisfaction, on their part, that the locals were informed of the fact that Campbellford intended playing their game of Monday night in Campbellford here in Belleville on Wednesday evening. This gives the locals a couple of two days of rest and after their game with Queen's last Friday night they sure need a few days in which to recuperate, after the treatment they received at the hands of the Students. The locals are looking say and will all be out for Wednesday night's tilt.

By bringing their home game to Belleville the Campbellford management has insured the hockey fans of this district a real fast game as the Northumbers seem to have struck their stride when they broke into the win column last week when the Gananoque team last Friday night, were the victims. Fay Morris is bringing his full line up to Belleville to try and keep in to third place by defeating the locals here. The last time these two teams met the locals were fortunate to pull out with a 4 to 3 victory but the Hydro Town players are of the opinion that they can "trim" the locals right here in their own back yard. A large number of fans from the town from the northern part of the county will be here.

Coach Boumer Holway is up and around again and Bob Scott is feeling somewhat better, now. The rest of the locals are O.K. except Archie Campbell, who is still laying off. He will be all ready to face the fans when the Trenton game on Wednesday night. Coach Morris and Joe Yeo will also be in action, as a matter of fact all will be out for a practice tonight and are rarin' to go.

Too Much Radio For School Pupils

HAMILTON, Jan. 25. — Loss of interest in school work by pupils is not only affected the health of children but is seriously interfering with their progress in studies according to a statement issued Saturday by Dr. Peter Bryce, provincial health officer of the board of education.

For some time listless pupils who appeared to have lost interest in their studies filled the public schools. To fathom the problem Dr. Bryce investigated and found the majority admitted that they listened to radio until late in the early morning hours. Some returned to their homes before school hour to tune in on special features. Some of these enthusiastic radio fans came to school at last.

Dr. Davey in concluding his report appeals to parents to cooperate advocating that the older folks forego their radio if they found it necessary to listen in after the younger people had retired.

Hoover and Roosevelt Likely Candidates

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 25.— President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt of New York are out in front with the 1932 Presidential sweepstakes fairly begun.

Mr. Hoover has the Republican Presidential field cleared to himself with the party Independents of the Northwest so far unable to get Harlan Johnson of Nebraska to run their fight against the President. The group is now looking at Harding party very seriously.

Governor Roosevelt, his entry last night, Governor Roosevelt was welcomed into the Democratic event with resolutions of endorsement by the North Dakota and Wisconsin Democratic and by the instructions of Alaska's six delegates for him

But a formidable race faces Roosevelt. He has one avowed opponent so far in Governor Ritchie of Maryland. The persistent silence of Alfred E. Smith of New York leaves him still unestimated as a potential opponent.

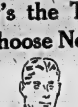
French Paper Urges That Britain Cancel Debts Due France



LONDON, Jan. 25.—Some newspapers, including the Paris advocate isolation of France on the reparations and war debts question.

The Laborite Daily Herald, in an editorial Sunday, urged that if there is no result from the impending conferences between Premier Laval, Premier MacDonald and Premier Laval, Britain should break the vicious circle by one bold stroke, declaring that as far as Britain is concerned reparations are and will remain cancelled, with the war debt or any European power making a similar declaration also being cancelled.

"Negotiation with Washington following a bold statesmanlike declaration to Berlin would have an admirable chance of success," the Herald editorial said.

The Liberal News Chronicle said: "If Britain - cannot persuade France to take the initiative at once, then it should propose such terms for final reparations settlement patiently within Germany's capacity to pay. Before it does either, the government should consider whether it would not be to our own financial advantage in future reparations and offer to remit debts still owing to Britain arising similarly. Should we not cut a better figure by writing down our own debts, if we could point to complete forgiveness as far as lay in our power?"

PAYS PRICE FOR HECTIC SOCIETY LIFE

Tallulah Bankhead, star of "Tarnished Lady," and "My Sin," in both of which she has played the title rôle, individual triumphs far beyond the plot opportunities, has received a contract to star in the enigmatic, excitement-craving self in "The Cheat," a modernized Paramount edition of Hector Turnbull's famous box-office leader of silent days. She has the role created then by Fanny Ward.

With Irving Pichel, gifted character artist most recently featured in "An American Tragedy" and "The Road to Reno," in the "brand new" role originally done by Sessue Hayakawa, there is no reason to believe that Miss Bankhead, who is now playing at the Belle Theatre, will not prove as popular as its non-voice predecessor.

George Abbott, who directed "Ladies of the Jury" and "Tarnished Lady," gets the same assignment here.

The story tell of an alluring woman intrigued by the love-making of a mystic man of oriental culture. In spite of the fact that she is happy and satisfied with her husband, she permits his flirtation, and a gambling debt to draw her into the power of the mystic. As he writes a check to pay one of her indiscretions, the unsatisfied money is provided with which she controls the check. With the check she refuses to consider her promise filled. The after sequences reveal how she is brought to the point of hectic suspense which follows when her vengeful husband, the true gentlemen, brings herself and husband to a mysterious position in court.

Eddie Cantor remains the protagonist of the comedy. "Whoopee" is the stage play with a success that surpassed even the phenomenal record of the "Ziegfeld Follies" and the many hits that the latter had created. Its screen adaptation is Samuel Eric picture-producing, the occasion that inaugurates the partnership between Samuel Goldwyn and impresario Florenz Ziegfeld.

Hundreds of the world's most beautiful girls, gathered from the beauty marts of Europe and Hollywood by connoisseurs no less than Ziegfeld and Goldwyn themselves augment the original stage cast, headed by Paul Sheats, the silver-voiced tenor, Paul Gregory, Chester Conklin, Spencer Charters, the hair young Eddie Grant and a dozen others Thornton Freeland directed the picture.

"Whoopee" played to capacity houses at the Capitol on Saturday, and patrons are advised to be early tonight or Tuesday to secure a good seat.

"WHOOPEE" DRAWS IMMENSE CROWDS

As the first screen musical comedy to which Florenz Ziegfeld gave his personal supervision and skill stagecraft, "Whoopee" which is now showing at the Capitol theatre, according to the critics, does not live up to the glowing and usual talents of the famous impresario. "Whoopee" is very much a continuation of Eddie Cantor's stage success that ran for two years at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, transcribed bodily to the films, with its huge spectacles magnified in size and beauty with the magic of Technicolor to give it reality. Samuel Goldwyn, who produced "the picture," claims that it is the first all-color cinema extravaganza.

Yet despite its mammoth size, "Whoopee" is still the same inimitable comedy that, as "The Nervous Wreck," was one of the most amusing jokes ever written. Ziegfeld managed to retain the uproarious humor of the original story when he put it on the great stage of the New Amsterdam, with music and song and beautiful girls.

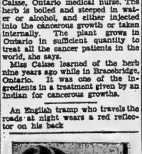
Cancerous Growth Treated With Herb



Toronto, Ont., Jan. 25 (CP) — Phenomenal results in cancerous cases treated by a herb grown in Canada, Dr. Norman Bethune, of Calzee, Ontario medical nurse. The herb is known as Indian tobacco or alcobell, and either injected into the cancerous growth or taken internally. The plant grows in Ontario in sufficient quantity to treat all the cancer patients in the world, she says.

Miss Calzee learned of the herb nine years ago while in Brazeridge, Ontario. It was one of the ingredients in a treatment given by an Indian for cancerous growths.

Kidnappers Free Wealthy Victim

Denver, Jan. 25 (CP)—The kidnapping of Benjamin F. Bower freed the wealthy Bakery official unharmed early Sunday morning after holding him captive for more than one hundred hours.

The $50,000 ransom demanded for his release had not been paid, but Bower was threatened with death if he did not obtain and pay the money after securing his freedom.

His eyes bound with adhesive, the 63 year old part owner of the Campbell-Sells Bakery was freed near Greeley, Colorado, 60 miles from his home and got that rubney ready, we want it."

His face was covered by five days growth of beard. He was pale and weak, save for the shock suffered. He was in no condition for death, he told The United Press.

"Those fellows meant business," Bower said. "They carried their plans off like clockwork and told me they would kill me if I moved, because my wife had failed to observe exactly the instructions in my letter."

FOR VARIETY USE TOMATOES

The housekeeper who keeps canned tomatoes on hand needs little variety for her table. Vitamins also are supplied commonly and abundantly.

In many instances canned tomatoes prove as satisfactory as fresh ones for numerous dishes. Sauces, soups and stews lose none of their interest and savoriness when made with the canned product.

Some cooks strain tomatoes before using, thereby losing the juice, though water cooks out to form sufficient juice to suit their taste. One of the best ways to utilize this juice is to make a tomato jelly salad. Any other vegetables left from the meal can be added to the juice and all simmered with a few slices of onion, whole cloves, parsley and celery. Add salt and sugar as necessary and strain and measure the seasoned juice. A little lemon juice or vinegar may be needed to give flavor to the tomato, but usually the jelly pleasantly tart. Use 1½ tablespoons granulated gelatine to a cup of tomato juice in place of the customary 1 tablespoon gelatine to 1 pint liquid. Pour the jelly into molds and let stand several hours in cold and become firm. Unmold and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Individual molds always are attractive for a jelly salad, and easy to serve try using baking powder can. Mold the jelly in pound or two pound cans, unmold and cut in slices of canned pineapple with maraschino cherries.

A good way to use the tomatoes from which the juice was strained is in canned tomatoes. A combination of tomatoes, strained of seeds, onions and canned corn is put into a buttered baking dish in alternate layers, seasoning each layer with butter crumbs, making the first and last layer of crumbs. Bake for from 20 to 25 or 30 minutes in a hot oven and serve from the baking dish.

Salt codfish baked with tomato sauce makes an economical luncheon dish. The fish must be freshened over night in cold water. Then boil and simmer until tender in fresh water. Arrange in a buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons flour and dot with bits of butter. Cover with 2 cups strained tomato juice and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes. Tomato juice thickens during the baking and makes a sauce for the fish.

Turkish pilaf is a hearty one-piece dish that is suitable for luncheon or family supper.

Turkish Pilaf

One large onion, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 2 tablespoons butter or other shortening, ½ cup rice, 1 cup chopped cooked meat, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon sugar.

Melt butter in frying pan and add onion cut in thin slices. Cook over a low fire for five minutes and add tomatoes just as they come from can. Add rice, meat, salt, salt, pepper, paprika and sugar and add well washed rice. Cover closely and simmer over a low fire or in the oven until the rice is tender and the liquid absorbed. This takes about 45 minutes. It will take about 45 minutes. Stir to keep from sticking and burning before serving.

Cooked or uncooked meat can be used in this dish if more convenient. In the latter case cook with the onion and brown slightly before adding tomatoes and rice.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Putting Shine on The Soul Windows

There are no human eyes that can't be made attractive. You can't change the color, but you can change the shape, and there's no sense in looking like a sick cow unless you're born with safety, be put into them to make them deep-set. But you can sparkle them, and the whole beautifying process depends on the way the lid twitch.

"I'll health, fatigue, nervous irritation, depression and worry all throw on dull shadow on the eye lids. Whatever improves the vitality of the body or peps up the spirits is helpful to the eyes, which explains me to remind the beauty class that nine-tenths of the whole beautifying racket consist of following the maxim of the Golden Rule. Keep the body fit, skipping on the toes, looking after mental health. Eyes are mirrors of the soul, and they reflect with any part of the body they grow dull and lifeless.

There are of course local helps. It is necessary to oil the tissues around the eyes because they are delicate, and they need a moist background and they take on a crepe-like surface as the years pile up. When cold cream is passed around during that half hour of beautifying just before retiring, give the eyelids, upper and under ones, a good greasing.

Eyelids should not be powdered. They should be oiled instead. The eyebrow is defined in the party and brightens them. Any kind of oil, especially vaseline, is food and tonic for the eyelashes. When eye shadows are used, select creamy one which send out a radiance. Use them discreetly, subtly. Heavy shadow is bad taste. Make-up is becoming a fine art; it is out of the powder-puff class. You can put on the drug store health, glow cleverly or you can't get it on at all. That's the law these days, laid down by the law makers of modern pulchritude as expressed by the modern woman.

Eyelashes can be dyed and dyeing is cleaner, safer, more satisfactory than daily contact with black crayon or the mascara brush. Eyebrows are also dyed. You go to a beauty shop and have a dye party; only takes half an hour and usually costs about two dollars.

To keep the eyes clear, to keep the white of the eye from getting grey and yellow, to do a lot of things. You get to bed at a reasonable hour. You eat plenty of green salads, vegetables and fruits. You go to the various exercises of elimination are active—lungs throwing off stale air, kidneys flushed by drinking at least eight glasses a day, the intestinal tract kept in an orderly state. Skin incited to function by daily baths which clear away poisonous fluids and dead scales.

Add to all this a gayety of spirit which is reflected in the eyes and you have no problem at all about keeping face lanterns glowing.

YOUTHFUL WORSHIP

By Constance Cashven

We are all here-worshippers to a large extent, and our adulation often takes on a more or less conscious imitation of the person admired. This is more especially true when we are very young.

The very young child plays he is a fireman from fire-fighting has caught his imagination and he has perhaps seen the picture of a brave man in his family newspaper, lauded for his courage in saving lives, etc. The older boy builds miniature airplanes, meanwhile projecting himself into Lindbergh's place. The high school girl gazes with wide-open eyes at the favorite cinema star, vicariously being that star in real life. Our adolescents read biographies and live for the moment lives of adventure or astonishing success.

All of which is as it should be except for one thing. The part of our heroes' lives into which we usually project ourselves is the moments of their success, the peak of their popularity and acclaim. We actually see ahead of ourselves that moment is but the one drop, the essence of many months, many months and long years of TOIL and GRIT and struggle, which we often doesn't take this into consideration and we can help him to success long before that time. Also the very fact that the supreme moment probably never comes to any of us at all, the true hero, the earnest admirer, will be in the moment of it probably too busy at that moment forging ahead to greater heights to even realize that that moment is but the one drop, the essence of

JUDGE M'EVOY IS STRICKEN

Supreme Court Judge Victim of Paralytic Stroke

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—Suffering a stroke late Saturday night, Mr. Justice J. H. McEvoy of the Supreme Court of Ontario is seriously ill at his hotel here and was unable to continue presiding at the trial of J. D. Mr. Justice Sedgewick will arrive from Toronto tomorrow when it will be decided whether the trial is to continue. If either crown or defence counsel object, the trial is to be adjourned until Judge McEvoy has recovered or traversed until the next sessions. However, Peter White, K.C., crown prosecutor, and George F. Henderson, K.C., defence counsel, said intimating tonight they are agreeable to Mr. Justice Sedgewick presiding after he has become familiar with the case.

OPPOSES GOV'T OWNERSHIP

Montreal Board of Trade Submits Observations to Royal Commission

Montreal, Que. Jan. 23—Opposition to government ownership of Canada's railways is expressed in a submission by the council of the Montreal Board of Trade to the Royal Commission, which has travelled across Canada, investigating transportation problems, was in Montreal, it was not prepared in time the submission has now been sent to Ottawa.

"The council is not impressed with the results attained by government ownership and operation of our public utility" the submission is it "and in our final settlement it is opposed to government ownership of Canada's railways."

Among the recommendations were "No extensions or new lines of railway should be constructed except where absolutely necessary, and where the necessary is not adequately served. Where branch lines are found to be necessary, consideration should be given to their joint construction and operation.

"There should be no purchase of existing railway lines by the Canadian National Railways unless for real or potential value, and then only at prices which may be fully justified."

"Operation of duplicate and uneconomic sections of railway lines which are today unnecessary and likely to be a heavy burden to come, should be discontinued."

OUTSIDE WORLD AWAITS NEWS

Expect Battle Between Police and Demented Man

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 25 Can. Press)—The "outside" awaited word today from the Arctic on the result of the threatened battle to be between Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Albert Johnson, two-gun hermit of the lonely Rat River country, barricaded in his strange cabin 80 miles south of Aklavik and more than 150 miles inside the Arctic circle Johnson has held off two sets rounds.

A week ago a "Mountie" posse set out from Aklavik to make a second serious bid to capture the man wanted for the shooting of Constable A. W. King, on Dec. 21. The posse was to return within eight days and word from Aklavik is expected at any moment.

Fearing arrest since the start of the year, apparently, the man who have not left his cabin since he shot King when the Constable visited the cabin to question the hermit trapper in connection with Indian complaints, their trap lines had been tampered with. King is recovering from a serious bullet wound at Aklavik, where he was taken by fellow-officers.

It is easy to live: it is harder to make giving unnecessary.— Henry Ford.

JIGGS AND MAGGIE 20th ANNIVERSARY

McManus Began Rise To Fame At Age of Five

Gained First Idea for Jiggs From Character He Saw On Stage

One hundred million daily newspaper readers of the world must thank the persistent memory and alert mind of a child of five years, who developed into one of the greatest comic artists of all time, for the keen enjoyment they get from Jiggs and Maggie, famous characters of "Bringing Up Father."

The child who grew to a man and world-wide renown is George McManus. It's a long time between the age of five to the point at 29 where he put the idea gained in those early years to work. McManus was able to bridge the gap and win success.

"Birth" of Jiggs

"Remarkable as it may seem, there is no doubt in my mind that Jiggs came to me when I went to see William Barry, outstanding Irish comedian of his day, act in," The Rising Generation" when I was only five years old," McManus recalls.

Young George McManus might never have had the opportunity of seeing Barry in his long-remembered part if it had not been for his father, a stage carpenter at the St. Louis Grand Opera House, and one of the best known figures in the St. Louis of his day.

"Barry, being one of the foremost actors of the day, was naturally a great attraction, resulting in almost a dim extent that I was witnessing a great performance," McManus declares. "I naturally sat up and took extra notice. As a result, the plot of "The Rising Generation" has impressed me that I never have forgotten it.

"Jiggs was a big part of a mystery New York Irishman, who 'struck it rich'. When working out "Bringing Up Father" the characters first presented in my mind as Jiggs and Maggie took shape."

Father in Destiny's Role

The elder McManus again stepped in to determine the path of his son's life ten years later. George, a 10-year old schoolboy, had been caught in the class room action of drawing pictures during lessons. The teacher, by way of punishment, sent the evidence with a note to Mr. McManus informing him of his son's grave offense. George duly admitted his guilt and resigned himself to pay the usual penalty in the woodshed. However, the father and offending artist met and when he was told the lad that if he wanted to leave school he could secure work in the art department of the St. Louis Republic. The teacher's note was never served only to call Mr. McManus' attention to his son's talent. And having learned of it, he had taken the offending works to an editor and obtained a job for George.

After several years at the stupendous salary of $3 a week, George was raised to $6. He became convinced that he would never get rich at such a pace. New York was his idea of a great place to make one's fortune, so at the age of 19 he left.

Started With New York World

After a good deal of disappointment he landed a job with the old New York World. He drew a succession of comic strips, each of which increased his deftness of touch and humor.

In 1912, when he was 29, McManus joined the World Features Syndicate which made it possible for newspaper readers throughout the country to read the same comic strips at the same time. McManus started experimenting with a strip built around the efforts of new-rich family to polish up the rolling Irish for entrance into society. The impression left by Jiggs and Maggie was still in his mind, and as he "shadowed for the first time, "Bringing Up Father" evolved with Jiggs and Maggie in the leading roles.

By 1913 it was appearing in 600 papers and today it has one hundred million readers.

During all this time, McManus was also expanding his conception of the strip. He changed Jiggs and Maggie from essentially Irish characters, and put them in situations built upon universal human behavior.

LAUD McMANUS

Sweetly D. Buzz, Major-General, U.S. Marines, retired: "Along with millions of others I have laughed at and loved Jiggs and Maggie. May their shadows never grow less. George McManus has added laughs them to the joys of life."

Ogden L. Mills, undersecretary of the Treasury: "It has always seemed to me that those who bring humor and laughter into the every-day world make a much greater contribution to human welfare than is generally acknowledged. This is particularly true in times like these."

Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the Interior: "Life has been rather congested for me for a number of years, but I have always been able to find time for a glance through the domestic adventures of Piggs and Maggie. I shall have to admit that it is the only thing of the sort that has persistently intrigued my interest, largely because of the skillful portrayal of human psychology which is often brought out with a single sweep of the pen."

Bad News for Jiggs

Christmas Greetings for Maggie and Jiggs—Sent to her care of the Leader-Democrat Daily Statch.

Proving how thoroughly George McManus' characters, Jiggs and Maggie, crave the world, this deadly looking household weapon which has so often come to the hand of irate Mrs. Jiggs, was sent to her on Dec. 21, 1931. In case it is unrecognizable, it is a frying pan.

How to Prepare Jiggs' Favorite Dish—RIGHT

Once upon a time corned beef and cabbage was just a staple dish for an economical meal. The fame it has attained is by Jiggs led to experimentation in its preparation, so today corned beef and cabbage properly prepared takes rank as a culinary masterpiece.

Undoubtedly, to be at its most succulent, the dish must be prepared by cooking its ingredients separately. Rump, plate or brisket beef may be used. When the principle ingredients have been obtained, the cook should follow this recipe, which is the tested composite of thousands submitted in a national contest:

Corned Beef

Allow the corned beef to soak a week in brine — longer, if possible. Put the meat in a large pot or pan, as full of water as practical. Bring to a boil, drain the meat, fill the pot again with cold water, and boil a second time and skim off the foam. Permit to cook at least four hours. Six hours of cooking brings the meat to its greatest delicacy.

Cabbage

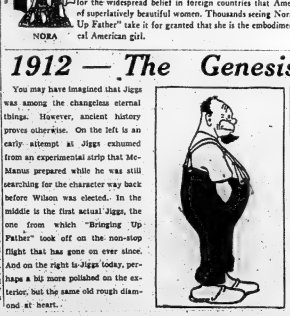
Use new whole cabbage. Remove outer leaves and quarter. When corned beef is done, cook the cabbage until tender in the broth of the meat.

Corned Beef and Cabbage

Place cabbage on platter. Cover with slices of corned beef. Garnish platter with potatoes. Serve with a piping hot with horseradish as relish.

Stars of The Supporting Cast

NORA



"Bringing Up Father" is, of course, Maggie and Jiggs. The two are as synonymous as corned beef and cabbage. On the other hand corned beef and cabbage is synonymous with another element of "Bringing Up Father"—a very vital element, since he is the reason both for Maggie's rigid surveillance of Jiggs, and Jiggs' unquenchable desire to get out of the house evenings. As all good Americans know, he is none other than Nora Dinny Moore. Dinny made her first appearance in 1916 and has been increasingly important ever since.

The second of the important lesser lights is that vision of loveliness, Jiggs' and Maggie's daughter, Nora. Curiously, she is one of the causes for the widespread belief in foreign countries that America is a land of superlatively beautiful women. Thousands seeing Nora in "Bipnging Up Father" take it for granted that she is the embodiment of the typical American girl.

DINTY MOORE

1912 — The Genesis of Jiggs — 1932

You may have imagined that Jiggs was among the changeless eternal things. However, ancient history proves otherwise. On the left is an early attempt at Jiggs exhumed from an experimental strip that McManus prepared while he was still searching for the character way back before Wilson was elected. In the middle is the first actual Jiggs, the one from which "Bringing Up Father" took off on the non-stop flight that has gone on ever since. And on the right is Jiggs today, perhaps a bit more polished on the exterior, but the same old rough diamond at heart.

300 to Honor Cartoonist At Banquet

Unique Tribute Rewards Creator of "Bringing Up Father" Comic Strip

One of the most unique tributes ever to reward work well done will get under way within a few days when a man and two characters cut of an inkwell become the centre of a nation-wide demonstration in gratitude for twenty continuous years devoted to inciting the world to laughter.

The occasion is the twentieth anniversary of the marriage of Jiggs and Maggie, which is to say that "Bringing Up Father," George McManus's world famous comic strip is twenty years old this month. It has been two decades since Maggie set herself the heart-breaking task to mention the china and crockery destroying—task of making a gentleman out of Jiggs.

The climax of the recognition will come when three hundred guests, drawn from the leaders in every field of endeavour, will honor McManus on January 25, at a dinner in Washington, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

Thus, appropriately enough, Maggie and Jiggs will be feted in the capital of a nation which has taken them to its heart as a national hero and heroine.

They've gone a long way since they started, Maggie and Jiggs. They've travelled the world over; they speak in 29 languages in 71 countries; 100,000,000 readers in every part of the globe watch for them and count the day incomplete until they learn what fortune, good or bad, has befallen or in store for the luckless, long-suffering spouse of mustachioed Maggie.

Since husbands and wives can be counted upon to like their husbands pair, with a universality that stamps their true greatness, have become the undisputed world's No. 1 favorites. Even wives almost anywhere, it is not difficult to understand why Jiggs and Maggie should have no recognition from all the world's various peoples and everyday folk. But it was a revelation, as congratulations poured in following announcement of their twentieth anniversary, that they were no less familiar and welcome to those who sit in the seats of the mighty. Government officials, financial leaders, sports champions, artists, writers, actors—all joined in a deluge of messages of congratulation, thanking him for having given them two laughing words in Jiggs and Maggie, praising him as a benefactor to humanity, expressing hope that he will add many more years of "Bringing Up Father." The saga of Jiggs' and Maggie's progress, it seems, is no less potent for the world's favored millions than it is for its millions of unsung readers.

It is a far cry from the heights of his present eminence to 1912, when George McManus was experimenting with the "Bringing Up Father" idea.

The years have shown how wisely McManus judged in following out his idea for "Bringing Up Father." From the tremendous following they have gathered in their twenty years, it has been estimated that Maggie and Jiggs are the world's greatest entertainment unit. The combined host of those who laugh at their daily totals a figure far beyond that achieved by any other character in their own field or in the talkies or radio.

LAUD McMANUS

W. N. Doak, secretary of Labor: "Jiggs and Maggie have been married for a score of years, and it has taken the genius of George McManus for the general good nature of Jiggs to keep Queen Victoria from the World's end enjoyed the McManus humor. It is far better to bring laughter than to bring tears."

James Rolph, Jr., governor of California: "I am pleased to have an opportunity of extending my congratulations to George McManus for his timely successful years with those funny characters, Jiggs and Maggie. His pictures have delighted the hearts of millions."

Jiggs As a Leatherneck

Sergeant Jiggs', mascot and sergeant-by-brevet of the U. S. Marine Corps casts a wary eye on Lieut. Colonel John J. Doolittle, distinguished leatherneck marksman, at Camp Perry, Ohio. Perhaps you didn't know world-famous Jiggs was in the Marines. Well he is, at least to the extent of representing a mascot. Jiggs, however, is better known as the principal target of Maggie's unerring aim in "Bringing Up Father", read by 100,000,000 daily enthusiastes of George McManus' irresistable funny cartoon.

"... Right This Way! See Biggest Show on Earth!"

Nothing High Hat

Interviewing George McManus is as simple and pleasant a task as I have ever had. The average successful man in any line of endeavor always begins his interview with some sort of pompous declaration. As for instance:

"Ahem. As I sit back and survey the many things I have accomplished in this world, I feel that I owe my success to the ever-increasing human understanding. I think and I know——"

Not so with George McManus. His sense of humor is much too great for such type of bunk. "Say, I really struggled for an idea. I finally hit one. And here I am."

We broached upon a particular phrase for a cheap like George McManus. We don't dig into the dictionary for the over-worked adjectives of praise. We merely call him "a regular guy"—and the world generally knows what we mean. . . .

He is a schoolboy in St. Louis, George's early life was much the same as hundreds of thousands of other kids the nation over. He wasn't the most brilliant boy in his class by several hundred miles. The only subject to which he devoted any great amount of time was his drawing, that subject fascinated him.

Dad Had Nerve

His father, George McManus, Sr., often looked at his boy and shook his head dubiously. "What in the world could come, he was afraid, of a boy who was forever drawing pictures. But the old man didn't worry too much about it. He, too, had a sense of humor.

A friend slopped the father one day and asked him what the boy was coming along.

"How in hell can he be in school? Inquired the friend. "Is he steady?"

Senior replied:

"I should say he is steady," he retorted. "He's been in the same grade for two years."

The elder McManus must have been a great comforter in his day. He was the manager of the old St. Louis Grand Opera House. And what he didn't know about the actors and actresses of that period, Peggy Joyce couldn't tell him.

"When I was fifteen, I was tired of school. The growing teacher had nothing left to give me—and the father insisted that I work. Instead of going into the theatrical line, I did something that my old man's permission I became a newspaperman."

Got $5 a Week First

That, a little more than thirty years ago. George McManus went to work for the old St. Louis Republic, at $5 a week. That passed out of existence along about the time that Fannie Ward celebrated her seventieth birthday.

For two years, in addition to his job, George McManus did everything but sweep the office of the Republic for the staggering sum of $5 a week. And I'm not sure he didn't include the broom every once in so often, at that.

After two years, George complained about his salary. They promised him a raise. When Saturday came around, he opened the envelope with trembling hands. The paper had made good on the raise. There was $6 in his envelope.

"It's not fair," he lamented. "I drew pictures, cover murders, write editorials and sell advertising. Now they give me a raise and it's only one dollar. It's not fair."

The old man sat back and wagged a finger at his son.

"George," he cried, "you're an ungrateful boy. You're lucky to be where you are. If it wasn't for my influence in this city you'd never have such a job."

When he was twenty-one years of age, George McManus left St. Louis for New York. It would be very close to report here that several New York editors vainly recognized the young man's genius and had almost come to blows in bidding for his service. It would be very close — but I wouldn't be true.

Starves Off To New York

As a matter of strict fact, McManus went to the race track one afternoon and placed $100 on a pony that was marked at thirty to one. By some miracle, the horse won, bons a winner. With all that money in his pocket that night, George St. Louis to be a trifle too small for him. So he said goodbye to people, threw his other collar into grip and took the first train for big town.

Before George McManus made connection with a newspaper in N York, he almost famished for l of food. His money, it seems, appeared with astonishing rapidi If he wasn't a starving artist these lean days, he would have de until a starving man came along

Just when it seemed that he wo have to return to his home to McManus received two offers in day. Fate has a strange way of ing tricks like that. One paper fered him more money than other. But McManus turned do the larger offer and went with paper.

His reason for this was simple. Anything of his that appear in the New York world would published in its associated paper, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. I think I have to explain the situat further.

"Ready Money Ladies"

McManus's first comic strip the World was "Ready Money Ladies", That couldn't have been very short time. Or, if Geo didn't draw it, he performed it.

Then came "Panhandle Pete", cartoon of a lovable tramp. Pe was a character that stood out. "P handle Pete" was George McMan first attempt at a character sket

Interestingly enough, McMa has never had the comic strip tramp such as he created. Pete whose only crime was that "Panhandle" was abbreviated teaches us that such a man a tramp. He is a bolshevik.

For "Panhandle Pete," McMa drew what was then considered still a minor matter in those d and an artist who found his w appearing in more than two or l papers often developed a fine c of settled ease. It was 1912 that the syndication game was to grow into the huge pow is today.

After "Panhandle Pete," and s still working on the World, Mc Manus originated "The Newlywe and Their Baby." In "The Newlywe these strips were enormously p ular and the McManus pres increased accordingly.

Searching For New Ideas

When George went under King Features Syndicate, his first strip was "Their Only Chi which was something like Newlyweds and Their Baby." Ch must have been somewhat anxi over the success of the latter ing overwhelming response. For a ti he was content to let well enough He finally hit upon "Bringing Father." And the rest is history

How did he hit upon the last asked him that. And he ha remember exactly.

"You never know exactly w people are going to like," he sa ed. "You just keep searching new ideas and hope that the n one will be a success.

"I must have outlined fully fo other comic strips before I hit "Bringing Up Father." I remember that it was a year or two before that had gone before. Then, suddenly, it came to me.

Today, after twenty years, "Bringing Up Father" cartoons are being read by more people than ever before. It is published daily in hundreds of newspapers throughout the world.

Some of the changes in the c toon, as required by foreign nati have been interesting. For instan whenever Jiggs wanted corned b and cabbage, the dish was chan for view because the Chinese never tasted the former food.

Jiggs Understands

So rice it was until several bu loads of corned beef could be shipped to China a year or s during some relief work. The Ch understands what the dish is—and it's corned beef that Ji asks for, even in China. Not that there is any certain McManus created the dish.

"I often wonder," mused McMa "why the appeal of "Bringing Up Father" is so universal? I asked an Argentine of my acquaintance why they liked the strip there. I knew they had never se such a character and I wonde why they liked a man like Jiggs. The Argentine laughed. He t me that Argentine women are wo about a dime a dozen and are n rarely treated as a man's equ The idea of Maggie bossing Jig around tickles their sense of hu And that's why they like it."

They like it for another reas George McManus. They like it cause they sense the genius of creator. They like it because gags are human. And they li because it is clean.

They like it most of all, p because you're a "regular guy."

Hellinger Discovers Jiggs' Creator Laughs Even At Own Success

Cartoonist Proves To Interviewer That Sense of Humor is Not Confined to Producing Funny Comic Strips

By MARK HELLINGER.

Just about forty-nine years ago, a proud father stood over a crib in his St. Louis home and took his first look at the face of his newly born son. The child immediately gave vent to a prodigious yawn. Whereupon his father threw up his hands in horror.

"Holy catfish, mother," he cried. "Maybe we'd better strangle the boy. He's going to be a dramatic critic!"

The child in the crib — George McManus, if you must know — did not turn out to be a dramatic critic. He became, instead, the creator of "Bringing Up Father" and the most widely syndicated cartoonist in the world today! And if you think there's a dramatic critic in this universe who wouldn't be happy to swap paychecks with George McManus, you have another think coming.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

"No, he doesn't play fair," Don Jaime protested. "He says one thing and something else, so he can't lose, for that, one of these bright days is the year future I'm going to take your Uncle Bill's conceit down a couple of notches. You know he doesn't play fair!"

He laid finger on lip. "Hush! It's a secret, Evidently," Roberta replied bitterly, after waiting about twenty seconds for him to import the secret. "I think I'll go back to Los Angeles," he announced suddenly. "I see something about the Yankees of that town that aids my powers of divination."

"Am I invited to ride back with you? Or must I mope around the house until you return?"

"I think you had better mope. I have much to do some Quixotic—and you ditch my train of thought." He looked at her keenly, earnestly, and without the slightest flicker of love-light in his eyes. "Are you enjoying your visit at Valle Verde, Roby?"

"Hmmm, I have never had such a good time in all my life. It's so splendidly different—and so are you. It's all so dolce far niente. When I retire in the morning, you're gone, and I wonder what makes you get on the job at six o'clock. Generally you are not home for luncheon, so everybody's genuinely glad to see you when you show up for dinner. And we do have such jolly times in the evening. I like to have you discuss your ranch problems with me—calf-branding, your cotton crop, hay haying, the canal and irrigation system. I think there's poetry in making the desert bloom."

"There's a lot of hard work in it, he answered grimly. "I have to spend considerable time with Ken Hobart, my new general manager, showing him over the ranch, getting him acquainted with the details of the job and telling him how I like things done. You see, next year I'm going to play more ... I've considered if you didn't feel a bit lonely and neglected here."

"Oh, no, Jimmy! You're such a friendly, comfortable person when you are around the house. Will you return from Los Algodones in time for dinner, Jimmy?"

"I don't know. I'll do my best to complete my business and be back in time, I don't relish driving around this country at night because just at present, for me, at night the night has a number of ...

"You mean—"

"I mean that your foreman, Bill Dingle, has been across the Line, and something tells me he went there to hire some renegade to bump me off. I don't particularly blame him for that. A man acts according to his lights, and I gave Dingle and his son a pretty rough deal."

"But you went to town today unarmed, Jimmy!"

He shook his head, half removed his tropical whip-cord coat and displayed a spare under each arm, in a shoulder holster. "I try to appear non-poisonous off the ranch," he explained. "Well, I have a few friends who keep me advised on matters in which I am interested. I'm pretty safe in daylight, but coming home in the dark I'd just as lief have a good man for company. So you stay home, Roberta, and I'll take Ken Hobart with me. He's very reliable."

Her eyes were wide with apprehension. "Please wait until morning," she pleaded, but he shook his head and with a nod left her, to drive over to the men's quarters for his foreman. Roberta stood in the patio entrance and watched him—Don Jaime—come out of the saddle room, receive his orders and go to his own adobe bungalow for his coat and a couple of carbines and ammunition belts. Then the two drove away, and Roberta, with terror in her heart, went to her room and wept. Then Mr. Imagination pictured Don Jaime Miguel Higuenes, all bloody and torn, lying in the dust of the road to Los Algodones.

Twenty-Sixth Instalment:

In the late afternoon Don Jaime dropped into a vacant chair beside Crooked Bill on the verandah of the Mansion House, after first inquiring in Spanish, if the chair was reserved for any friend of his.

"Not at all," Crooked Bill replied in the same language, and then hailing, for the year had been long since his tongue had caressed so many vowels. "Help yourself, my friend."

"I thank you." Don Jaime replied in English. "I observe you do not speak Spanish too well, I beg pardon for addressing you in that tongue, but observing that you appeared to be of this country I supposed you spoke the language of the country."

"Never was much of a hand at foreign languages," Crooked Bill replied.

Don Jaime produced two cigars and handed one to his neighbor.

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Had bad dizzy spells

Afraid to leave house . . . feared awful dizziness would make her keel over. She used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in tablet form.

Crooked Bill saw that it was a brand that retailed at three for a dollar, and decided he might risk it. "Much obliged," he murmured. "I'm a stranger here," he added.

"I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Blodgett. I am Jaime Miguel Higuenes."

Crooked Bill started noticeably. "Ah, you have then heard of me?" Don Jaime's face betokened mild surprise and inquiry.

"Why, yes, Senor Higuenes—if you will forgive me for bringing up a delicate subject, I believe you're the young man who waited old Don Antrim into the bosom of Abraham."

"I had the pleasure," Don Jaime replied modestly.

"Would you mind shaking hands with me, Senor Higuenes? That was a first-class job of work you did on Tim. I'm delighted to meet you, sir."

"The pleasure is mutual, Mr. Blodgett. You knew Antrim?"

"I should tell a man. He skinned me on a cow deal once.

Don Jaime smiled.

"What part of our glorious Lone Star state do you hail from, Mr. Blodgett?" he inquired presently.

"I come from El Paso." That was true. Crooked Bill had changed trains there.

"Thinking of settling in this part of the state?"

"Oh, no! Fact is, I came down here a-ways to buy those sheep from Don Antrim's estate."

"This is most unfortunate, Mr. Blodgett. I am a cowman and I had no idea I was fraternizing with a sheepman."

Crooked Bill fixed this young man's gay frankness and humor, although it disturbed him. Here the offended man was the last type of male biped to appeal to his niece. Undoubtedly Don Jaime was one who could fence with that young woman, a foeman worthy of her steel. He had guessed as much after reading Don Jaime's letter to him and now he was certain of it.

"I hear Antrim's niece, who is his heir, is a guest at your ranch, Mr. Higuenes," he said cautiously.

Don Jaime nodded.

"Is she anything like her uncle?"

"Don Antrim was her misfortune, not her fault. Miss Antrim is, without doubt, the most delightful, fascinating, provoking, adroit, belligerent, sportsmanlike, and honest young lady it has ever been my fortune to meet."

"You're in love with her," Crooked Bill charged.

Don Jaime shrugged. "What else would one expect?"

"Well, do you stand a chinaman's chance?"

"I killed her uncle.'

"Yet she's your guest."

"Oh, she realized I had no other alternative. However, under the circumstances I have thought it the part of wisdom to remain the good friend. I am afraid of that young woman. I fear she would not be an ideal wife for a Higuenes."

"You're an easy young man," Crooked Bill cried sharply, all of his love and loyalty, to his niece instantly outraged. "If she's all that you have just told me she is, she's a prize and you're a lobster not to go in and win her. Forgive me for telling you your business, but I'm an old man and I've known what it is to have that sort of wife."

"I have some pride," Don Jaime murmured sadly, "I could not risk a refusal. It would kill me. Moreover, there is another man—some fellow in New York."

"Oh!" Crooked Bill was relieved. He was discovering things, and discoveries were not unpleasant. He eyed Don Jaime closely. "Some finnt, upstanding, sort of chap," he soliloquized.

"So you're going to buy the Antrim sheep?" Don Jaime resumed.

"I've bought them, subject to the approval of the heir and the probate court.

"I'm afraid neither one will approve, Mr. Blodgett."

"Why? I'm giving all they're worth. I'm no more ..."

"Unfortunately, I want those sheep. They've been feeding for two years on my range. I sold the Antrim mine and they've done so much damage to my pasture, I object to and keep them there and make a profit out of them—for Miss Antrim. She tells me her uncle, who was very rich, has gone broke in the market, and she's sacked the sheep and the ranch to help him out. Says he was highly good to her while he had it money and now she's out going back to work.

"Really?"

"Perhaps."

"That makes it a little binding. I wouldn't like to see you sell those sheep locally. While I can stand a loss as well as another, Miss Antrim's sake, my forebearance would cease if those sheep ranged to anybody else and continued to trespass on my range."

"No, it's state land, but I control the water. So I fear I'll have to out bid you, Mr. Higuenes," Mr. Blodgett."

"I've got my heart set on them, son, and when that happens I usually get what I go after."

Don Jaime concluded it was time to strike. "You went after my dad once—and you didn't get him. He got you—in the heel. And the old pioneer spirit isn't frozen in the veins of Patricio's son, Mr. William B. Latham!"

BRINGING UP FATHER

MR. AND MRS — A WAX FIGURE ALWAYS HAS IT ON MERE HUMAN BEINGS

THE BEASTS OF TAFZÁN, No. 21.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

All went well until the canoe had passed beyond the reef. Here the breeze struck the sail. As the rude craft tossed upon the waves, the apes were half panic-stricken. With difficulty Akut kept them in hand. Then a particularly large wave hit the craft out. They leaped to their feet, all but overturning the boat before, Akut and Tarzan could quiet them.

At last calm was restored and eventually the apes became accustomed to the strange antics of their craft. After ten hours steady sailing the dim coastline loomed before the watchful eyes of the ape-man.

The dugout turned broadside the instant that its nose touched the sand. Immediately it rolled over with all its crew scrambling madly for dhe shore.

The next breaker rolled them over and over, but at length they all succeeded in crawling to safety. The balance of the night the apes sat huddled together beside a fire which Muganda built for warmth. Tarzan and Sheeta, however, were of a different mind. Neither of them feared the black night. Besides, they were hungry. Together they went forth into the forest in search of prey.

Presently the two came stealthily upon a buffalo. At a sign from the ape-man Sheeta sprang upon its great back, burying his strong teeth in the bull's neck. Tarzan rushed in with his knife, grabbing the maddened animal's nose. For several hundred yards the bellowing bull carried his two savage antagonists until at last Tarzan's blade found its heart.

NERVOUSNESS IS CURABLE

Condition Should Not Be Taken as Matter of Course

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
(Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

That general nervousness is on the increase can be no question. We must not, however, accept nervousness as an inevitable condition. We must not belittle it. We must find out, for instance: "Oh, that's nothing; I'm simply nervous."

Nervousness need not persist any more than any other disorder. We do not accept stomach trouble so philosophically, or difficulties with liver, kidney, heart or lungs. When these and other organs function badly we attend to them. We see a doctor and try to put them right again.

But not so with the nerves! The most delicate part of our very being, really, we neglect. The mind, the organ with which we think and feel, which makes or mar success and happiness, and which also is primarily responsible for our failures—this highly-important part of our anatomy is often given but secondary consideration.

Nerves should never be neglected. One never can tell just when a condition which seems trivial may become worse or chronic. Indeed, from irritability, insomnia, poor concentration and faulty memory, unusual and quick fatigue, to such symptoms as fear, obsessions, over-sensitiveness, self-depreciation, ideas of guilt, impending danger, etc., the steps are often shorter than is generally supposed.

Yet nervousness has a cause and that cause can be found!

First of all the physical wellbeing of the body as a whole should be looked into. One should not think of the nervous system, including the mind, as something apart from the rest of the organism. Body and mind constitute a single unit. One depends upon the other. When one functions badly you may be sure that some correlative activity elsewhere in the body is likewise not working at topmost efficiency.

Indigestion that has been going on for a long time, because of the retention of toxic products and waste, may cause nervousness. Infections in the germs, teeth, tonsils, sinuses, etc., may also be responsible. Disorders of the heart, kidneys, lungs, liver—in fact, of any organ—ought to be suspected as possible offending agents.

For nervousness, therefore, a general and thorough physical examination is always indicated.

Then, on the mental side, our thought processes may be the direct and chief cause for nervous ailments, of whatever kind.

Repeatedly should the emotional life of the individual be taken into account.

It is safe to say that if the love life of any person is maladjusted, some degree of nervousness is sure to follow. The way we feel toward the opposite sex, toward our children, toward our mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters as well as other relatives may actually determine such symptoms as sleeplessness, guilt, fear that something dreadful is about to happen, etc.

For our emotional roots lie in what psychologists are pleased to call our "family romance." Within the intimate family, as children, our emotional impressions are laid down, as well as our repressions; and the degree of emotion which we possess, plus the degree to which we have learned to let it out or hold it in check, plays a most powerful role in leading to our successes and failures, our happiness and our misery.

Therefore, never belittle nervousness, no matter how much or little it may be upsetting you. Study yourself. Find out what you can about it yourself. If necessary, consult a specialist in such matters.

Predicts More Prosperous Times

London (By The Canadian Press)—Basil Dean, actor, producer, manager, stage director and dramatic author in a recent speech at the film studio at Ealing forecast a more prosperous time for British films. He said that in the studios they would produce two classes of pictures, one for distribution in this country and in the British Empire and the other for world distribution.

"In the case of the second class," he said, "we have a fifty-fifty financial arrangement with an American company, and this will mean that from time to time we shall have the proportion of American star actors and actresses, who have a better selling angle than British artists, in our pictures." Mr. Dean announced that Jack Buchanan, actor an dproducer, would make a film at the studios in the spring.

TARIFF PLANS GO FORWARD

British Government is Not Daunted After Disagreement

London, Jan. 23 (Canadian and Associated Press Cable)—Plans for launching the government's new general protective tariff proposals, a departure from Great Britain's traditional free trade policy were hashed out today after the amicable difference of views in the cabinet yesterday.

General belief is the tariff will call for 10 to 15 per cent. imports on manufactured and semi-manufactured goods, with provision for empire preference as in the emergency tariff schedules, although there is no confirmation of the latter assertion.

Prime Minister MacDonald is expected to introduce the bill soon after the House of Commons reassembles on February 3. Supporters of the plan said they were moved by the "stern compulsion of events." It will be left to a free vote, and three members of the cabinet are expected to vote against the tariffs, Sir Herbert Samuel, home secretary; Sir Donald MacLean, president of the Board of Education, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, secretary of state for Scotland — all confirmed free traders. Others of the national cabinet who nominally are free traders are prepared to support the tariffs, it is indicated.

Fliers Take Off in Leisure Flight

Gogama, Ont., Jan. 23. — Jari Grubbstrom and W. H. Cross took off in their large cabin aeroplane at 11.45 a.m. E.S.T. today for Hearst, the next stop on their flight from Montreal to Victoria, B.C.

The fliers had arrived here shortly before dark last evening, from Sudbury. From Hearst they are expected to go to Sioux Lookout and thence to Winnipeg, pursuing a leisurely schedule with frequent stops.

Box Factory Burns In Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 23 (CP)—Fire early this morning destroyed the Canadian Box Factory, in the south end of Winnipeg, causing damage estimating at $30,000. The blaze was one of the most spectacular here in several months. Twenty men are thrown out of work as result of the fire.

Dog Lives in State in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. — There are no Wendels any more, but Toby, aristocrat of poodle dogs, lives on. For him, monarch in an eerie, ghost-like "castle" on Fifth avenue life is little different than in the days when he was the constant and almost the sole companion of a master beloved.

Behind the forbidding spiked walls and barred doors of the $2,000,000 mansion, three faithful old servants set the stage for the prologue of a fantastic tragedy. They prepared, under the flickering light of gas lamps, the strangest Christmas celebration the 75-year-old house has ever known. At that party Tobey was the lone guest.

In the somber dining room, with its hand-carved panels of black walnut and its massive banquet table covered with red velvet, Tobey's extra holiday ration of calves' liver was placed on his specially-constructed dog table. Then he was taken for a romp in the yard that real estate men coveted for generations, but were denied because the Tobeys had to have their walled in runway.

It is all as Miss Ella, last of the famous family, would have wished. For years she lived virtually alone in the sequestered mansion surrounded by skyscrapers—alone except for three servants and a Tobey. Few ever gained entrance to the house, where electricity, telephones and other signs of modernity were banned, but the Tobeys had the run of the place.

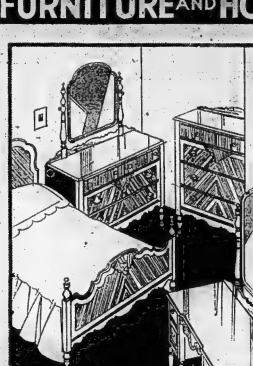
Then Miss Ella died. The will was filed. It left most of the vast fortune to religious institutions. It left the mansion to Drew Seminary. Tobey was not mentioned — and Tobey was forgotten by most everyone as claimants by the dozen started a fight for the estate.

But Charles G. Knox, counsel for one after another of the Wendels, decided that Tobey is still in the big house, still living in the style to which he grew accustomed, still being treated like a king.

CHINA'S CASE BEFORE LEAGUE

Will Ask Powers to Help Quench "Fire" in Orient

Geneva, Switzerland Jan. 25 (AP) —When the League of Nations Council assembles on Monday, W. W. Yen, Chinese ambassador to the United States, who is representing his country in the League, will ask that immediate steps be taken to quench the "conflagration" in the Far East, he said today.



"We can't be expected to be patient any longer," he said. "The council must say what it means by the League covenant and the Kellogg pact. We are told that there is no state of war. If that's so I'm afraid we don't know any international law. As a matter of fact we have learned more international law in the past five months than we learned in fifty years."

Dr. Yen implied that China's appeal would be extended to all articles of the covenant in a test of the validity of international treaties.

Halifax Marine Tower is Tested

Halifax, N.S.—The new marine tower, or leg, erected at Pier 23 at a cost of $100,000, has been found to be entirely satisfactory in final tests made early this month according to the Halifax Harbor Commission.

The new leg, for unloading grain from ships, is reported to be one of the most important facilities that have been provided in the course of Halifax's port development. It rounds out the elevator facilities so that the port now boasts one of the most modern plants on the continent.

As a result of this modern equipment, greatly increased grain traffic through the port is expected. Its marine tower having a capacity of discharging 10,000 bushels an hour as compared with 2,000 bushels using old methods. The saving estimated at five cents a bushel would total about $10,000 on the first shipment.

An official report of the Halifax Harbor Commission showed that receipts for the first week of the New Year were 108,329 bushels as compared with none for the same week of last year, and deliveries for the week amounted to 134,062 bushels as against 69,432 bushels in 1931. Grain exported since December 3 amounted to 360,000 bushels, while at this date last year none had been exported.

Next 6 Months Testing Time for World Says Borden

Fate of World Decided in Next 6 Months Says Ex-Premier Sir R. Borden

Question to Be Decided is For Peace Or Armament Race

CRUCIAL PERIOD

Contestants in Great War Can Make World Progress By Cooperation

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26.—"The next six months will be critical in the world's history," Sir Robert Borden stated today in his presidential address to the annual meeting of the Crown Life Insurance Company. Upon their outcome will greatly depend the hope of immediate recuperation and restoration of reasonably normal conditions," he said.

"The world is at parting of the ways," he said. "Is it to be guided, by the principles of co-operation and renunciation of war set forth in the league covenant and in the Briand-Kellogg pact, so that hence forth never shall nations be permitted to outlaw any nation that wantonly disturbs the world's peace; or is like supreme authority the system of intense militarism, huge armaments and war-like alliances" therein, he thought, lies the short, sharp test of the world's peacemanship.

Peacemaking Co-operation.

"If the nation-participants of the world war would unite in wholehearted co-operation as the belligerent nations did during the war years, Sir Robbert declared, normal conditions would return without great delay. "In 1914" he said, "we were told that financial exhaustion would limit the world war to six months but under compelling pressure of necessity and by co-operative utilization by each states of its national resources on the full, the war lasted nearly four years longer than the limit which the prophets defined.

What Eastern Canada needs, he declared, is the high courage and strong resourcefulness of the west. Despite our failure of crops, the great portions of the three prairie provinces, supported by Saskatchewan and Westerners were determined to look forward, not backward. "Let all Canadians face the future in the same splendid spirit," Sir Robert added.

World Influences.

Reviewing Canada's economic position, the former Prime Minister stressed that the future of the world grows smaller, each nation becomes more and more subject to the influence of world condition. Great industrial empires, built on gold standard, he said, and the depreciation of currency of many other countries had necessarily reacted upon this country. On the other hand, these influences operate to change situation decidedly in Canada's favour.

Canadians had every reason for facing the future with confidence, he said. Notwithstanding unemployment, low prices for staples and excessive expenditure in the past, the economic position of the Dominion is sound to the core, the banking system is strong and stable, resources are unimpaired and the people industrious and enterprising.

"What country in the world," can meet temporary depression with firmer heart and higher hope?"

Nothing Abnormal in Overdraft

Quebec, Que., Jan. 26—On December 31 last the bank account of the Province of Quebec was overdrawn $14,124,197.77, Premier Taschereau told the house last night in reply to questions by Alex Guertin (Conn. Hull) of that total $3,794,139 was on account of excess ordinary expenditures, the balance on account of capital and trust funds.

"There is nothing abnormal in that," the premier explained.

Bond Issue Meets Hearty Response

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 26.—The Dominion Securities Corporation announced today that the $25,000,000 issue of Province of Ontario bonds had been well received by Canadian investors.

Soon after the books opened the $12,500,000 issue of 3-year issue was over-subscribed and large subscriptions were received for the $20,000,000 issue of 15- year 5 1-2% bonds.

Dean of Aviators Dies of Accident

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 26—Dean of aviators in this country—Eddie Stinson is dead.

His long and sometimes perilous career as a flyer came to an end early this morning in the Illinois Central Hospital from injuries suffered when a huge Stinson-Detroiter plane fell to earth in a public links golf course in Jackson Park, not far from the shoreline of Lake Michigan.

The accident occurred last evening while the flyer and three companions were attempting to return to the Wayne, Ind., factory of the Stinson Corporation of which he was president. His three companions were injured.

N.Y. MARKET IS UNCHANGED

Freight Car Loadings Show Small Gain of 8,000 Cars

U. S. Steel rose fractionally, then eased off, selling slightly under yesterday's closing, and had an interval of strength. Cotton Belt common rose more than a point and the preferred 13 points. Such issues as Southern Pacific, New Haven and Baltimore and Ohio lost early gains of a point, and New York Central Steel divided should be one of the American Can. While Wall Street continued to take a hopeful view of the railway wage negotiations, earnings statements appearing for December and for the full year of 1931 were not favorable and advance estimates of the December gross from outside for the week end January 16, indicated an increase of only about 8000 cars, or but a slight fraction of the usual seasonal gain for the week.

Traders were generally disappointed to extend themselves until the U. S. staged fractionally. Such issues as way.

13 WARSHIPS MORE ON WAY

Japanese Fleet Ordered to Appear Off Shanghai

Tokyo, Jan. 26.—Thirteen addition al Japanese warships were ordered by the navy office to proceed immediately to Shanghai from the Sasebo naval base. The new order, it was stated, was issued because of the increasing gravity of the Shanghai situation. Seven Japanese warships previously were reported ordered up in the Whangpo River opposite the Chinese city.

Babe Coos and Smiles on Eve of Cranium Operation

New York, Jan. 26.—Baby Diana Moore and her "poor little brain" went under the X-ray today preparatory—perhaps—to a 1,000-to-one gamble with death.

"I'd take the chance," said the 5-month-old infant's mother, Mrs. Lillian Moore, "even if it were one in a million. I think any mother who wouldn't is a coward."

Little Diana, confronted with a life of idiocy unless science can relieve the pressure of the too-firmly knit skull about her cramped brain, coos a little and smiles much. She is physically perfect, but has been backward in mental development.

There was a consultation of four doctors yesterday. None of them would discuss the case, but Mrs. Moore—who is only 19—said one of the four surgeons had opposed the operation.

The X-ray examination today was to determine if there is enough room for the growth of the little brain to develop, without a portion of the skull to permit the brain to develop.

ATMOSPHERE IN DARTMOOR TERRIFYING

Hoarse Whispers in Grim Prison Tell of Mutiny

SIGNALS GIVEN

Official's Story of Awe Inspiring Scenes in Worst of Riots

Princetown, Eng., Jan. 26 (AP)—A plot aiming at a mass escape of convicts from Dartmoor prison this afternoon was given by a prison official today as the reason for the summoning of strongly-armed troops last night.

Coming out of the institution after a 48-hour stretch of duty, necessitated by the worst penal outbreak in its history, Major Bundey and followed by extraordinary precautions when three civilians were attempting to return to the Wayne, Ind., factory of the Stinson Corporation of which he was president. His three companions were injured.

Their hands upon their hands over their mouths and in loud whispers arranged what purported to be a mass escape for this afternoon.I attribute the military precautions taken to the wide overheard of this scheming.

"Besides all this menacing undertone of conversation, we saw convicts signalling from one block of cells to another. They put their hands through the bars and in the British Morse code messages could be seen waving like semaphores and signalling going on with handkerchiefs.

Like Fortress

Old Dartmoor prison, where several hundred prisoners attempted an outbreak Sunday, resembled today a fortress. Armed troops prepared for a riot attack from without as well as from the restless prisoners within.

"I have reason to believe some attempt may be made by outside people to force the prison," Colonel Prison Commissioner Patterson, at whose call a division of armed infantrymen was thrown around the prison last night guarding all entrances to the moorlands.

Then the rumors that a determined attempt may be made to release the prison from the outside capped the climax. Altogether, the atmosphere was electrifying. Even today there was a continual rumble caused by the grumbling and muttering of hundreds of prisoners uneasy."

His confirmed reports that an extensive organization was formulated prior to Sunday mutiny. "I myself found ten butcher knives hidden in various cells," he added, "and in one block discovered bundles of picks and fire bars and all sorts of improvised weapons.

BRITISH ATTORNEY GENERAL RESIGNS

Sir William Jowitt, one of the greatest legal minds in the Motherland, and right-hand adviser to Premier MacDonald, has had to resign from the Cabinet as a "safe seat" could not be found for him. As a National Labor candidate in the recent election he was defeated but kept his portfolio in anticipation of a seat being found. No Government member with a good seat was willing to relinquish it for the Attorney General, so he has resigned. William is shown leaving his London residence with his sister, Miss Kathleen Jowitt.

N. NATHANSON AND PARTNERS STAND TRIAL

Along With 14 Exchanges Must Face Three Charges

TRIAL BY JUDGE

Defendants Are Charged With Combine Contrary to Statute

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26 (By The Canadian Press)—Canadian Famous Players Corporation Limited, N. L. Nathanson, Samuel Bloom, Samuel Fine, and 14 motion picture industry exchanges must face trial on two charges of restraint of trade under the Criminal Code, and a third under the Combines Investigation Act, Mr. Justice Garrow ruled today.

His Lordship refused to quash the indictments on the argument of W. N. Tilley, K.C., for defendants, that no charge had been adequately laid, because motion pictures were not sold to the public. Defendants are charged with operating a combine contrary to the public interest by the Canadian motion picture business.

His Lordship also refused to say what the charges were, of which some under the Criminal Code, regarding forming a conspiracy and some under the Combines Act.

"While I do not think that the charges are the same," Mr. Justice Garrow said, "I do believe that the establishment of the one may tend to establish the other. Some evidence may apply to both, as in Rex Slinger Case in the A.B.C. Investigation."

Accused elected trial without jury.

Presents to Laval British Opinion

Paris, Jan. 26. — Premier Pierre Laval met his colleagues at a cabinet meeting today and later consulted M. Flandin, Minister of Finance, presumably with reference to the proposed meeting with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald about reparations.

Lord Tyrrell, British Ambassador, was expected to inform Premier Laval this afternoon about his government's reaction to the French proposal for a short conference on moratorium to carry over the elections in France and United States.

Strict Military Guard at Shanghai

Shanghai, Jan. 26—Chinese officials maintained a strict military guard over the city today as a result of the tense situation caused by the Japanese demands for dissolution of anti-Japanese organizations, but they denied a state of martial law existed, that new barricades were being erected or that additional troops were being brought here.

Auckland, N.Z., Jan. 26—Wilkins and Smith, in an attempt to break the world record for ten miles, flown his automobile at approximately 150 miles per hour today in his first trial run along Ninety-Mile Beach. He was apparently withholding his speed in preparation for a second dash.

QUEBEC GOV'T DENY RUMORS

Do Not Intend Placing Breweries Under Direct Gov't Control

Quebec, Que., Jan. 26 (CP) — Contrary to reports circulating in the province, the Quebec Government does not intend to take over the breweries and place them under the control of the Provincial Liquor Commission. In denying the rumors in the premier added he would have something to say about the matter from the floor of the legislative assembly now in session.

TWO KILLED IN RESTAURANT

Bomb Planted Near State Capitol in Illinois

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 26—Two persons were killed early today by terrorists who "planted" time bombs in a dance restaurant within sight of the state capitol buildings.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Rungerford, who occupied an apartment over the Cabaret, known as the Italian Villa. They were between 70 and 75 years old.

BOTTLE WAS ONE OF MARMALADE

A capacity turn out greeted the Belleville Collegiate Institute Literati last evening with an added inducement of "A Bottle of Scotch" for every man who attended the performance. However "the Scotch" was a bottle of marmalade which was given to the men as they entered into the building and not what at first was thought the real article. Some four hundred small bottles were dispensed, and so great was the demand for the article that the supply was hurriedly and easily have been given away. The audience was a typical male audience almost to the exclusion of the few ladies who were present.

INSTALLED AS HURON BISHOP

Impressive Ceremony at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 26.—In a simple and impressive ceremony last night, Rt. Rev. Charles Allen Seager, M.A., D.D., LL.D., was installed Fifth Bishop of Huron. More than 1,500 people crowded into St. Paul's Cathedral to witness the ceremony.

Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Bishop of Toronto, and acting Metropolitan of Ontario officiated at the installation ceremony which placed the guidance of one of the most important provinces of the Church of England in Canada under the formal Bishop of Ontario.

The sermon was preached by Rt. Rev. J. C. Roper, Bishop of Ontario, who pictured the episcopate as always the defender of the church's faith and the rallying point for all around which may be accomplished the church's dream of unity.

The chancel of the church provided a colorful spectacle during the ceremony. The scarlet robes of the three visiting Bishops, Bishop Sweeny, Bishop Roper and Bishop D. T. Owen of Niagara, contrasted with the white robes of the choir and the plain black garments of lay officials of the church.

While 1,500 people said the ritual at many those who could not be admitted, because the church could not hold more than a fraction of the number to build that shack and before the roof fell in, I wouldn't have taken the job."

Robillard said he and four friends, who boarded with him, on January 14, came across the tumble-down shack and carried it home for firewood. It has never been inhabited.

ACCOUNTANT HELD

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 26.—Police last night arrested Murray G. Gayfer, 23, after the firm of Carters, Ltd., for whom he had worked ten years as accountant, found falsifications had been discovered in their books and that Gayfer, variously estimated at from $4,000 to $8,000 were missing. The charge under which Gayfer was held was not learned.

CyrDenies He Ever Called Electors My Dear Subjects

Quebec, Que., Jan. 26.—Alvin O. King occupied the office of Governor of Louisiana today while Paul N. Cyr claimed it and a courtroom gubernatorial rebellion was threatened. Meanwhile Cyr, coming to Quebec from his home at Jeanerette, established headquarters at the Montcleone Hotel to plan a campaign of action towards winning the job he claims. Until he is ready to act, he said, he will have nothing more to say.

He said he previously had been misquoted in some instances and denied he ever made a statement opening with "My loyal subjects," which had been attributed to him.

While Cyr laid his plans, King functioned as Governor in Baton Rouge. He took the oath of office yesterday after Huey P. Long quitted the governorship by taking the oath of senator in Washington, D.C.

Beauharnois Probe, War Debt Cancellation, Six Hour Day, Urges Labor

Planks in Platform of Labor Party Presented to Premier Bennett's Cabinet at Ottawa By Labor Today

DOMINION CONTROL OF CARRIERS

Higher Income Tax Schedules Meet With Favor of Labor Party in Presentation to Dominion Government

Ottawa, Jan. 26 (CP)—Organized Labor's legislative programme was laid before Prime Minister R. B. Bennett and his cabinet today. Included in the many-sided programme was a royal commission to investigate Beauharnois; nationalization of banks and credit; cancellation of war debts; public ownership of radio broadcasting; overhauling of the British North America Act; repeal of that section of the criminal code dealing with sedition and free speech; a general tightening of the "fair wage" legislation and imposition of higher income tax schedules.

In dealing with unemployment, representatives of the Trades and Labor Congress offered several remedial suggestions. Briefly summarized these were: authorized public works during period of depression; progressive reduction of hours of labor; stabilization of employment in the industry and gradual increase in wages; and, establishment of a national system of unemployment insurance based on contributions from employers, employees and the state and the government to lead the way in accepting the short hour day and the five-day week.

Allegation Made

During the past few months, the Labor delegation said a determination had arisen "on the party of employers to take advantage of the present conditions to reduce wages." To offset this, it was suggested the government might set an example by enforcing rigidly the 'fair wage' legislation, and only among its own employees but on contract work. "We believe," the delegation proceeded, "that present conditions warrant a policy of still further reduction of hours in order to give a larger number of workers opportunity for employment."

Revision of B.N.A.

To remove many of the barriers to social progress existing through the divided jurisdiction of the Dominion and the provinces, the British North America Act—Canada's written constitution—should be reviewed, "to bring it into harmony with present day conditions and requirements," it was suggested.

SHRINKAGE IN FLOW OF RIVER WATER

Due to the recent snow fall and the attendant frost which has accompanied it with the resultant drying up of the moisture in the ground and the many small streams which have been feeding it, the Moira River has undergone an appreciable drop in the volume of water contained in it for the past few days and is now returning to something like its original level. While the rushing water somewhat subsided a different appearance has been shown itself in the river bed and the banks of the stream. The old dam known as Cooper's Dam has also undergone a change in appearance owing to, the fact that a great deal of the timber constituting it have been washed away by the water which some time ago assumed nearly flood-time proportions.

HARD WORK IS LIFE SUCCESS

Material Success No True Indicator Says Hon. N. Parliament

"Never tie principle to policy" was the keynote of the address delivered by the Hon. N. Parliament at the regular meeting of the Y's Men's Club last evening.

After being introduced, very flatteringly by Fenwick Thompson, President of Y's Men's International, Mr. Parliament stated that he was always glad to be able to address any service club as he thought that any service club was the youngest generation. He considered that the work being done by service clubs in America was a work to be proud of, as it not only was a benefit to the community but also to the individuals themselves.

Mr. Parliament referred to the present times and explained to the members that this was the worst the great men of the world were completely baffled as to more what the outcome might be. He did not blame the leaders of any particular country or nation for the conditions which now prevail but pointed out to the Y's Men that this was the time for young men to take advantage of the situation and build themselves up for the future. He mentioned that the calibre of Abraham Lincoln, who had risen from what one might term obscurity, to become national leaders and a servant to their country and to mankind in general.

"Hard work is the basis for a successful life" quoted the speaker as he went on to point out just what success really meant. "In my average citizen of today, "It is not by the material things by which we judge a man's success, but, by the service which he renders to his fellow citizens," pointed out Mr. Parliament. Another item in the life of the young man, should be "character" for the better the character of young men the better the chance of her being successful" the speaker.

Principle was also a key-note stressed very heavily upon by the speaker. He went on to say that young men should always remember the word "ought" in no uncertain terms for, he should always say to himself "ought I to do this or ought I not to do it," as the case arises. "Never tie principle to policy" said Mr. Parliament, as he went on to show that the leaders of the nations today were much inclined to carry this idea much too far. If young Canadians would adopt the theory of "ought" he thought that nothing would ever stop the progress of Canada as a nation. "Canada is a young nation and needs sturdy young men to study and follow her national affairs," he said. Mr. Parliament went on to show that no country in the world had more right to be proud of her young womanhood than had Canada, for this has been proven not only in the Great War but many times since.

In closing the speaker urged the members of the club to take an active interest in the national affairs of the country as well as the welfare of their children. "Give them to your club the idea of character and do not let principle be policy" and this country is bound to progress under the influence of our young men", said the speaker in conclusion. Al Peters moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker which was very well received.

During the evening community singing was led by Norm. Mayson while Alec Gordon not only played the accompaniment but rendered a piano solo which was highly appreciated by all. A number of fines were imposed and collected by Sergeant-at-Arms, George Pauley much to the merriment of all. President Al Blanchard conducted the chair for the evening.

The war ended in 1918 on the field of battle, but in the field of ideas we have not yet outgrown the conditions which brought that war about.—Nicholas Murray Butler.

Mr. Duke was an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and before leaving work had complained of pains about his heart. Interment was made in Wellington cemetery.

MRS. A. H. FOWLIE

SHAGGY PONY IN RUNAWAY

Disappears Around Pond-ing Street in His Northward Career

A shaggy little pony attached to a two-wheeled cart, minus a well-to-do wheel, the spokes of which were wired fast, with wire, from hills of rope, and with reins dangling over a dapple-grey rump appearing dash-board, put the bit in his teeth made for home from the pasturing at about ten-thirty and set up a fine pace for trotting horses for the distance between here and the Grand Trunk Station, Street.

Who owned the animal and outfit was not learned as there was no driver in sight, and while the horse did not exactly appear to be running away, still it seemed as if he had some definite destination in mind and was prepared to reach that point in the quickest time and by the shortest space of time. The commotion appeared on the streets during the storm of bumps and jolting which the two-wheeled cart and its decrepitude it was in, but there was no attempt made to stop the flight of the falling apart if a sudden turn made by the animal, down a cross street or track at that point was in the near-by Grand Trunk railway and the turn he disappeared around the corner of the store was wide enough to permit the carriage without falling apart. One spectator, who witnessed the sight, attempted to halt the animal by running after it and trying to grab the dangling reins, but the pony outsmarted the man and swerved from his grasp as he made the turn. The route taken after leaving Pinnacle Street was along the old Gilbralter property on round-by the

Skirl of Pipe Heard From Piper Jamie Clarke in Hieland Dress

Bobbie Burns' birthday was commemorated by Rotarians Monday at the weekly meeting with appropriate music and the presence of a piper in costume who gave a real Scotch atmosphere to the occasion. Farewell was also said to Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Worth, who leave shortly for England where they will spend the best part of this year. Mr. Worth is Past President of Belleville Rotary Club and a hard worker in the cause of Rotary and he will be greatly missed by the members. Presentation was made to Mr. Worth of an illustrated book upon Ontario to remind him of home when across the water. Leo Riggs had charge of the program with Sandy Burrows leading community singing. Vocal solos were rendered by Charles Spalding of Cleveland and Harold Barrett of Belleville, Jamie Clarke, the piper, in full Scottish costume, played several stirring Highland airs in memory of Scotland's immortal Bard. Jamie Clarke is a real piper, for he has displayed his way around the world with Tom Powers and the Hillcrest Band of Belleville, along with Prof. Hamilton's band. Some of the pronouncement was made that the Toronto Skating Club had consented to return to Belleville and give one of their delightful fancy skating programs, the skating tentatively set as early in March.

Chinese Proprietor Tells of Violent Robbery in Wallaceburg

Wallaceburg, Ont., Jan. 26—Three men, whose names police decline to make public, last night were under arrest and a fourth was sought in what was described as a violent robbery of a cafe owned and managed by Charles Bon, Chinese.

Bon told police he was aroused from his sleep by several men who stood for sandwiches. While he was preparing them, he said, someone entered the cafe and struck at his head. He said he was then knocked unconscious by his supposed customers and that when he recovered his senses he found $80 missing from the cash register.

PROVINCE FLOATS LOAN OF 25 MILLIONS

15 Year Issue Yields 5.90 Per Cent, 3 Year Bonds Bring 6 Per Cent

Offering Available Across Dominion of Canada Today

HENRY CONFIDENT

Fifteen Year Bonds Available in Denominations as Low as $500

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—Ontario's new domestic loan—the first domestic loan to be floated by this province since 1923—was officially announced yesterday by Hon. Edward A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, at $25,000,000 of which $10,000,000 will be issued in the form of 15-year debentures, and the balance will run for a period of three years. The 15-year bonds are being offered to yield 5.90 per cent., while the smaller amount of 3-year debentures is being offered to yield 6 per cent.

Arrangements Completed

Arrangements for the raising of the $25,000,000 loan have been completed by the Province with a consortium of the security dealers and leading banks, comprising A. E. Ames & Co., Ltd.; Dominion Securities Corporation, Ltd.; Bank of Montreal; Wood, Gundy & Co., Ltd.; McLeod, Young, Weir & Co., Ltd.; Bank of Nova Scotia; the Canadian Bank of Commerce; the Royal Bank of Canada, and other houses.

The offering, which is extensively advertised in the Provincial press today, has been anticipated with great interest since Premier George H. Henry's definite statement of several weeks ago with regard to Provincial financing.

Successful completion will be reflected, the Provincial Treasurer stated, in a reduction of the temporary borrowings of the Province for hydro-electric power development and transmission, assistance to rural Hydro lines, highway construction and other purposes, "which have done so much," he says, "to relieve the unemployment situation in the Province."

In Canada Only

"The formal offering will be confined to Canada, but, in accordance with the recent experience in connection with the Province of New Brunswick and City of Montreal issues, the Ontario Government expects that many large American investors will take advantage of prevailing exchange rates to purchase a substantial portion of the issue.

"The debentures are being made payable in Canada, in Montreal, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Halifax, Saint John, N.B., as well as at the office of the Provincial Treasurer in Toronto.

Confidence In the readiness of the investing public to take up the $25,000,000 Province of Ontario bond issue which goes on sale today throughout Canada was expressed by Premier George S. Henry last night. Particularly from the people of Ontario the Premier expected a ready demand for the issue and that demand, he declared, would once again reflect the soundness and high standing of Ontario in the financial world.

"Many investors have indicated an interest in the issue and it will be found that the unusually high esteem in which Province of Ontario bonds have been held for many years will lead to their rapid absorption by investors," said Premier Henry, "It has been the constant aim of the administration to maintain the high credit standing which the province enjoys and I have complete confidence that the efforts in this direction will be reflected in a ready response to the issue."

The Polish Broadcasting Co. owned and operated by the government of that nation, made a profit of $66,547 last year.

TO DECIDE ON DIVIDENDS

Attention Focusses Upon Decision of U. S. Steel Board

New York, Jan. 26.—The eyes of the world of finance in this country were riveted upon a suite of unpretentious, and somewhat old-fashioned offices, overlooking Trinity Churchyard, at Broadway and Rector Street, today.

Here, the directors of the United States Steel Corp. were called to convene to review the quarterly earnings figures, and to decide upon the quarterly dividend.

What Wall Street wondered was: Would this august directorate, chairmanned by J. P. Morgan, consider the business outlook sufficiently promising to justify payment of another quarterly disbursement of $1 a share to common stockholders?

Or, in view of the big deficit incurred by the United Steel concern in market in 1931, did feel it prudent to omit the payment altogether, as they did in 1915, and thus only compromise on a reduced payment possibly 50 cents?

Another matter, which interested Wall Street scarcely less keenly, was the possibility that a successor to James A. Farrell as president might be announced. Mr. Farrell, feeling that the burdens of being operating head of this gigantic corporation should be shifted to younger shoulders, will retire April 15.

The finance committee, headed by Myron C. Taylor, was to confer in advance of the gathering of the full directorate.

MILD WEATHER AIDS FARMERS

Stores of Ice and Wood May Fall Low By Lack of Winter

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26—Exceptionally mild weather throughout Ontario is aiding farmers in feeding livestock and cattle are being carried through the winter on less feed than usual and in better condition, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

In most counties egg production has shown an increase, as a result of mild weather, although Bruce County reports production about normal. Hogs are moving to market in most counties, although prices are still low.

Demand for tuberculosis-tested dairy cattle has been keen and several car loads have been shipped to the United States. Livestock are being allowed out during the day by many farmers.

Concern is being expressed over storage of supplies of wood and ice, which is hampered by the lack of snow and cold.

100 Players All - Women in Orchestra

New York, N.Y., Jan. 26—An all-women's symphony orchestra, 100 pieces conducted by Ethel Leginska, will play in Carnegie Hall there next month.

The tuba, massoon, oboe, French horn and bass drums present problems in the enterprise for playing them is not exactly a parlor accomplishment. Miss Leginska intimated.

"Women of many years career have had opportunity or reason to study some of the instruments," she said, "and players of these are hard to find.

The ensemble is the outgrowth of the Boston women's symphony previously organized by Miss Leginska, who is one of the few women symphony conductors known, and is believed the only woman opera conductor.

Some of the players in the group are girls in their teens, and some are middle aged women, geography or nationality has nothing to do with selection, the conductress said.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET FIRM

London Reported to Be Buying Brazilian, Sells Above 13

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 26.—Noon Stock—Trading was somewhat brisker on Toronto Stock Exchange today but this was almost wholly accounted for by the turnover in Brazilian Traction. Most of the buying originated outside Toronto and London was believed to be behind the move. The stock, which has been selling around 13 1-2 the last few sessions, moved above 13 before meeting resistance. Toward midday the price was down slightly from the best.

Other international lines were firm but accounted for very small volume. C.P.R. was up 1-4 at 19 3-4, Nickel, Walkers and B.A. Oil each up the minimum fraction, the former at 5 5-8, Walkers at 9 1-4 and B.A. at 10 5-8. The other oils were dormant. Smelters sold at 68, Moore Corporation at 51.

Mining Stocks at 12 1-2, where it was down a point, and Massey Harris at 3 5-8. Blue Ribbon came out at 8 1-2.

Second Exchange

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 26—(Mining)—Demand and supply were fairly equal on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market continued dull in the morning session. Only a small portion of the list put in an appearance prior to midday and the turnover was very small, comprising 21 issues.

Canusa and McLeod River showed some strength on reports of new developments in the Peace River district, up 1 cent to $ 1-2 and the latter another fraction to 7 1-2. Fractional recessions predominated among other Penay Issues, While McIntyre, off $2 at $18, showed the only change in the higher-priced gold group.

Horsnake jumped to $15.90 and other Base Metals were holding. Silver shares were inactive and slib lower. Bid quotations on Provincial Research dropping 4 to $1.75 and bonnistead a couple to 28.

As Jap Emperor Reviewed His Warriors

Reminiscent of the colorful scenes that were a feature of militaristic Germany in pre-war days is this imposing display of Japanese military man power. All the pomp and grandeur that distinguished such brilliant parades in the era before the world realized that war is not all it was supposed to be was in evidence when Emperor Hirohito of Japan reviewed the crack troops of his army, including the Imperial Bodyguard, on the Yoyogi Parade Ground in Tokyo, recently. The Emperor is shown, in inset, mounted on his favorite horse, Kelabo, as he inspected his warriors. On the return to the palace after the review an object, said to have been a hand grenade, was hurled at the royal procession. The missile slightly damaged a carriage other than that in which the Emperor was riding.

B. Y. P. U. Meets At Victoria Ave.

Monday evening a most enjoyable time was had by the B.Y.P.U. of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The president, Miss Mabel Peck, opened the meeting with the hymn, "Trust and Obey." This was followed by a portion of scripture and a season of prayer in which many of the young people took part.

The meeting was then turned over to Miss Evelyn Muncaster, director of the Fellowship Commission. Miss Muncaster reminded those present that the admission fee had been advertised as a Similie, so everyone was to keep smiling the rest of the evening. A sing song in which the hymns had the key-note "Smile" was heartily enjoyed. Miss Dreatha Lloyd read the Scripture and then Mr. Lorne Andrews was called upon to introduce the speaker of the evening. Mr. Grafton who is a teacher on the staff of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School has spent considerable time travelling and the Young People were told that the scenes they would see and the information they would receive would be first-hand.

Mr. Grafton's address on "Life To-day in the Land of the Bible" and the slides which he showed were most interesting and inspiring. Each slide as it was shown was fully explained and the speaker recalled different incidents in the life of Christ that happened around these scenes. Mr. Grafton closed with an appeal to the Young People that as they could not all go as missionaries, they could work for Christ here at home. There are many ways of serving. He also asked that the pastor, Mr. Jones, who is ill at the present time, be remembered not only in prayer but in different ways of assisting in the church work.

Miss Muncaster expressed a vote of thanks on behalf of the Young People to Mr. Grafton.

The meeting closed with the singing of Hymn, "Will Leaden Me" and Miss Edith Looker closed in prayer.

A very pleasant social time was then entered into and after different games had been played, refreshments were served.

FINANCIAL SIGNS?

Big New York has had its own financial cherry. One paper says it has been on the very verge of bankruptcy. Dwindling taxable values have been attended by increased demands for expenditure on the unemployment undertakings and so the wheel goes on.

Is this the last stage of depression? Many read it so. The darkest hour before the dawn.

But if the dawn is soon to show itself, the world need not look for a smashing revival. That cannot be for people will not take the chances they used to take. Another shakedown would be too costly. It would mean to the credit of the world what another war would mean to the nations. It cannot be thought of.

But the hopes that the turn may not be far off cannot but be brighter than they were a year ago. The longer delayed the sooner the mending process will begin.

READING THE SKIRTS

While the world worries on about depressions, the style world goes along steadily. Fashions change and none of the marks of depression have been left on them though doubtless the trade has suffered. But the style it remains.

Along comes a report from Paris that skirts are to be shorter by the amount of the hem this coming season. Three inches cloth into the dress, and worse luck for the textile mills. But in another sense fashion's whims have made many people very keen indeed, permitting for waste and the rash change of style when clothes are not half worn out. So in that respect will benefits accrue though it may impoverish individuals in trying to keep step with the mode.

Now the Ottawa Citizen sees nothing but light in this Parisian despatch. It calls the account of the change very encouraging. It considers a great deal ahead.

"If you are a follower of the feminine mode, you will have noted a curious phenomenon of late years, that as fall in the length of ladies' skirts follow closely the rise and fall in the volume of business.

"Everybody has seen those charts the financial papers reproduce illustrating the trend in trading, prices, car-loadings and the like. Then there are those jagged, rough sketches of mountain ranges. Well, if a similar chart were made of the trend of dress lengths during the last decade a similar mountain range would result—and it would parallel the trade charts in outline.

"How does it happen? Here's how. All we know is that if skirts are short we go up in 1923. So did business. They went down in 1924 and rose again in 1925. So did business. Again skirts went down in the fall of 1929, and reached rock bottom last winter. So did business. Now skirts are beginning to rise, and so, the optimists wait and see. If skirts are reliable barometers—and they seem to be as reliable as politicians—it will. Three cheers for Paris!"

A TROUBLING QUESTION

The recent editorial in a religious paper as to whether the man who steals food when he is hungry is to be called to his bar of judgment for what he has done has stirred up a great deal of controversy and to many it seems that the comment was made at an ill-advised time. They think that very much relief is being given as it is felt is required by the exigencies of the moment. The merits of the question cannot be solved by sympathy alone and society has a duty to perform. Some say such a comment invites a tendency to anarchy.

It seems that the point is this, most men would make many efforts to improve their condition before they would resort to stealing. No one has starved in the larger cities as far as is known, and if he were starving, there are relief agencies to which would offer him relief from this distressing condition. He can have relief for the asking.

It is considered that there is real distress and that through the constitution of society some have much less of the world's goods than others but these people are not those who are going to steal because they have nothing and need food.

The fact does stand out that no one needs to starve—relief agencies are working for that end. If people who are hungry will put aside their contrariness and not only suffer and then would rather steal than reveal their want and needy condition, there must be something wrong with their attitude towards society. One can understand such a person suffering from lack of food but no person of that type of mind and intelligence will want to pass as one who takes what does not belong to him to satisfy his hunger and that of his family. One would not expect one who is too proud to ask relief to steal.

Of course there is the question of the right to possession. The law looks after that. If such a case did come before a judge, every consideration we may be sure would be given a hungry man or his family.

Right to possession is guaranteed by the law and it is a principal of law. Christian principles do not enjoin a man who would have his larder stocked while others starve, for the law of brotherhood and love would urge him to consider the case of his needy neighbors. Every municipal council is regulated under that Christian dispensation today and compelled to provide if necessary. No council can or will shirk its responsibility though it also supports the law of the right of possession which is a basic principle of society.

IN THE CABIN
By Aline Michaelis

We gained the Winter's heart one day's waning
When the grip of the Winter was grim;
Around us, the north wind, complaining;
Above us, heavens fading and dim.

In the valley the shadows assailed us
And came stealthily on, as we pressed
Up the slope in such haste that breath failed us,
Shades crept near in our moments of rest.

From the cabin a streamer, all glowing,
All ruddy with light pierced the gloom;
A streamer of radiance showing
Like the heart of some strange flower in bloom.

We found there two hearts brave and loyal,
All spilled like their logs with cedar fire;
No dwellers in palaces royal
Had more than true souls could desire.

In the cabin, their raptures divining.
We marvelled at bliss they possessed,
For it seemed less the hearthfire's bright shining
Than their love that had led us to rest.

FORMER RESIDENT of Belleville, now living in Pasadena, California, sends photographs of the Rose Parade and the schoolmates of about the same age which carpeted that sunshine city with three inches of "the beautiful." Looks as if the Canadian winter was being distributed about in places where winter hitherto has been a sort of sickly Turkish bath. Course we could do with a little more snow up here in Canada but it won't help the fake some samples to distant places which have not hitherto been blessed with anything like the splendid variety of climate which puts the pep into Canadians and gives them a bit of an edge over any other nation.

An old lady approached a porter at a busy railway station.

"Porter, can tell me when the next train leaves?" she inquired.

"Where do you wish to go?" the porter asked politely.

"That's none of your business," was the old lady's tart reply.

"But I can't tell you when the train leaves if I don't know where you are going," the porter explained.

The porter then told her when the train left, and soon the lady was her loading out of the carriage window.

HER FAT HAD TO GO

Activity Melted it

Exercise is the enemy of fat. If you are overburdened with superfluous flesh, call up reserves of energy to fight it. Do as this lady did:—

"During the past six months, I have made steady improvement by regularly taking Kruschen Salts. I have reduced 28 lbs. in weight during that period and have benefited greatly from greater agility and health. I believe directly attributable to that famous preparation—Kruschen."

You can take off fat with Kruschen Salts if you take one half teaspoonful in hot water every morning before breakfast, modify your diet and exercise regularly.

While you are losing fat you will be getting rid of worry, self-consciousness and lack of ambition. Your skin will grow clearer, and your eyes will sparkle with the good health that Kruschen brings. The old aim chair won't hold you much more—you'll want to be up and doing—you'll enjoy your work and your play, and you'll sleep like a top. You'll look fine, and probably live years longer.

SPECIAL CLASSES FOR DEFECTIVES

Mental Defectives Should Never Be Placed With Normal

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous physician and specialist in Psychology

One may say without reservation that the mentally defective child should never be placed in the regular class of normal, average children. For him the "special" class has its undeniable value.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Often such classes are called "opportunity" classes, also as "ungraded" classes, or "opportunity" classes.

Some parents seldom are willing or prepared to believe their children are transferred to such classes. Invariably they think the stigma has been placed upon the child, and that such special attention is only contributing to be ashamed of and to hide.

Such an attitude is really unfortunate, for the special class child has not the capacity for education and training that the average normal schoolmates of about the same age have. Keeping such a handicapped pupil in a regular class often makes him the butt of ridicule, while his chances of receiving special individual instruction suitable to his particular needs are few.

First of all a feeble-minded child should be examined by a doctor and that a diagnosis at the hands of a specialist should be arrived at after careful study of the case. Such a study includes a physical examination, besides the examination of the organic nervous system and mental state. In this way, the so-called "mental age" of the child is determined in relation to his actual, chronological age.

Lastly, the individual difference of the child must be studied. No other words, which faculties are more developed and which are defected, and which less?

No two feeble-minded children are alike, even if they happen to be of the same mental age and the same sex. And it is this fact, recently seen in Belleville stamps him as a real actor of great promise if sudden wealth does not spoil him.

FIRE LOSSES

Fire insurance rates are governed entirely by the extent of loss over a fixed period. To the fire department, by education gthe public in the prevention of fire hazards and by expertly attacking blazes which do occur, can keep the losses low, it invests a saving of many thousands of dollars to citizens, in reduced insurance premiums. When one takes out insurance, on one's house or one's car, one pays merely what one pays for. These rates are figured on an actuarial basis and there are no cut-rate prices or bargain sales. Any insured who is careless just because he has insurance protection pays for that carelessness and, regretfully, penalizes, too, those who do observe all the safety precautions.—Hamilton Spectator.

WASTE

In connection with the national campaign for economy in every branch of industry, both public and private, a striking idea has been presented by a prominent London manufacturer. He calls it his waste exhibition, and he has already held it in London, Paris and Berlin, at his company. As a result, he says, although it is impossible to assess the amount in monetary savings secured, the idea of waste prevention has been firmly planted in the minds of the employes, and suitable steps taken to see to it that the lessons pointed out in the exhibition are duly applied.

There is a lesson in this for other industrial leaders in Canada. We are very well and profitably take it to ourselves. A series of Waste Exhibitions, on the lines of the London model in all probability do a great deal to reduce the waste in every material saving in many directions. A "waste" exhibit, for the specific form of waste, it would be the duty of those in authority to analyze and to which public attention accordingly. But in England they have gone further than that and down, which involves the following considerations:

(1) Inattention and negligence in their work, and also extravagance in clerical matters and expenses. (2) rough and careless handling of materials, and carelessness in actual operation on machines, tools and other equipment, resulting in damage to buildings, fittings and machinery through carelessness; and (3) extravagance by workers in supply services, such as gas, electricity, water, fuel, and stationery.

"CALLING THE KETTLE BLACK"

Rural Ontario continues resentful of Government extravagance and economize on municipal expenditure. Some interesting figures from Attorney-General Price, has inferred local authorities which have been economical, more economical as it comes from a Government which has been a real spend-thrift in several million dollars on the years' Budget.

"Perhaps the finest bit of unconscious humour of the new year," says the Toronto Star, "is to the advice from Queen's Park by the Attorney-General that Government ments from end to end of Canada should cease spending money like water, and that there should be extravagance the greatest hardship to the people." Says the Toronto Star adds:

"Taxpayers are municipalities that haven't a dollar of bonded indebtedness, while many are in the direst financial embarrassment possible. Some municipalities, including the province of Toronto, who have unusual circumstances to contend with, are in difficulties. But the municipalities out of a hundred who believe their financial affairs and natures are being advised to curb their extravagance are a matter of fact, they are about the only ones who know anything about the subject.

The Paris Star is right. Any talk of extravagance and waste in less financing does not the against Ontario municipalities in general. Municipalities are the victims of governments which frankly squandered the money which they borrowed and we spent it." The spending has been stopped with a hard jerk in renounces. It is true, some municipalities have got into trouble and have had to pull up short quite suddenly. This, however, is the rare exception.

Governments and municipalities are learning the lesson driven home by indefensible waste and the golden touch provided by the taxing powers. Ontario is getting their budgets balance.—Toronto Globe.

JACKSON WILL REFEREE GAME IN LOCAL RINK

Campbellford Playing in Belleville For Lack of Ice

HAVE WORKOUT

Walter Jackson, of Peterboro, has been appointed referee for Wednesday night's battle when the Campbellford "Northerners" play the local intermediates at the local Arena.

Jackson is well known in Belleville, as he played baseball with Peterboro in the early days of the C.O.B. League. He also played hockey for Peterboro a number of years ago, when Belleville and Peterboro were grouped together. Jackson had been refereeing a number of years and is reputed to be one of the best officials in the local O.H.A.

The locals had an hour's practice last night, all players being present. Manager Ross is taking no chances on losing this game and chases his practising staff and offers. As they must win this game it is of vital importance that the players be in the very best of condition and another practice will be held tonight. Ross declares that the "Big Six" have been closely contested this year and that the race for playoff at the end of the schedule it is unnecessary to state that each tilt is of great importance to the teams participating.

The Campbellford team had a workout at Davidson's Arena in Campbellford last night and also the ice was a little soft they managed to get a certain amount of conditioning during the hour's work. Manager Ross feels that his players are in excellent shape and after winning their first game on Ontario ice feel that they are ready to "take" the locals on Wednesday night. There is no question to the fact that the Northerners have some class and speedy men in their ranks and will give the locals an argument which they will not forget for some time. In fact Manager Ferris stated this morning that he expected his "pets" to emerge from the tilt with another win to their credit.

The sale of tickets for the game for the convenience of the Campbellford management and they are assured of a large following from the northern part of the county. This was originally a scheduled home game for Campbellford but they decided to play it in Belleville on Wednesday night.

Arenas and Athletics divided the points ever since the start of the Watertoon League yesterday. High bowlers were Mrs. Hewitt of the Arenas with 463 and 207 and Mrs. Houston for the Athletics with 454 and 196.

Alerts and Rollers divided the points 2 1-2 for Rollers and 1 1-2 for Alerts. Reverse leads in the total, and as some of the boys had left before it was noticed they took a half point each. High bowlers were W. Waithe for Alerts with 555 and 211 and Lloyd Hall with 549. Worthwhile singles were J. Legault 222 and J. Alexander 211.

Coach Named After End of Sports

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26—Appointment of a new coach for Canada's Olympic track team will not be made until after the Olympic Winter sports at Lake Placid are concluded, it was learned here at the Canadian Olympic Committee, last night. Asked whether Nick Bawlf, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., was likely to be appointed to that position, he said selection of a coach had not even been considered. Bawlf is all-around athlete, and during starred at hockey, football and lacrosse.

SPORTS
By JIMMY THOMPSON

One more year in the Ontario Hockey Association is the goal of Peter Kilpatrick. This will make the twenty-first year of the Port Colborne star's hockey career, that is, if he gets off that surplus pep, age and successfully achieves that almost insurmountable barrier for athletes—to stage a comeback after an absence of three years. Not after the close of the 1928-29 season when he was forced from the game to undergo a serious operation has Peter been able to don the skates. This year he is out and back strong after a berth on the Port Colborne Intermediate team. Peter has been in Sudbury, and played in the north until 1915, when he joined the 180th battalion, losing an eye overseas. Returning he became a member of the famous Sudbury Wolves of N.O.H.A. fame, and in 1921 joined Port Colborne, playing against such stars as Jimmy Herberts and Ty Arbour. In 1927-28 Port Colborne won the O.H.A. Intermediate championship, and Kilpatrick Pete who was the guiding hand at the helm of the sailors' ship, fit his position with ease. Big Kitchener Greenshirts in the finals, it was Kilpatrick who scored the lone goals registered in the series. This year Peter is nearing his thirty-eighth birthday. I wonder how many older hockey players there are in Canada who are still going strong after twenty-one years in active amateur competition?

MARLBOROS ASSUME LEAD WITH NAT.

Defeat Kitchener Greenshirts By 7 to 2 Score

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26 — Marlboros entered into a first place tie with Nationals in the O.H.A. senior race by defeating the Kitchener Greenshirts 7-3 at Maple Leaf Gardens last night before a crowd of 3,000 fans.

The Dukes were the better team on the night's play, as the score indicates, but the visitors extended them all the way and for the whole of the second period and the early part of the third they more than held their own with their Toronto rivals. Marlboros owe their victory to a goal-scoring splurge in the early stages of the first period and another in the last half of the final frame. They ran in seven goals by speedy attacking and deadly shooting on the net. Only fine work by Bernie in the Kitchener cage prevented the locals piling up a total reaching well into double figures.

Marlboros looked better on this occasion than in any of their previous games. With George Ferens contributing his previous goal on the second string forward line and Max Hackett at right wing, this attacking division looked equally as dangerous as last on the first scoring line of Thoms, Boll and Underwood. The Dukes kept up a fierce attack upon their opponents, and the pace began to tell in the third period when the visitors, extending themselves to the limit, were put on the back against them, began to will under the strain of the struggle.

Bill Thomas, who scored the first two Marlboro goals on clever individual work around the Kitchener net, was forced to retire near the end of the second period when he crashed head on into the boards after a speedy attack on the visiting cage.

The game produced only five minor penalties, but both teams did some heavy bodychecking and were quite frequent spills. The fact that the Dukes were always ready to take full advantage of every break in the game, which was hard fought all the way, and productive of some excellent hockey.

MONTREALERS VISIT N. YORK

Team 'Also' Plays in Boston in Only Games of Series

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 26—Two Montreal clubs, Maroons and Canadiens, are visitors to Boston and New York in the only games scheduled in the National Hockey League today.

Canadiens' trip to New York where they engage the Rangers stands out as the feature attraction as a victory for the Canadian Club would put them into a second place tie with the Habitants, five points behind the Boston Bruins, Toronto Maple Leafs. Tonight's fixture will be a home-and-off record as in their four previous meetings each club has scored a pair of victories against a similar number of defeats.

Although rumors of a change in the managership of the Montreal Maroons have been current throughout the league, Sprague Cleghorn will be at the helm when they appear when the Canadian division ccllar occupants play Boston Bruins at the Bruins. Art Ross' protégés, who are in the midst of a slump, having failed to score a victory in their last five starts, will be at full strength for the first time in several weeks and are expected to come through with a win. However, the Maroons have held the Bruins to a single triumph in their two previous engagements, winning at home and losing in Boston.

Current Sport

By The Observer

It has come to our attention that there is considerable talk about town to the effect that the game of the season will be played when Queen's come to town. We might remind the hockey fans that they will have to wait until Queen's play here to see a real team and early game. Every game in the "Big Six" loop has been a thriller and any contender may be in the running for the playoff at the end of the schedule with the exception of perhaps the Belleville Intermediates. Even the locals went on a scoring spree and bagged eight goals against the Cadet's three. But with that exception the games have all been of a low scoring nature and the last has been in doubt until the final gong was sounded.

When hockey teams are so evenly matched as the six teams in the local loop the game should be a standout as each game, to date, has been a thriller. The locals have been playing with R.M.C., Kingston and Queen's and next meeting Wednesday night's battle when they meet Campbellford at the local rink. None of these games should be missed by any lover of hockey in this section of the province as each one will be a thriller and assured of keen competition between the teams as a whole.

Speaking of Wednesday night's battle we might add that the Northerners are coming to town with practically the same team as locals into camp." Coach Holroyd and Manager Bert Rankin had all their players out to practice last night and they will chase them for another hour tonight in preparation for the tilt. On the line-up will be Manager Jay Ferris worked his Hyfix Dairy team out last night for a sheet of ice at Davidson's Arena, Campbellford and from all that the Northerners are fast getting into condition and are going to hand the locals the same dose of medicine that they meted out to Canadians last Friday night. Manager Ferris feels that Belleville was not extended by the home team in their opening game here and from all indications the locals could only manage to squeeze out by a mere one goal margin the Campbellford team had their first game with Belleville on Wednesday night. (Maybe.)

Coach "Tommy" Thompson lifted his Belleville Intermediate Shortt's K-I-T leagues All Stars as an exhibition game last night. Both teams had a good workout and the All Stars should expect to go to Trenton and back the Trentonians right in their own back yard on Wednesday evening. After a week's rest Nicol Hyndman will be in the fold and reported O.K. it is understood that all Trenton will make the trip to Trenton.

We are more than pleased to learn that the Dukes have considered to reinstate Charles "Matty" Matthews of Oshawa. Matty" is a fine type of player and of the parent body when he played with the Oshawa baseball club as far as Hamilton in the days that all fans remember. Ontario Professional Baseball League. Matty" used to participate in any of the local sports and no one was more able to see that he is once more able to play in the C.O.B.L. Matty" is a real all-round baseball and an asset to any baseball club.

Now that Brooklyn has acquired "Hack" Wilson they sure have one hard-hitting trio of outfielders in Wilson, O'Dool and Babe Herman. Manager Max Carey has at the head when he purchased Wilson, we think, he should have given him a better when pressed by a team-mate these days of keen competition is the making of the Robins for 1932.

Due to the lack of ice the District Cup finals in the curling circles will be played in Oshawa. Last night's games of local curlers left early this morning with the rink of Jack Reid victor. The local curlers are taking their very best to Oshawa and to Oshawa feeling that they can return home with the "cup" proudly in their possession. "Swoop 'er down" will be the feature cry in the Motor City this afternoon and evening.

The United States navy and marine team will enter the game this summer in the tenth revival of the Olympic games at Los Angeles, Cal.

PETERBORO LOSES MATCH

Trenton Intermediates Take End of 6 to 4 Game at Home

Trenton, Jan. 26 (Special)—The local Intermediates had their first home game here last night when Peterboro came down here. Ice at the start of the game wasn't bad but due to the thinness soon broke through into the sand and continued to get worse as the game progressed until it became a bed of miniature golf and lacrosse combined. At times the puck was held in some of the holes and a search warrant was needed to find it. Carrying the puck was practically impossible at the last of the game and a compass was needed to guide the boys around the various "shell holes" that soon developed in the centre ice.

Young Frank Nolan of Trenton was certainly on the job despite the fact that he usually excels on the ice. He succeeded in scoring three of the six goals and was a big factor in the final victory for the home team. Dundas and Dallin; subs., Caldiline, Matton, Creighton and Howe.

Peterboro had the large holes and fell heavily on his face cutting it severely on the jagged pieces. Several stitches were required to close the cut on the bridge of his nose. The game was held until 9 o'clock when Dallin quickly returned to the game in the first period by lower of Barrett in the iron mask. Johnson looking like a toe dancer skipping the holes and the ice in his usual graceful one goal and gave Parnell an assist. Parnell played hockey if it could be played on such ice and scored Trenton's two goals. Sunfish Anderson, the old war horse, was out there playing hockey and those who think he is getting old should have seen him jumping the holes, poke-checked the slick handling in some of his rushes but the ice handicapped Jack.

—First Period—

The game started off with a bang Peterboro shooting on the Trenton net in the first one and a half minutes of play. K. Le Barr split the local defence to score the first goal of the game. The ice had not started to break up and Peterboro passed some nice combination and shot on Steenburg often but he was on the job and held the middle until the second period when Dundas on a pass from Jarvis scored Trenton's goal. Hills, the big defence man from Peterboro then drew and had it in himself but Steenburg rushed out to meet him and saved an otherwise sure goal. Trenton then proceeded to stick handle his way through to score the first goal for the locals. The visitors not to be outdone scored shortly afterwards assisted by Hatton. Fillon then came in close enough to be set up and was tripped by Keene who was penalized. Ellis proceeded to come through with his stick and scored a goal for the visitors. Things began to look bad for the home team but Nolan then pepped up the spirit by scoring assisted by Fillon. Trenton then getting the puck after the face off scored from the blue line. The game when the ice was at its best to the many goals and Parnell scoring on a pass from Nolan and tying the game up, sent them wild. The Trenton fans gave their boosters and score even.

—Second Period—

Dundas on right wing for the visitors is the man that the boys will start to watch when they go to Peterboro Friday. Despite the bad ice he was a threat at all times. Ellis, the big defence man, was making determined rushes but the Trenton defence of Culverson and Yard was too much for him. Parnell, starting the ball rolling on a pass, got through the holes to score, putting the home team ahead. Shortly after in a scramble around the visitors' goal Nolan batted in his third goal making the score 6-4. A few minutes later he fell in one of the holes and had to leave the game, returning for the last stanza. The ice at this stage of the game was terrible great patches of bare ground showing. Young Miller was in the play and covered his man at all times.

—Third Period—

Hockey could hardly be the game in the late period but Red Creighton of the visiting Rod and Gun Club, Peterboro was now playing four men up in a desperate effort to score. York and Fillon both penalized, it looked for the Dundas and the visitors now had the whole team up, but were unable to score, partly due to the ice and partly to the fact they were playing like fiends to retain their lead. The line-up: Trenton developed into a long range shooting match with the final score 6-4 for Trenton.

Joe Smith from Kingston handled the game in his usual able manner and kept the good will of both the players and fans.

Unless we have a spell of zero weather it will be impossible to play the game scheduled for Wednesday night with Belleville Juniors. One of the ex-players who recently returned from Newmarket has been drafted into the attack carrier and handles the job well.

Goal—J. La Barr; defence, Ellis and E. La Barr; centre, Fillon; wings, Dundas and Dallin; subs., Caldiline, Matton, Creighton and Howe.

Trenton—The large holes and fell; defence, Culverson and York; centre, J. Nolan; wings, Steenburg and Parnell; subs, T. Bowen, Anderson, Miller and Jarvis.

Penalties—First period, Peterboro, Dallin and Howe; second period, Peterboro, Creighton and Caldiline; third period, Trenton, Miller, York and Fillon.

The Trenton Fire Department annual meeting will be held in the home of Mr. McGarry of Ford St. which turned out to be nothing more than a chimney fire.

Many of Mr. Victor A. Nolan's friends will be sorry to learn that he left today for the Kingston hospital to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

MADOC WINS FROM TWEED

Two-One Victory Scored By Visitors in First Home Game

TWEED, Jan. 26.—(Special)—Madoc Senior Hockey team defeated to Tweed on Friday night to officially open the local rink in the first home game of the season.

Madoc had defeated Tweed on the previous Tuesday night, Tweed getting revenge in Madoc and fresh from a victory over the visiting entry in the Hastings County League, were out to repeat the victory on their own ice. They were successful after twenty minutes of overtime play in scoring the first victory over Tweed.

Tweed had considerably more weight than the visitors but was handicapped with the old reliable "Buck" Hulin on the blueline. Despite his age he wards also gave a good account of themselves. Madoc on the other hand did not weaken the team perceptibly.

There was not a great deal to choose between any of the Tweed players as they all played a good all round effective game and had little to choose between them as to their best him. The Geraldi brothers, George and Alex, paired on the defense. Alex is a veteran in this position and took care of most of the attacks that came in the direction of the defensive area. George is a new comer to senior ranks, but his natural hockey ability, and good judgment made him an effective player in any position. Casey Jr. shone at centre, on Tweed's second line, getting in the scoring column and along with—Maguire should receive a good mention for the season ends.

Boyd played a good game at centre, and Pete Clark scored Tweed's opening goal when his pass and from behind Madoc net, shot the puck into the goal off Henderson's skate. This occurred early in the first period and there was no further scoring until the last period when the equalizer on a hard shot off Henderson's stick, with but five minutes to go in the third period.

The winning goal was scored by Blue Ian in the second overtime period.

The line-up:

Madoc—Goal, Hulin; Defense, Rupert, Blue; Forwards, Watson, Woods, Henderson.

Subs—Alley and Rose.

Tweed—Goal, McCrae; Defense, A. Gerald, G. Geraldi; Forwards Maguire, Hill, Clark.

Subs—G. Rashotte, D. Shangue.

MAN'S GENIUS INVENTS ROBOT

New York, N.Y., Jan. 26—Another robot, this time "the seeing-electric man," was described to the annual meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers here.

"This new automaton is a brother of the new will established "Electric Eye." It was devised to keep pace with the almost lightning fast feat of the "eye" which hitherto has been able to "see" things faster than engineering devices could record them all.

The penman is a combination of photo-electric cells and galvano meters hooked up with balanced beams of light.

Despite her mere year of existence there is a decidedly regal touch to the attitude of little Princess Elizabeth, who holds her "sceptre" in her left hand. She is Princess Yorke, daughter of H.R.H. Honolulu Inquiry Well Under Way

Territorial Grand Jury Recessed Without Indicting Mrs. Fortescue

Honolulu, Jan. 26 (AP)—House cleaning in Hawaii and this city in particular was well advanced today as the community organized for better law enforcement.

Prominent young lawyers, Eugene B. Beebe and Samuel H. Hitch, were named by the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce to assist U. Theodore Richards, prosecuting attorney, in the investigation of Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, U.S.N., E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones for the slaying of Joseph Jahahawai, Hawaiian.

The lawyers will assist prosecuting officials at the second trial of four persons charged with the slaying of the accused last September of assaulting Mrs. Massie, daughter of Mrs. Fortescue. Their first trial resulted in a hung jury.

The territorial grand jury which recessed Friday without indicting Mrs. Fortescue and the three officers men for the Kahahawai slaying arranged further deliberation today.

Escape From Georgia Prison and Slay Trusty With Their Car

Milledgeville, Ga., Jan. 26—Aubrey Smith, Abe Powers and Roy Gardner escaped from a steel cage at the state prison farm early last night and their speeding automobile killed a trusty who tried to stop them.

The trusty was John S. Williams, serving an original sentence for "murder farm mystery" of 1921-22. He was serving a life sentence on charges of killing several negroes.

Williams and several guards attempted to stop the trio as they sped from town in a stolen automobile. Authorities said the fugitives turned the machine into the crowd and Williams was crushed under the car.

The locals have an excellent chance of getting into the provincial play-offs this year and are practising every night, under the direction of Coach Ralph Morden. A few new and younger players have been injected into the line-up, and the locals and young players on-by go to add speed and durability to the team. The locals are practising faithfully for their league game in Kingston next Friday night when they tackle the fast Queen's team.

DO NOT SPOIL A PLAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to a party which a girl friend of mine is having. She did not ask me personally whom she invited that this is a birthday party. I know the others very intimately and as a girl, and she knows the others quite well. Would it be proper for her to inform the rest of the invited guests that this is a birthday party so they will be present the young girl giving the party with a gift. I thought it would be nice for each couple to "put up" for a gift, but I will do anything you say.

L. C.

You shouldn't. I think, carry out this plan. Perhaps the girl wants to have a celebration of her birthday, and you would spoil to have the occasion marked with gifts. This is believe it or not, often the case, for the young people, and for the best people, the minute they hear that there is a special reason for a party, "wonder" about whether or not they should bring a gift. I can't imagine that this girl feels this way about this, and had done as she states should not spoil her plan. You shouldn't spoil her plan.

SEATING ARRANGEMENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I want to tell you how helpful I find your space in the paper.

My daughter is spending a young man friend as a dinner guest at our home. Will you please suggest to us just how to seat my family. My family consists of a grandmother, two sons, myself, my husband, a boarder and myself.

Mother.

Thank you!

Then, as the hostess, should have the young man on your right. And then, in the gracious and commendatory to have your daughter seated on the other side of the man guest, the young man boarder, the young man guest, the young man boarder, and then, last of all, should place the two daughters on the side of the table opposite the grandmother.

PASSING REFRESHMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Will you please tell me if it is correct to pass the refreshments during the dance with a boy and girl to each table, or should one or two of the girls go with the boy and one when she does not know?

2.—Also, when passing refreshments, from whom should you pass the first piece?

Lenita.

1.—No, the girl does not speak.

2.—Open the box of candy and pass it to your guests, offering the box to each one in turn.

The murderer is finally revealed in a dramatic climax.

The role of Charlie Chan gives Oland full play for his unusual talents developed during a long period of experience on the stage and screen. At The Capitol
"WHOOPEE" NOW
"PLATINUM BLONDE" NEXT

Tonight, Tuesday, Eddie Cantor gives his farewell performance at the Capitol in "Whoopee", when the judge from the attendance since Saturday, another packed house will constitute Eddie's final audience until the next Cantor picture is released.

What happens when a "free soul" is trapped in a gilded cage? Is he willing to relinquish his independence for the added material comforts he gains, or does he become smothered under it all? Nine times out of ten, the craving for independence is stronger than the desire for possessions but very often the temptation is strong to get a taste of how the other half lives.

In "Platinum Blonde", the sophisticated comedy drama opening a three day run on Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre, Robert Williams, a care-free, careless reporter marries a beautiful heiress who has fallen in love with him because he is so different from the men in her set. Immediately she goes about pestering Williams after the polished fashion-plates he escaped when she married him. And Williams who never wore a pair of garters before he was married, and revelled in the informal life of the "fourth estate", doesn't like the pink teas, the stiff receptions, his stiff valet and his stiff shirt. What does he do?

Williams and a cast of stellar proportions, including the charming Loretta Young, Jean Harlow, Donald Dillaway, Louise Closser Hale, Reginald Owen, Edmund Breese, Claude Allister Walter Catlett and Halliwell Hobbs, are said to have surpassed even the delicately and sparkling of the season's comedy dramas.

FAVORS LONDON FOR CONFERENCE

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28 — The Imperial Economic Conference should be held in London, not in Ottawa, Sir Alfred Mond, former leader of the Government party in Newfoundland, addressing the home buildings' association here last night.

It was suggested further the age limit for pensioners be reduced from 70 to 65 years; and that residents of Canada, not 20, was fixed as sufficient qualification. Repeal was urged of the provision demanding a five-year residence in the province in which application for a pension was made.

Touching on the nationalization of the banking and credit system, it was contended this industry was in reality a public utility and as such should be subject to such control as the state may deem necessary for shareholders, often with very little consideration for general public welfare.

Contract Labor

Among other suggestions were made substantial grants to technical education; strict administration of the contract labor regulations and the Alien Labor Act; revision of the Canada Shipping Act; Federal grants for rural credit; Federal provisions for the blind; co-ordination of provincial activities along health lines; assurance that all the laws enacted and other military training in which we are engaged is physical training and that the Bankruptcy Act be amended to give priority to wage claims.

Drowned in Shallow Water

man had fallen into the river while attempting to cross the bridge at that point, struck his head on some projecting point of the bridge and had then gone down in the eddies and iron work shortly after he had entered the bridge. The water under the bridge where he had fallen was only about three feet deep and had apparently lain there all night. The shoes the man had evidently were carefully placed beside each and were quite near the body.

Discovery Made

Mr. Arthur Dougherty was the one who first noticed something in the water and he immediately communicated with the police who were also telephoned as a precaution in charge of Sergt. Harman to the scene. Further investigations made by the police brought out the fact that Mr. Sheets had left his home to go from work the evening before and his family had called the police station informing them of his absence. This makes the second fatality to occur at this point within the past month. The deceased was one of the oldest employees of the Consumers' Coal Company, having worked for the Allen Company before they company turned over the business to the Conger Company.

Well Known Man

Every street, lane, crook and turn in the city knew and respected Mr. Sheets. For forty years he delivered coal to the homes and business places of this city and the service he gave to customers of his employer was careful and considerate always.

Forty years ago he worked as a driver for the same lumber company in the summer time and in the fall of 1891 was promoted to a job delivering coal for the Allen coal office. He gave such good service that he was asked to come directly and remained with that firm until it sold its business to the Conger Coal Co. He continued in the employ of the new proprietors and was as highly considered by them as he was by his former employer. Practically forty years of faithful service with one firm is indeed a good record and speaks well for the reliability of the service he gave.

Mr. A. J. Fisher, who was manager of the Allen-Coal office for those years says today the passing of his former employee as did Mr. Sergt. Gribble, the manager of the Conger Coal office, which firm he was employed up to the time of his accidental death.

Surviving the unfortunate man are four children. Helen in Toronto, Mrs. Albert Eaves, of Belleville, Mrs. Roy Reynolds of Point Anne, and Mrs. Roy Dafoe, of Belleville, besides three sons, George of Belleville, Edward and Frank of Belleville.

A preliminary session of the jury will be held for identification of the body in the Bonter parlors of the Belleville Burial Company at four thirty this afternoon. The jury will be in charge of Dr. Orr, Deputy Coroner's Constable. Dr. Cronk is Coroner.

BEAUHARNOIS PROBE DEBT CANCELLATION

Touching on tariff matters, the delegation said labor "holds the opinion that tariff protection is a form of national subsidy and therefore industries benefitting should be subject to control, particularly in respect to giving assurance of employment to residents of Canada, the observance of existing rates of wages, payment of wages sufficient to maintain the prevailing standard of living, the prevention of watering of stock and the charging of unreasonable prices to the consumer. Protection granted should be high enough to warrant these conditions being enforced, yet enough sufficiently managed industries to compete successfully in the home market. It was suggested the industrial disputes investigation act be made operative in all tariff protected industries and that a representative of labor be placed on the tariff board.

Nationalization Urged

Turning to the broad subject of public ownership, the delegation said labor could see the nationalization of public utilities.

It was then said: "The parliamentary inquiry into the affairs of the Beauharnois Power Company disclosed that a very unsatisfactory condition existed in regard to the promotion of this undertaking and we believe it would be in the public interest that a royal commission be appointed to make the fullest inquiry into the whole subject and that any person found to have benefitted illegally therefrom should be prosecuted.

Lorsch Highway Carriers

On the subject of transportation, the delegation noted railways were experiencing "very keen and unfair competition" from various forms of motor vehicles. It was urged that all public carriers using highways should be licensed and under the control of the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada or some similar authority. The government was commended by the delegation for increasing 50 to 75 per cent the Dominion's share of Old Age Pensions. Another suggestion it was said, looked forward to the day when the cost would be borne entirely by the Dominion. Among suggested improvements was one which would increase the margin of private income which went to form the aggregate of $350 pension and income. This figure, it was argued, was too low for a single man or woman to live comfortably and a pensioner should not be disallowed through any small income he might possess.

Y.P.S. OBSERVE CANADA NIGHT
"Canadian Night" was celebrated by a very interesting and instructive program which was presented to the Young People's Society of Holloway Street Church last night.

The whole program was built around Canadian subjects. Miss Ida Attendance presented the program with interest and a very enjoyable evening was the result. The Maple Leaf devices was held by Miss Katie Anderson. The Rev. R. B. Neal told briefly how the name "Canada" was chosen and referred to the fifteenth to Psalm 72, "He shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from river unto the ends of the earth."

Mr. Earl Elliott gave a short description of the "Canadian Coat of Arms", which proved very instructive. A violin duet was rendered by Carman Osborne and Norman Middleton. Mr. Howard Purdham gave the talk of the evening, which was on "Canada". The speaker referred to the great heritage which Canadians possess and challenged the young people to make the best use of the great opportunities which are theirs. Mr. Purdham closed his oration "will tomorrow ever come?" "Tomorrow will come for our generation," he concluded. "The kind of Canada which will be realized tomorrow depends on the kind of young people we are today and the things we shall undertake. It is up to us to grapple with many problems which oppress the world today and to build a better and happier Canada and world.

Miss Ida Ashley then recited from the Canadian poetess, Pauline Johnston, the poem, "Canadian Born."

The meeting closed with the benediction which a pleasant half hour was spent in games.

Next week the Picton Young People will visit the Holloway Street Young People's Society.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

Crooked Bill appeared about to collapse in his chair.

"I haven't figured out what you are up to, Mr. Crossed Bill, but it's devious, and Mr. Clarke Hackett is helping you out.

"You're framing something on me, and I think you merely want to get these sheep out of the way so your niece can be considered heavy bearing.

"Well, little Jaime Miguel Higuenes beezrt. No so. Believa. Those sheep stay and Roberta stays. I've got to have my chance. I'm a fast worker, but there's such a thing as indecent haste in courting and I decline to disturb my dignity by appearing clamorous. That sort of thing would be fatal to my chances. Your niece is an outrageous coquette. If you must know it—and I bet you do—she is my job to marry her, and I'd like to see the photographer or the scientician uncle that can throw a cold chisel into my cogs and get away with it."

Crooked Bill began to realize that things he would have to explain if Roberta ever learned what he had been up to, and his thoughts saddened him. "Can you fix it with the judge to disapprove the sale?"

"Certainly I'll offer ten cents a head more for those sheep than you have. I can't spare that amount of ready cash to put into sheep just now, so you'll loan me the money, secured by a chattel mortgage on the sheep."

"But I've already agreed to turn the sheep over to someone else," said Jasham.

"Who is that person?"

"Bill Dingle. I haven't told them to him yet, but the deal is ready to be closed."

"Ah, on jawbone, eh? You're going to take a chattel mortgage and sell at a loss, for Dingle is too good a sheepman to give you a profit on your deal." Don Jaime commenced to chuckle. "You're doomed to pay a high price for your fancies, Uncle William. Dingle will sell those sheep as soon as he can and beat it for parts unknown with the money, leaving you to chase that chattel mortgage off on your next income tax statement."

Crooked Bill's face registered alarm. "You think so?"

"Well, after you've closed the deal he'll try to. And he'll succeed unless he's stopped. You bought your self a little shooting scrape, that's what you've done. Let me know the minute the deal with Dingle is closed, because immediately thereafter I am going to guard every water-hole and those sheep of yours will die of thirst before Dingle can move them off that range."

"You appear to be holding all the aces."

"It's a habit of mine. What are you going to do about it?"

"I thing I'll sell you those sheep," Crooked Bill faltered.

"You're regaining your senses. I'll buy them at two dollars a head less than you paid for them."

"If I sell to you, will you give me your word of honor never to tell Roberta a word about this?"

"I'm willing to make that stipulation a part of the contract and set an agreed amount of damages to be paid if I fail to keep my covenant. However, most folks in this country usually take my word of honor, which I now freely give. Let's shake hands on it."

That night Crooked Bill left for home. He knew when he had met his match.

Twenty-seventh Instalment

When Crooked Bill boarded the train for El Paso, he sent the following telegram to Glenn Hackett;

"The ship is sunk, without a trace so brace yourself for bad news stop Miss Higgins boy gave me cards and dashes four aces high and Little Casino and beat me to death on the sweeps stop I am mighty sorry you have lost but far from depressed that he appears to be going to stay in stop however we will keep on trying although I have no hope stop I belong in the booby hatch I am mindedness."

At almost the same time Don Jaime joined Ken Hobart in front of the Jasham home.

"Any luck?" Hobart queried anxiously.

"I'm in the sheep business, Ken. Tomorrow morning we'll pay off that gang of murderers that have been herding those sheep and put our own men on the job. Dingle gets the rans, too."

"Well, you'll clear a profit, won't you, chief?"

"What," replied Don Jaime mourn fully, "doth it profit a man if he gaineth the whole world and suffer sth the loss of the best-loved of his existence?"

"None whatever," Ken admitted, without knowing in the least what he was talking about.

Five miles outside Los Algodones his sharp eyes observed something far ahead and off the side of the road. He called Don Jaime's attention to it. It was the starlight's tiny red dot gleaming.

"Clarence—the Mexican—circles," Don Jaime murmured. "Ah, he's doused it. Getting ready for business. He's reached Dingle's camp, the lonneau and brought up a cartuse; simultaneously Ken Hobart turned the car off the road and went through the motions of doing so.

"There may be holes and dry water courses on this road," he announced calmly, "but we'll have to take a chance."

He switched off the lights just as a volley of rifle fire broke the stillness of the night. The car was hit twice, but most of the bullets drove ed overhead. Don Jaime pumped his carbine, firing at the flashes, and the car crashed on; when the carbine was empty he set the rifle back in the tonneau.

They reached the hacienda without further incident. Don Jaime alighted and entered the patio, Roberta ran swiftly to meet him.

"You're safe, Jimmy!" she cried

"Reasonably so, Bobby," he replied. "My information was correct. Dingles crowd of imported killers laid for me." He held his hat forward her and ran his fingers through his locks in the crown. "And that bonnet cost me forty dollars," he grieved.

"Oh, Jimmy! What if he'd aimed lower?"

"Have you been worried, Bobby?" he asked gently.

She nodded.

"It's been a long time since anybody worried over me, Bobby. What will I do when you're gone?"

"What did you do before I came Jimmy? And I think——"

"Jimmy, I'd better go soon. There's really nothing more of a business nature for me to attend to. There are papers to sign, in fact—just a few papers to sign, some sheep to look at——and they're really your worry not mine."

He shrugged. "Well, quit yourself. But we'll let a can to Dingle and his men before you go." He stifled a little yawn. "I'm tired, Bobby. Breakfast at six tomorrow morning. Will you join me? Then we can get an early start for the old Adriran ranch and jolt Mr. Dingle out of his complacency."

"Where is the Big Boss?" Hobart demanded.

Roberta held out a couple of leaves of paper.——Don Jaime's letter plan. Hobart read it. "The boy has some sense after all," he decided. "He and Julio will guard the water-hole and stand them off in front. I'll with Pearl Lambert, and O'Grady, and two good pianos to be selected by Carmo will flank them or take them in the rear. Well, I've got three of my own kind with real Carmen, with other fourteen men, will continue on to the river, for, of course, Dingle and his bunch will break for the border the moment they realize they are actively opposed. Not to do so would be ruinous. And at the river dog will eat dog." He chuckled. "Who says this is a dull country?" He spoke to Julio.

"El senor," murmured Julio, and rode away on Don Jaime's trail.

Ken Hobart, left alone with Roberta, lit a cigarette, and waited. Then.

"Crying over the old man?"

Roberta nodded, and added dejectedly: "I'm sure anybody would love Don Jaime's go young and so fine, and if he should get killed——"

"Quite so," murmured Mr. Robart. "However, we have one consolation. He'll have a lot of company on the way up! I imagine he'll get killed—somehow."

"In heaven' name why?"

"Well," said Mr. Hobart with exasperating deliberation, "he's madly in love with you, Miss Antrim, he realizes that you'd never dream of marrying the man who killed your uncle——"

"My uncle was a scoundrel. He employed scoundrels."

"Still he was your uncle. You know, of course, that with Don Jaime's breed of cat an uncle is a kinsman, no matter what he does. I've felt like telling the boss he was all wrong about you but that a hired man who speaks out of his turn to Don Jimmy gets fired pretty suddenly."

"If you'd only told Him!" Roberta wailed. "Oh, if you only would!"

"Why didn't you tell him yourself?" he inquired.

"There are things no girl can say——when a man acts as queerly as Don Jaime does, Mr. Hobart. He's so sensitive, so retiring——"

Mr. Hobart choked and to cover his shrieking cachinnation coughed violently into his cupped hands.

"Would you marry this Higuenes hombre if he asked you?"

Roberta blushed furiously and hung her head.

"Come," Mr. Hobart urged, "this is serious business. There's a question before the house. If you will say an answer, speak up! Would you marry Don Jaime if he asked you?"

"Yes," she whispered.

Hobart upset the tabby kitten and the sheep-mangy into the pot with him and, leaning over and planting his arm tenderly about Roberta's shoulders, he began to whisper soothing cows'——

"I would gladly, if I married him. He is his partner as well as his wife, I would be a good partner."

"None better," agreed Mr. Hobart. "Well, if you want him go get him. He's yours for the asking."

Dartmoor Riot Blamed on Red Plot, Military Guard Foils New Plan

Criminals Shown to Have Concentrated at Near Towns

ATTACK READY

Method Was to Have Attack From Outside During Riot Within

LONDON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A Princeton despatch to the Daily Mail today said the establishment of a military guard outside Dartmoor Prison had followed reports that friends of the convicts planned to attack the prison.

The Mail's correspondent said, there was evidence that Communists were behind the plot, which had been confirmed by some of the convicts.

The attack was to have been made coincidentally with a renewal of rioting inside the prison early this morning.

Police were active throughout Devon, the newspaper said, in the belief that there was a concentration of desperate criminals at Tavistock, Plymouth, Okehampton and other places in that part of the country. The criminals were supposed to have been brought together by some organization with the avowed intention to storm the prison and liberate the prisoners.

A convict with Communist aims was known to have four ringleaders, the correspondent said, and had gathered around him a nucleus of desperate men who left Sunday's revolt in the prison, which is near Princeton.

Backed by Plenty of Money

Details of the plot, as published in The Mail, said it was backed by plenty of money and ammunition in wholesale jail delivery. The details were said to be coming largely to the notice of the authorities who are investigating Sunday's disturbance.

Garage owners in the neighborhood of the prison reported a surprising number of cars were seen patrolling the roads on the Moor before the trouble. From evidence given by loyal convicts, the newspaper said, the authorities were convinced the cars were driven by friends of the convicts, who were prepared to pick up any who escaped.

GIVES LIFE FOR HIS DOG

Bowmanville Lad Sinks in Pond After Ice Gives Way

Bowmanville, Jan. 26—In a vain endeavor to save his dog that had broken through the ice of the millpond here, Saturday, Jack Bennett 15-year-old local high school student was drowned when the ice on which he was walking gave way. Bennett was walking across the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge and the dog was crossing the pond below on the ice. Reaching safety, a large police dog, brvat through the ice, the boy scrambled down the 100-foot bank, and running across the ice, tried to get to the dog. When he was only a short distance from where the dog had been submerged, the ice gave way and he sank into the water. His cries for help were heard by Charles Middeton, 21 years old, who was working near, and the police were called. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith and Chief Vernon responded in less than five minutes. The body had could be seen, partly out of the water. With the Bailiff, Milton Jamieson, the police obtained a canoe and soon reached the boy and brought him ashore. Resuscitation efforts were made for an hour, without avail.

TO COMPLETE REPAYMENT

Bank of England Will Have Repaid Credits By First of Month

London, Jan. 26—(AP)—The Bank of England announced that it will complete repayment at maturity on February 1 of £30,000,000 in credits granted to it by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Bank of France.

This means that the whole of the £50,000,000 granted last August by equal portions by the Federal Reserve and the Bank of France will have been repaid at the beginning of next month.

The credits were raised to buttress the pound sterling and originally were to have expired on last October 31. At the end of October, however, the bank announced that it had arranged to pay £20,000,000 and that the lending banks had extended the balance to the equivalent of £15,000,000 each for three months.

The announcement at that time said, "In part provision of the balance, repayment of which was proposed by the Bank of England, the sale of £15,000,000 in gold bars has been arranged."

WOULD MAKE ITALY'S KING AN EMPEROR

Move to Invest Him With Title of Ruler of Holy Roman Empire

POMP PROPOSED

Mediaeval Ceremony Would Observe Traditions of Rome

Rome, Jan. 26—A movement to raise the title of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy to "Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire," is gaining momentum among influential Italian leaders, it was learned today.

Extreme Fascists and sworn monarchists are the principal supporters of the proposal, which has for its basis the contention that the King is Governor of the City of Rome and that he is rightly "King of Rome." Hence, they claim, carries with it the title of "Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire."

The movement had its inception in the Lateran Treaty, which ended the long quarrel between the Italian state and the Catholic Church. It was revived by the recent bestowal of knighthood in the Annunziata, highest order of the King by Pope Pius XI.

The Pope interpreted as reassuring the cordial relations between the Italian government and the Pope, and it was declared that, on the basis of this friendship, perhaps it would follow that the King should assume all the titles which the Pope has at his gift in Rome.

Supporters of the move recognize that, as far as any territorial or political claims are concerned, there is little or nothing to be gained. The Lateran Treaty settled that, however, that the titles would serve to aggrandize and glorify the Italian state in the eyes of the world as to imply a certain guardianship of the Pope over the new estate of the Pope.

Would Revive Mediaeval Ceremony

They also suggested that assumption of the title of Emperor would bring to prevent the coronation of the King in St. Peter's, especially since Italian Kings have had to forego that ceremony since the establishment of the Italian Kingdom in 1870, with the lack of a traditional ceremony suitable to the occasion. The fact that they were at sword's points with the Popes for a number of days made a coronation ceremony difficult.

The reconciliation of the church and state has removed that obstacle and the supporters of the movement understand that the tradition and pageantry of Rome, centering around St. Peter's Cathedral, would furnish an ideal setting for such a ceremony. The iron crown of the Lombard kings, regarded as the ultimate crown of the Italian rulers, is the symbol of kingship and even of empire.

Death Caused by Upset of Jigger Jury Calls Accident

Three Witnesses Take Stand Before Coroner on R. R. Fatality

RATE OF JIGGER

"We, the jury, who have been impanelled into this court to determine the cause of the death of Cyril Owen Bennett, find that the deceased came to his death in the township of Hamilton on the Canadian Pacific Railway line one mile west of the city of Cobourg on the morning of the 19th day of January, by accidental means, in that he was struck a rail of the track while attempting to get off the gasoline-driven machine after the said machine had been derailed." was the jury verdict handed down at the inquest opened in the police station last evening to find the cause of death of the late Mr. Bennett, employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and his death on the above-mentioned date some distance west of the city when a small dog derailed the gasoline-driven jigger he was in charge of.

With Coroner Dr. O. S. Cronk in the chair, and Crown Attorney R. S. Donnan conducting the investigation the verdict was quickly arrived at after hearing the evidence of the three witnesses who were called. It was not necessary for the jury to leave the room.

Speed of Jigger

The first witness, who was called was Owen Lucas, truck driver of the city who was near the scene of the accident. After being sworn in he stated that he was aware of the approach of the machine by the sound it made coming up the track. He did not pay very particular attention to the car or the driver, but chose to observe that it was travelling at a very good speed. The next incident that drew his attention was the sound of the jigger when the machine ran over the dog and derailed. He did not see the accident happen but did observe the fact that the machine, after being derailed travelled some distance along the rails before stopping. He at once hurried over to the scene but by then the body had been lifted from the track and deposited on the right-of-way.

40 or 45 Mile Speed

Mr. E. A. Ford, who was the next witness, stated he had been down along the bay shore behind the home of Mr. Bennett when he had been staying, observing the man with the truck (Owen Lucas) in the field. The dog appeared to have been stuck in the field and he had walked slowly over to the building, when he observed the gasoline jigger approaching at what he considered at a speed estimated at between forty and fifty miles an hour. The next thing he heard, along with the sound of the machine which was approaching was the cry of the dog who had accompanied him down along the tracks, and when he heard and then nosing along the shore, but had started to run over and down the tracks when the machine began to approach.

Saw Dog Jump

He looked in the direction the dog was running, saw the dog jump in front of the jigger, but could not quite identify the exact point that it struck by the front wheels. The jigger immediately jumped into the air off the tracks after the impact, and then ran along about 100 feet some distance. The man who was in the machine when it finally stopped appeared to be attempting to get off the machine when it bounced off the tracks but lost his balance and struck the back of his head heavily on the rail. When Mr. Ford reached him he was dead, and with his head lying across one of the rails and his feet on the other. Fearing that a train might come along at any moment, Mr. Ford lifted the body of Mr. Bennett off the tracks and deposited it on the right-of-way. When more help arrived the gasoline jigger was also lifted off the tracks and set to one side.

Provincial Police Officer Stringer, who was called, offered evidence to the effect that when he arrived on the scene the body had been deposited along the tracks and was dead. Measurements of the tracks made by the jigger after it had left the rails indicated that it had travelled some 65 feet from the scene of where the dog was actually struck. The exact spot where the dog was struck was determined by the blood found on the rail, which is on the rail.

The jury was composed of Foreman W. H. Panter, Alderman T. Marshall and Messrs. Chas. Walters, T. Thorne, J. W. Barlow, J. Reid, G. R. White, T. Sullivan and J. W. Thompson.

13 MEXICANS ARE BOOKED

Fight For Lives Against Illness Caused By Barley

FRESNO, Cal., Jan. 26.—Poisoned by tortillas made from barley which had been treated for rodent control, nine patients remained from a group of 13 destitute Mexicans who were found in a shack on a ranch near here.

Four children had died, tortured by the pains caused by strychnine poison, for which there is no known antidote. Physicians refused to give up all hope for the remaining five who partook of the poisoned food. Sometime during the night, apparently a 50-pound sack of barley that had been sprinkled with strychnine powder and was intended for killing rodents. Interpreting a questioning of the patients in the County Hospital gathered two versions as to the source of the poisoned barley. Some of the victims said it was stolen; others insisted it was given to them as part payment for their labors.

Destitute, and with no other source of food, the Mexicans used the meal for making tortillas, a favorite food of their race. Ten days later the first symptoms of poison were noted. Three children, a boy, sister, between the ages of four and ten, died.

Halifax, Jan. 25.—Offer an Eskimo his choice of mankind, colors ranging from Beethoven, Chopin, Mozart to Jazz, Harry Lauder, and he will choose—Sir Harry Lauder, Stanley A. Geddes of Mackenzie River told an audience here last night.

Eskimo children would learn the alphabet and conversational English in six months. They were eager for instruction.

Princess who Found Moses Now Identified as Hatasu

London, Jan. 26—The identity of the Egyptian princess who found the baby Moses in the Bull-rushes and reared him to a high place in court circles has been established, in the opinion of Prof. John Garstang, chief of Sir Charles Marston's archaeological expedition in the Near East.

In a letter to Sir Charles, Prof. Garstang names the woman as Hatasu, and describes her as "one of the most masterful princesses in Egyptian history, ruling during the reign of Thotmes III. while the whole of the country.

"After the accession of Thotmes III, Princess Hatasu continued to exercise the office of Anchor to protect lives and property of foreigners in Central America's smallest republic. Not far away a United States cruiser was steaming down from Panama to join them.

On the suggestion of a prominent banker, Rodolfo Duke and his wife were equipped with rifles and revolvers and given carte blanche to shoot any Communist on sight. And many sons of the land fled families, both foreign and native, were armed and turned loose to snare any radicals still at large.

The country was still under martial law but the military junta had succeeded former President Araujo remained confined It could rely with insurgents who caused a number of casualties in their forays last week.

Monday on board the new Canadian destroyer, Skeena, in the harbor of Acajutla, according to a statement issued this morning by Premier Bennett.

14th year of his reign, he seized all her possessions, and her favorite, including Moses, were forced to flee the country."

Professor Garstang bases his belief upon a discovery of the tombs of the kings of ancient Jericho, one of which he has found and on the reign of Princess Hatasu and Thotmes III. His premise is that should the tombs of a later date failed to show Egyptian influence the view in question must have been that of the Egyptian princess.

He believes that his discoveries also support modern theory that the exodus of the people of Israel from Egypt to Canaan took place after the death of Thotmes II, probably some time in the 15th century.

Say Wolf Which Bit Boy's Finger Did Not Mean to

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Jan. 26—An investigation of an incident at Bellevue Park in which a finger of an old Ojibway Indian, Jack Shingwauk Tome, was bitten off by a tame wolf, shows that the wolf did not intend to do the deed. It had placed his mittened hand on the wire cage in which the wolf is kept. Clyde was watching the game bear in the adjoining cage, and put out his hand up against the wolf enclosure. The wolf caught the mitten and when the boy attempted to release himself the jaws of the animal tightened, severing the finger.

Superintendent Louis Barge of the park says the men employed there frequently hold their leather mitts and other things against the cage and that the animal takes them in her mouth and tugs at them like a dog.

After the wolf had taken Clyde's mitt, containing the finger, it played with it about the cage, tossing it in the air and catching it and rolling on it.

Clyde will go down in history as the only human in Algoma district and perhaps in Canada to have a finger or any portion of his anatomy removed by a wolf.

Ten Timely Advertising Tips

A successful retailer who has spent the best part of his advertising appropriation in good newspaper copy gave ten points which had helped him to the success of his business man through advertising. The ten points:

1. I advertise regularly. Every issue of the paper takes my story to its readers.

2. I make every ad. look like mine. Years ago I adopted a distinctive style, and I have stuck to it. I use plenty of white space; my ads are never hard to read.

3. I put into newspaper advertising a definite proportion of my gross sales which I fix after the beginning of the year. My rule is to make it three per cent. of the previous year's gross, with more if special conditions justify it.

4. I brighten my ads with frequent illustrations, either humorous or practical. This costs me little, as the up-to-date newspapers supply these.

5. I am careful never to over-promise. Then, when I really have an unusual bargain, people believe me when I "whoop 'er up a little."

6. I think advertising all the time, I buy goods that will advertise well. Sometimes I buy goods just for their advertising value.

7. I get good display for my ads by seeing that the copy is in the newspaper-office in plenty of time. I do this by having a definite hour to write the copy.

8. Whenever possible, I carry the nationally advertised goods that are advertised in my own home paper. I feature them. Sometimes they give me a smaller margin than fly-by-night concerns, but I find that I sell faster and make more money in the end, besides pleasing more customers.

9. I always plan my window and counter displays to link up with my newspaper advertising. Each helps the other.

10. My salespeople back up my advertising. They often help me with suggestions for it, and see to it that they always read it.

GOVERNING COST LARGER

C. H. Carlisle Appeals For Business Methods of Economy

TORONTO, Jan. 26.—"It is statistics out of every eleven of our population is engaged in Government service," declared C. H. Carlisle yesterday, in the course of an address on matters President of the Toronto Board of Trade before meeting of the year in the Board's 122nd President, John Skaith, and he continued: "Political patronage, rather than quality, has undoubtedly been the cause of the unemployment of many in that army of Government officials. Many businesses with world ramifications are managed by very few men—why not Governments? Our people are becoming more interested in government than in political parties. Interested in affairs of men than politicians."

Speaking briefly on economic trends in industry, Mr. Carlisle asserted that "the classes of labor are paid too low a rate as compared with the cost of living. If wages are to remain low, the cost of living must be equally low. Farm products and certain manufactured articles are selling at subnormal prices, while others are selling at too high. The same is true of labor. Certain groups are still being paid the rates which wages had reached in 1929. This is a time when we should all be willing to share the burden. Neither organized capital nor organized labor should be permitted to extract a return greater than is consistent with current conditions."

Sentence Methods v Tariffs

In quick succession came these two hitches by Mr. Carlisle: "We have 245 members in the Federal Parliament and in the Senate, or a total of 341, dealing with Federal matters. Surely that has been long enough and would we not have sufficient representation for our population of 10,000,000 people? We had half as many, or fewer, members during the war, maintain, or increase our position in world trade we must go into detail. I am confident Canada will not lose her position. She is too intelligent and progressive for that. But how is she to meet these new conditions?" The speaker would rely on lower costs and maintenance of quality and service, rather than on protective tariffs and trade agreements; and expressed his gratification at seeing the Western Provinces moving for the creation of a consolidation of Governments and a reduction in administration costs.

NO CLIMATIC CHANGE SHOWN

Winters Now No Milder, Icy Pitchers Fooled People

Albany, Jan. 26 — One reason people think the climate is changing nowadays is that they no longer have to break the ice from the water pitcher to wash their faces in the morning, Gustave S. Lindgren, head of the Weather Bureau here, declares.

While he considers this Winter's warmth an exception, he declares that records of every period show no climatic change. There appears to be cycles of three or four years, however, in which Winters are mild or severe.

"When I went to college," he said "the daily task of breaking the ice in the water pitcher to wash with sent chills down the spine. That was enough to make the weather seem cold the rest of the day. Now we have warmer houses, better clothing and food, so are more athletic and are not so aware of the cold."

RUSH TROOPS TO SOUTH KASHMIR

Jammu, India, Jan. 26.—Troops were rushed today to the village in Southern Kashmir, near the Punch border, where 10,000 Moslems were reported to have risen in arms against the Hindus.

The Moslems, headed by muslvis (Moslem teachers) from the Punjab States, besieged the village, but ended twelve villages, looting postoffices and burning houses.

The communal fighting was described as grave. The troops were sent to the district around Rajouri and Resai, a few miles north of Nowshera, near the frontier.

The bulk of the Kashmir population is Mohammedan, although the ruling race is Hindu. There long has been friction between the two sects.

Plan to Convert Debt of G. Britain

London, Jan. 26—The financial editor of the London Express says today he understands a gigantic scheme was being considered for the conversion of all Great Britain's national debt.

The proposed conversion would reduce the interest payments equivalent to about 18 pence (roughly 36 cents) on the pound, he said, and the greater part of the saving would come from the taxpayers.

While the average yield of government securities, which now is just under five percent, probably would be reduced to three per cent, the new proposal might mean an actual increase in the net yield owing to the tax reduction.

The editor said the improvement in the national credit would be so great that the market value of government securities would be maintained.

Through the ever-changing conditions of 85 years—wars, Epidemics, periods of financial stringency, panics and depressions, the Canada Life has steadily progressed.

Summary of Remarks of the President, Mr. Leighton McCarthy, at Annual Meeting of Canada Life

Canadians should look forward with confidence, because their accumulated resources are infinitely greater than they have ever been, and their undeveloped wealth, which was once so largely a matter of speculation, rather than of proven fact, is now known beyond any doubt whatever to exist to an extent far surpassing the most optimistic estimates made in past years.

In considering the various phases of the economic setback which Canada has received, it is important to remember that they have arisen mainly from extraneous and not internal causes. Canada's position is fortunate in that she is the producer of raw materials which the world demands, and which can be produced in Canada at a low cost. Provided Canada exercises thrift and economy in expenditures, both public and private, she should be able to meet all her obligations at home and abroad.

The likelihood of a new and greater world prosperity does not lie in the realms of finance or politics so much as in the intelligence and ingenuity brought to bear on the problems of interchange of goods and services by the manufacturers and traders of the different countries. There never was a finer opportunity for the building of a greater and better business structure and this situation should appeal to the imagination and ingenuity of man.

Life Insurance Companies have met the test of this period in a manner which has demonstrated as never before their strength, integrity and absolute reliability. Looking back over years still fresh in our memories we find that Life Insurance has always successfully played a major part in supporting the economic fabric; it has allayed fear in the time of panics and ameliorated the shock of world war and the deadly effects of influenza. The present world wide depression and economic disturbance have caused a revision of values which has tested the Insurance Companies and demonstrated that they have not only rendered outstanding public service, but have emerged with increased public confidence. With the return of more favourable conditions, Life Insurance will continue to grow in service, in usefulness and in amounts beyond anything it has heretofore achieved.

The well-directed efforts of Canada Life representatives have paid for $116,048,075 of new assurances. They also sold annuities with considerations of $5,663,823, an increase of $2,495,514 over the annuity figures of the previous year. The result of the year's work, after deducting death claims, maturing endowments and other terminations, has been to increase business in force to the sum of $1,029,758,735.

Total net income from all sources was $50,939,334, exceeding by $5,422,887 the income of 1930.

The Company has made payments during last year of $25,584,206, an increase of $2,437,105 under its contracts, in settlement of death claims, maturing endowments, dividends, annuities and cash values for surrendered policies, and of this amount $16,979,465 was paid to living policyholders.

The Surplus Funds and Special Reserves of the Company are $8,170,-995, after writing down securities by $1,753,422. These surplus funds include $3,481,500 payable to policyholders as dividends during the Company's dividend year ending in 1932, and $3,496,426 of unassigned surplus, the latter being an increase of $256,147. This reflects an encouraging rate of mortality, a wise selection of lives and satisfactory earnings from carefully selected Investment Securities.

The reserves for liabilities are established on a basis which provides a greater margin of security for policyholders than the Insurance Laws require by several million dollars. The assets have been entered at book values, the total of which is lower than it would be if the values officially established by the Dominion Insurance Department had been used.

Assets passed the Two Hundred Million mark this year, and amount to $204,776,019. This means that the Assets have doubled since 1924, when they were One Hundred Million Dollars. The growth of dividend earnings in the Government and Municipal class has been largely augmented this year. Over Seventeen Million of the Twenty-five Million Dollars invested in Bonds this year were selected from these classes.

Government and Municipal Bonds comprise 47% of the total of a broadly diversified and carefully selected list of Bonds, Debentures and other securities.

The gross earnings from the general operations of the Company during the year amounted to $7,406,013.

The ratio of expense to total income showed a substantial decrease.

Single premiums and annual first year premiums for both ordinary and annuity business showed an increase of over four million dollars.

EARLY LIFE OF FISHERIES IS RECALLED

M. H. Nickerson, Founder of N. S. Fishermen's Union

ADVANCEMENTS Recommends Formation of a Marketing Board

Halifax, N. S., (By The Canadian Press)—A marketing board for the fisheries, along the lines of boards operating in Britain and Japan, is recommended for the well-being of the Canadian fishing industry by M. H. Nickerson, pioneer of the co-operative movement among Nova Scotia fishermen and honorary chairman of their union.

Mr. Nickerson, who recalls the changes of time and tide from the middle of the last century to the present, now lives in Massachusetts, but has not ceased to observe, and comment, on conditions in his native province. Fisherman, school teacher, insurance agent, newspaper editor, it was he, as a member of the Nova Scotia Legislature some twenty-five years ago, who secured passage in the assembly of an act to incorporate "The Fishermen's Union of Nova Scotia", an organization which flourished for several years.

He believes that the opening of a fish trade direct from the south shore of Nova Scotia to Portland, Maine, by fast packet to Portland, and thence by train to Montreal, where the product could be distributed to consuming centres, would greatly aid that section of the coast; advocates adopting of fish canning on a general scale, "keeping the existing canneries in operation the year round"; after the experience of Japan and the Soviet Republic, all along the coast to the Kurile Islands," thinks that the ban on domestic purse-seining should be lifted and that the present fishing bounty fund should be appropriated as an emergency measure.

Indulging in reminiscence, Mr. Nickerson remembers that in his youth—he was born in 1844—the Cape Island, off the Shelburne county coast, implements and methods were of rather a primitive sort, and the kind of fish then taken were limited to groundfish—haddock and cod—school fish, which included mackerel, herring, pollock and a few other species such as halibut, alewives and so on. Hook and line were used for the groundfish, nets and drag scines for the schooling varieties, and long afterwards, rudely constructed weirs for the mackerel and herring.

Pioneers Progressive

But the pioneer methods were progressive. Mr. Nickerson's own family come of the Lunenburg Puritans, the Nickersons of Harwich, who arrived in Nova Scotia in 1760 and settled at Barrington. It was not long before they were building schooners and venturing far afield in search of fish.

Mr. H. Nickerson was the eldest of a father who had been a "seaman in early life," fisherman in manhood and occasional conductor of "fishing schools for navigation students." It was natural that the lad should early study the family calling and seek to find methods of improvement.

It was after a wide experience in business and journalism that he was elected to the legislature and was instrumental in forming the fishermen's union. Before that he had come to visualize that "the crying necessity was to put producer and consumer in the closest possible contact, each one with the other, and to provide for the quickest despatch in handling and transportation—there was no fishery paper in the province. There was no regularly organized staff for collecting and publishing statistics—and there no way of distributing intelligence of the calling or the industry at large, so that dwellers on one section of the shore had very scant knowledge of the doings in any other seaboard district. This worked to the disadvantage of all hands.

"With a view to remedying these defects to some extent at least, I started my paper, the Coastguard. I had it published in Yarmouth; in blanket sheet of no great size, but I managed to get it tolerably well filled, and a voluntary subscriptions came pouring in. The topics and the tone had an air of novelty, for the column set apart as the Fishermen's Forum always carried correspondence from the boatmen and back from which instructed me amazed more than the natives."

In 1886 Mr. Nickerson was appointed to the lobster commission of that year, which, he says, "was like a postgraduate course for me in the practical science of the fisheries." Mr. Nickerson's recommendation for an open season from December 15 to June 1, along the shore from Yarmouth to Halifax, went into effect, "and held good, without word of change, for the season until 1918". Then, he goes on, the season was curtailed, and exhibit declines set in canning and exporting. "The special fall season, just granted, is making for the better, and is in part a return to my ruling of o long ago."

System Adopted

Another plan taken up by the Coastguard was in behalf of cheaper, cold storage plants, and for chilling apparatus on the large fresh fish packets. This system was gradually adopted, "and I think there are almost the whole range of requirements, but not quite."

As a member of the legislature, first elected in 1902, Mr. Nickerson was a member of the house committee on fisheries. In connection with the newly formed union, he says that "it was put through under the foundation of a legal status, enrolling only the freehold fishermen, admitting of no membership no hired hand on the vessels, or parties who fished in boats owned by any other person whatever. We got our thirty-five units, or stations, in working order in 1907, the total yearly value of fish caught then being $3,000,000 in round numbers for Nova Scotia.

"In three years the value had risen to $10,000,000, the greatest proportional increase ever made by domestic trade in a short time, and this was by no lucky turn in the market, which never came, but by the energetic efforts of the united fishermen themselves. Our charges met the tariff commission, and got the twenty-five percent duty on lobster cops repealed, importing for a time, collectively, good-six-three Manila cordage direct from the Canadian mouth factory and distributing it to nine cents a pound. We had a special display in the new exhibition building at Halifax, and were awarded first prize on all grades. We prevailed on the local government to put up a bonus of not more than $750.00 for a boat to collect fish for transhipment.

"Sir William Coaker (founder of the Fishermen's Protective Union of Newfoundland) got his charter from us, and so did the Vancouver Union."

Mr. Nickerson recalls that he once addressed the skippers of Gloucester, urging them to seek the entrance of the destructive steam trawler method. That was almost twenty years ago. "I have grown more tolerant since. Such an invasion is like an attack of measles, in each region you cannot cure the malady, but it will run itself out in due time."

"When the first steam trawler unloaded at Boston," he added, he says, "I foresaw trouble, and got a resolution passed in the local house, calling on the Ottawa government for a convention of all interested nations, to prohibit operations in certain areas apart from the breeding ground, the Dogger Bank and others unanimously, and at once went into hiding. It is a problem which bids fair to solve itself, both in Canada and the United States."

CAN MAKE NO COMPROMISES

States Lord Willingdon in His Inaugural Address

New Delhi, Jan. 26— AP)—The British Government can make no compromises in its decision to put down the civil disobedience movement, Lord Willingdon, Viceroy of India, said today in his inaugural address to the Indian Legislature.

While the government will take the necessary steps to guard against any abuse of the special powers vested in the authorities," he said, "there can be no relaxation of the measures now in force against civil disobedience so long as the circumstances exist which make them necessary.

"No government worthy of the name, would hesitate to accept M. Gandhi's challenge. There must be no room for misunderstanding, either on the part of the public or by those who choose to disobey the law. There can be no modification of the ordinances while the present situation continues."

After declaring the work of the last round table conference would be carried forward and details of the new constitution for India fully and rapidly explored by the three committees which are now in London here from London, January 29, Lord Willingdon said:

"I feel it a great privilege, toward the end of my public life, to be leading India on to her promised position as an absolutely equal partner with the Dominions under the crown."

India's economic and financial situation, he said, is sound and healthy, comparing favorably with any other country.

They arrived at Sudbury and finally stopped for the night at Ogoma. Saturday they ran into a terrific storm near Hearst and stayed over until Sunday morning, when they continued to Sioux Lookout.

NEW CUSTOMS TREATY OFFER

England Ready to Do Business With Denmark

Copenhagen, Jan. 26—(AP)—The political correspondent of the Politiken has offered Denmark a new customs treaty.

He quoted a purported interview with Rt. Hon. William Ormsby-Gore, Secretary for Colonies, as saying that Great Britain wishes to outline new commercial treaties not only with the Dominions, but with a number of Northern countries, such as Denmark, Sweden, Argentina and Holland.

The plan would be to act up freer trade between these countries and Great Britain, amounting to a real preference in trade, the paper said.

Speed of 110.785 Miles Per Hour Attained by Boat

Car Wood Sets Mark of 110.785 Miles Per Hour To Claim Boat Record

First Mile Run Done at Rate of 111.08 Miles Per Hour

2ND RUN SLOWER

Third Attempt to Put Speed Up Another Mile Per Hour

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 27 — Gar Wood, veteran United States speedboat racer, today set a mark of 110.785 miles an hour in his Miss America IX to claim the world's speedboat record on the nautical mile course in Indian Creek.

On the second of his runs today Wood pushed his long 24-cylinder boat at a rate of 110.49 miles an hour southward over the measured nautical mile course in Indian Creek, finishing a north-bound run at a speed of 111.08 miles an hour. Elapsing time was 32.52 seconds.

The average of the times run in each direction was 110.785 miles an hour and exceeded the record of 110.223 miles an hour set July 9, 1931, by Wood in his Second Mile Blowup.

The second and slower of the two runs was with the wind, measured at eight miles an hour from the southeast. In addition, Wood had a slight advantage from an incoming tide on his southbound run.

It appeared he planned a third run over the course as he piloted his Miss America IX to the starting place of a northbound run.

Not yet satisfied with speed he attained, Wood said he would disembark briefly today in order to make repairs on the hull of the Miss America IX and then probably would seek to raise his speed tomorrow.

"Although I am happy we broke the record, I am not completely satisfied," he said, as he returned to the timers station.

"I believe the boat will travel at least a mile an hour faster and I will try for another record tomorrow or at least within the next few days."

Wood said the new of the Miss America IX would be lowered in order to decrease the chance of jumping in choppy water.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 27.—Gar Wood's record breaking run of 110.785 miles an hour in his Miss America IX at Miami Beach today drew a monopoly on speed Great Britain has held over the world since Kaye Don set the world's speedboat record of 110.49 miles an hour last July.

Britain holds the land speed record of 245.733 miles an hour set at Daytona Beach last spring by Sir Malcolm Campbell in the Bluebird racing car and the air speed record of 379.90 miles an hour set last summer by O. H. Stainforth of the British Navy.

PROBE GYPSUM QUEEN CASE

Commissioner is Named to Study Payments in Reparation Case

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 27 (By The Canadian Press) — Mr. Justice Horace Harvey of the Supreme Court of Alberta has been appointed commissioner to investigate all circumstances surrounding the payment on April last of $71,278.72 as war reparations in connection with the shipment of coal to the "Gypsum Queen," a three-masted Nova Scotia schooner. Official announcement of the appointment was made today.

The allegation made before reparation commissioner Errol M. McDougall, who conducted the case, was that the vessel had been "torpedoed and sunk by the enemy on July 31, 1915, when about fifty miles off the coast of Ireland." On the report placed before the cabinet by the secretary of state following which the order-in-council for the appointment of a royal commission was made, it is stated that "subsequent to the making of payment as aforesaid the minister received information which leads him to believe that grave irregularities may have occurred in connection with such inquiry and payment. Involving the commission of criminal or other improper acts."

R. C. MATTHEWS

Rumors in well-informed political circles continue to state R. C. Matthews, M.P., for the post of Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, succeeding Hon. W. D. Ross, who has resigned.

TASCHEREAU MAKES REPLY

Member Wants Information About McDougall and Cowans

Quebec, Que., Jan. 27 (By The Canadian Press)—Premier L. A. Taschereau has replied to a series of questions placed on the order paper of the legislative assembly by Peter Bercovitch, member for Montreal-St. Louis, respecting the bankrupt stockbroking firm of McDougall and Cowans.

To the question "has the Attorney General's department received complaints that the brokerage firm of McDougall and Cowans committed offences in violation of the criminal code," the Premier replied that such complaints had been received from several persons.

The government had no knowledge as to whether certain Montreal magistrates had refused to issue summonses or warrants against the firm, he said. Mr. Taschereau in answering the question:

"Have certain magistrates of the district of Montreal refused to issue summonses or warrants against the brokerage firm of McDougall and Cowans? If so the city of Montreal, though prima facie proof of the commission of crimes by the said firm was submitted to its city magistrates."

Two further questions were: "If it the intention of the government to investigate the affidavits of Mr. Dougall and Cowans with a view to ascertaining if they have committed any offence against the criminal law of the Dominion," and "Is it the intention of the Attorney-General to prefer indictment against the former members of the firm of McDougall and Cowans." The answer was that if a judge or magistrate held complaints were well founded. The department of the Attorney General would take up the case.

Mr. Bercovitch said afterwards that he was dissatisfied with the replies to his questions and that he would proceed further in the matter on the floor of the house.

DICTATORSHIP NOT IMPLIED

Hackett Believes One Head Would Eliminate Duplication

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 27.—(By The Canadian Press)—Capt. John Hackett, member of Parliament for Stanstead, in an interview with the Montreal Star, said he had not urged a dictatorship for Canadian Railways in addressing the Canadian Club at Toronto Monday. Mr. Hackett, in addressing the Canadian National Railways in relation to its savings through unification, said I assume that in considering this question the Royal Commission will take it for granted that economies to be effected by the railway must be considered in the light of the fact that it will recommend that borrowing by the Canadian National Railways cease. I suggest that Canadian National System must be made to pay its way. That can be done. I daresay that as a temporary expedient some kind of a dictator may be put in charge of all railways and thus affect savings by reducing service and eliminating the cost of unnecessary duplication. Unnecessary wages may be cut, bills may be settled and, if those expedients do not yield relief, then a tax known as the railway tax, from which the competing roads should be exempted, should be levied in aid of the National System."

EX-KAISER 73 YEARS OF AGE HEALTH POOR

Takes Nap in Afternoon in Comfortable "Armchair

NO WOODCUTTING

Wilhelm Feels That He is Becoming Old Man Now

(By J. A. Bouman)

DOORN, Holland, Jan. 27.—(AP) The 73rd birthday of former Kaiser Wilhelm today is overshadowed by the loss of his favourite brother Henry, Germany's Sailor Prince, and a gloom over the anniversary.

This time the bereavement is still more recent; his sister, the former Queen Sophie of Greece died only a fortnight ago at Frankfort-on-Main.

In addition to his private grief, the exiled monarch's health is not good He is beginning to feel the infirmities of age creeping on him his Dutch retreat, which in winter time has not exactly an enviable climate.

Although still an early riser, he now arises himself more latitude in the matter of an afternoon nap, and he takes a couple of hours' snooze regularly in a comfortable armchair.

Wood cutting, his favorite pursuit for years, he had to abandon some time ago, when the trees on the Doorn House estate had been thinned out. The Ex-Kaiser has been contenting himself with sawing up lumber brought from a distance but latterly an electric saw has been called into operation. Wilhelm feels he is becoming an old man now.

He finds, however, plenty of occupation at home in an intellectual way, and he keeps himself constantly informed on how the world goes.

When the New Brunswick Legislature opens on February 4th, Hon. C. D. Richards, who succeeded Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, as Premier of the Province, will be meeting the House for the first time in the capacity of Prime Minister. Mr. Richards assumed the Premiership early last Summer, or a few months after the House had been prorogued. The above pictures show a picturesque view of the New Brunswick Parliament Buildings at Fredericton, while inset top, left to right, are: Sir J. Douglas Hazen, Chief Justice of the King's Bench Division of the Supreme Court and now Administrator for the Province in the absence of Lieut.-Governor Hon. Hugh McLean, who will open the Session; and Hon. C. D. Richards, Prime Minister. Below, inset, is Mr. A. A. Dysart, leader of the Liberal Opposition.

British Income Tax Laws To Be Made Intelligible

Lord MacMillan Accepts Appointment to Codify Laws

FORMIDABLE TASK

LONDON, Jan. 27.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Lord MacMillan, distinguished Judicial mind in a mass of more than ordinary talents in the economic sphere, has accepted the chairmanship of a committee appointed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer "to codify the law relating to income tax with the special view to making the law intelligible to the taxpayer as the nature of the legislation admits."

The appointment of the committee, in other words, constitutes a frank confession by the treasury of the truly formidable task that confronts the British taxpayer in compiling his taxable assessment.

The present official form consists of four foolscap pages, accompanied by four closely-printed foolscap pages of instructions for filling it in. And in addition several private publishing firms have printed handbooks attempted to ease the burden of form-filling.

The committee has already held 30 meetings and the appointment of Lord MacMillan as its new chairman is made following the committee's admission that the enquiry has reached a stage "when it appears desirable that further difficulties should be directed by the holder of some high judicial office."

The taxpayer may have difficulty in filling out his income returns, but he has not stopped the unprecendented rush to pay income tax. Three-quarters of the tax on last year's income was due on January first. Last week, receipts amounted to £17,000,000—more than double the receipts in the corresponding week of 1931.

Manufacturer is Held For Ransom

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 27— Howard Woolverton, 52, local manufacturer, and son of a South Bend bank president, was held for $50,000 ransom today by two men who kidnapped him while he was on his way home from a theater last night.

Mrs. Florence Woolverton, 49, abducted with her husband but released two miles from the city was given a note containing directions for leaving the money in a package on a designated road and setting tonight as the deadline for delivery of the ransom.

DRIVEN MAD BY REVERSES

Business Slump Given as Explanation of Shootings

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 27 — A five-year-old grievance of a man driven insane by business reverses was the motive given today for the brief reign of terror which brought death to two men and injuries to four other persons in a crowded bank lobby yesterday.

D. J. Mead, 52, member of a once wealthy family, drew a pistol and shouted, "this town has given me a dirty deal; where is the big shot?" and opened fire.

The eight shots he fired—pausing once to reload his pistol—left B. W. Nichols, 29, dying and three other men and a woman wounded. Then Orvis M. Pierce, special city policeman, who was shot twice in the hand, struggled to return the fire with a jammed pistol, Mead placed the muzzle of his gun in his mouth and killed himself.

Nichols, assistant cashier of the Old Motor Works, died a few hours later. Albert A. Ebesser, 35, executive vice-president of the bank, received wounds in his shoulder and side and his condition is serious. Witnesses said Mead apparently directed some of the shots at him, but that those which struck Nichols, Timmons, John P., Lilley, 34, and Miss Leslie Duncan, 23-year-old nurse, were fired at random.

Cheerfulness is the offshoot of goodness.

London, Jan. 27 (CP)— Various celebrations including services at Liverpool Cathedral marked the centenary of the birth of Lewis Carroll, famous author of "Alice in Wonderland" today. MRS. FORTESCU IS INDICTED

Jury Unwilling to Return Indictment at Honolulu

Honolulu, Jan. 27 (AP)—Second degree murder indictments had been returned by the grand jury today against Mrs. Granville Fortescue and three naval men, charging them with slaying Joseph Kahahawai, suspected assaulter of Mrs. Fortescue's daughter.

The indictment was returned only after individual votes of the Oahu grand jurors were polled to accept the jury's preferred report said raised the question of insanity.

The defence immediately seized upon the grand jury's apparent unwillingness to return an indictment and Attorney Montgomery Winn prepared to ask the court today to quash the indictment. His plea is based on the contention that coercion was used to make the jury forego the formal indictment.

Bail also was to be fixed today for the defendants, who include Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, Mrs. Fortescue's son-in-law, and E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, enlisted men. They have been held at Pearl Harbor naval base without bail since their arrest nearly three weeks ago.

Both Lieutenant Massie and Mrs. Fortescue's mother, grandmother, returning of the indictment, emphasized they expected ultimate vindication.

No Worry About Bullet in Brain

Chicago, Ills., Jan. 27 — Frank Budde, 37, has a bullet in his brain but it isn't worrying him any.

In fact he wants to get out from under a hospital room to his job with the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad.

X-ray photographs revealed the bullet lodged in his brain tissue, about two inches deep near his left ear but physicians said he apparently was none the worse for it.

"Popping" Question is Easy With Valentines, Ladies!

Chicago, Ills., Jan. 27—Ladies! The question can be "popped" with valentines!

Already the valentine counters are offering a variety of leap year suggestions, ranging from "feeling for the right words" to "the fatal words."

For the frank young modern miss there is a gay red card, boldly proposing. Less direct is another informing the receiver that the sender is in a mood for a diamond solitaire.

Others are more subtle. For instance, there is one of a fluffy white kitten, lonesome looking, purring: "It's you, just you, I'm needing."

And then there is a card with a girl's face on a daisy stem entitled: "Just a little wild flower waiting to be picked."

And for the girl who has been having some blonde competition and would like to know the seriousness thereof there is a neat card to play picturing a pickaninny reading a copy of "Gentlemen prefer blondes" and inscribed beneath: "Yo' don't really, does yo'?"

Search for Submarine M-2 is Unsuccessful Fears Crew are All Lost

Navy Puts Forth Every Effort to Discover and Rescue Submerged Craft Lying Somewhere in English Channel

EARLY REPORTS OF FINDING ARE DENIED

Planes and Boats Join in Quest of Traces of Lost Submersible Craft—Reports of Sight of Sinking Craft are Exploded

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—The British Admiralty announced at 1.30 this afternoon that the submarine M-2 which failed to come up from a dive off Portland yesterday had not been located at that time.

"No communication has yet been received from the M-2," the Admiralty statement said, "and in consequence great anxiety is now felt for the safety of those aboard."

Earlier, the Evening Standard said the submarine had been located on the bottom and lighters were on the way with lifting tackle but efforts to establish contact with the crew had failed.

Saw Sub Sinks ?

London, Jan. 27—The Admiralty sent a man over to Calais in interview the captain of a coastal vessel who reported that he had seen the M-2 plunge beneath the waves.

Unofficially the captain was reported to have said that he observed the M-2 from its bridge heave up by the bows and go down stern first.

Problematical

If the M-2 is structurally sound the crew should be able to live for from eight to ten days, but if her double hull has been pierced some or all of the compartments may be flooded and little chance remains for the members of the crew in those compartments.

Rescue operations and salvage operations have been successfully conducted at greater depths than that at which the M-2 now lies, and unless the weather becomes tough itself, trouble should be experienced by salvage divers.

Chance of Rescue

London, Jan. 27—The chances of rescue of the crew of the British submarine M-2, sunk in 102 feet of water off the south coast of England are much greater, due to recent investigations, than they would have been a decade ago.

British submarines are now equipped with the Davis escape apparatus—a nose clip, mouthpiece, tube and oxygen bag, somewhat similar to the American "lung" recently devised and perfected by Lieut. Charles B. Momsen. Last summer when the British submarine Poseidon sank in twenty fathoms of water in the Yellow Sea six men escaped from the submerged craft by using the Davis apparatus, although two died from injuries received in the escape.

Portland, Eng., Jan. 27— Wives and relatives of the men aboard the submarine M-2 received telegrams today from the naval commanding officer of H.M.S. Dolphin, Portland, stating:

"I regret to inform you that your husband (or son) is missing and feared drowned in the submarine M-2 which is believed to have sunk off Portland Bill yesterday."

Story Exploded

Portland, Eng., Jan. 27 (AP)—Reports that a navy seaplane had sighted the M-2 resting on the bottom of water where the submarine M-2 sank yesterday, proved erroneous this afternoon; when it was learned that what was believed to have been the sub was only an area of water discolored by mud scraped up from the bottom by dredges.

LICENCE SALE STILL HEAVY

Local Purchases of Licences For Cars Almost up to 1931

According to Mr. Geo. Ketcheson issuer of motor licenses for this district, the demand this year for the new plates has almost been as great as it was last year, and while there has been a slight decrease in the number issued, still the drop is scarcely noticeable, and is quite as great as it has been in the larger centres where, it was reported, the dropping off in the number of applications has been considerable.

In a statement issued by the Hon. Leopold Macauley, minister of Highways, he draws attention to the fact that no time of grace is allowed by the act regarding the new applications, but that it has always been the practice for the local authorities to allow a period of 30 days' grace. That period will expire this Saturday. While local police officers have had no word from head office, they also state that the time limit as being on the first day of February.

The fees charged for motor licenses in Ontario are higher than those charged in any other province of Canada.

SUBMARINE "-8"

SINKS OFF PORTLAND

Portland, Jan. 27.—(AP)—The British submarine "-8" M-3 dived yesterday off Portland, sank to some depth afterward, and hours later was believed to have struck bottom at the bottom of the English Channel.

Salvage craft and divers were sent to the spot from nearby Portsmouth naval base. Fears were expressed for the safety of the seventy six officers and 46 men, although officials said the submarine could remain under water for 48 hours.

The M-3 dived at 10.30 a.m. yesterday five miles south of Portland to 18 fathoms of water. When she failed to rise for several hours the destroyers and two submarines went to the rescue from the harbor of Portland.

After the installation which was conducted in a manner reflecting great credit on the officers, short addresses were given by the visiting Patriarchs. The Grand Treasurer of the Grand Encampment of Ontario, P.Q.P. E. C. Corbutt gave an eloquent address on Fraternalism. Oddfellows and suggested as a tribute to the Grand Sire, Bro. J. COMMITTEES BEING CHOSEN

County Council Members Wrestle With Organization

Owing to the fact that the councillors were occupied choosing the various committees, little business was transacted at the morning session of the County Council held in Shire Hall this morning.

When the meeting was called to order shortly before twelve o'clock, noon, the remainder of the morning was given over to the reading of communications, after the minutes of Tuesday's meeting were read and confirmed. Mr. E. V. Illey, who had previously asked permission to address the council, gave a brief report of the council held on the opportunity they had given him to address them, and urged a continuance of the connection in the Bank of Commerce, which bank he represented. Mr. Hill Hoare, Warden Mitchell, at the finish of the address of Mr. Illey, then asked for an expression from the members who were present. This was replied to by Mr. Larkin, reeve of Tyendinaga, who moved the motion that the account at present in the bank be not changed, which was seconded by Mr. R. Mallory, deputy-reeve of Sidney.

After the finish of the address the communications which were read by County Clerk W. H. Nugent, were all referred back to the Ways and Means committee, and the council then adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon.

The informative qualities of the press was again amply demonstrated recently when Mr. R. C. Breit, reeve of Limerick township, who owns two houses in Trenton, picked up an issue of this paper some few days ago and found, to his surprise that one of the barns belonging to a house he owned in Trenton, had caught fire and was damaged quite badly. He was quite unaware of the fact that there had been any fire at all, and while he bought the paper for the news which it contained it was somewhat of a shock to learn that such news affected himself and his belongings so closely. While he has always been a close follower of events such as have been printed in these pages they have generally been more of a disinterested nature as to anything concerning himself. From now on, he said, he will gratefully read the events that may happen in the territory covered by this paper will be fully reported.

"Where Sound Sounds Best"

"Perfecting Peggy"

By Arthur R. Stott

From the top round of Medfield's social ladder, Mrs. DeMaine she gazed haughtily down on Mrs. Brown and her pretty daughter, Peggy, who had been kindly entertaining a firm hold on the first step.

Under ordinary conditions you might just as well have expected oil to mix with water as to look for a state of social equality to exist between the DeMaines and the Browns.

But something out of the ordinary took place; Peggy DeManaie, the young action of the proud lady, showed a decided preference for Peggy Brown's company, and the mother voiced an immediate protest.

"Why dear," Mama DeManaie said to her daughter, "the girl is a nobody; a little brown barbarian!"

"Indeed!" replied Peg DeManaie. "Well, I suppose you'll break it up, as you always manage things. Where did Peggy meet them?"

"At the auto races. I understand. She's a regular tomboy. drives her car around the country like a fiend, and her mother's color! Why, Reggie told me that she's tanned all over!"

"Eh?" Papa DeMaine raised his eyes. "How does he know?"

"I'm sure that's something I don't know for certain—possibly in the bathing beach." Mrs. DeManie's eyes flashed as she added, "But the real important matter is this: Reggie has been thrown together too friendly with Peggy Brown to suit me. It's unfortunate."

"Unfortunate!" snorted the father. "Perhaps it would be a bit useful, after all, for our son to continue his friendship. She seems like a very sensible young girl, and, as I have known Reggie has been plenty of room for improvement"

Mrs. DeManie's eyes opened wide. She didn't understand, but a new thought came. Mama DeManie did not understand the matter as she did, the thought might have been interjected. It was the impression that only one who was well versed in the ways of society understand. Mama DeManie further reasoned.

As soon as her husband had left the house, the lady seated herself in a comfortable chair, and developed the next half-hour to a careful thought on a plan whereby Peggy Brown might be properly groomed of course, that Reggie failed to listen to reason and give up the girl.

"I have it" she finally said to the wall. "I'll get Mr. Hartley to take the girl in hand. He's just a wonderful man, and he won't refuse, after all the many favors he has given to the church. And next week we'll take Reggie to Europe for a vacation."

Placing a mental O.K. on the plan, Mrs. DeManie arose and, as much as she cared to tell her husband in the evening.

"What's the use in carting the boy away from home?" he asked. "Why is it wrong for Peggy to see Peggy?"

"He may get serious, and proper before she is tamed."

"Tamed!" Papa DeManie frowned. "Why, that's no better than a bluffing!"

Mrs. DeManie was too overcome to make any reply. But, unknown to her thought, Reggie was told of the plans for help abroad, and, when it came to engaging the pearls on the morrow, Papa DeManie not only did as he was told for his wife and son, but he made a clean job of it by making it a party of three, as his wife insisted.

At the first opportunity Reggie told Peggy all about the intended voyage, explaining that he owed it to his mother to go with them To himself, he sighed with relief. Peggy was adorable, but a bit out of the outdoors. He was very much in need of a rest.

Anxious to please a wealthy and intensely interested member of his church, Mr. Hartley agreed, to do everything in his power to draw Peggy from her usual pursuits, and if possible, guide her into ways more befitting a lady. How much do you think I ought to donate?

But Mrs. DeManie had gone, vanished from the chair in which she had only a moment before been seated. Mr. DeManie looked all around the porch—then chuckled to himself.

FIVE DAYS FOR HAVING WEAPON

Police Say Accused May Be Wanted Elsewhere

Joseph Marshall, of Brockville, appeared before Magistrate Millet this morning charged with having in a revolver on his person without a permit contrary to the Criminal Code. The accused was arrested by Chief Constable Wills, who stopped him on railroad property, and upon searching his person the weapon was found. Marshall pleaded guilty and after confiscating the gun his worship sentenced him to five days in gaol. His Worship took into consideration the fact that the accused had already served one month in jail awaiting trial, and as the officers were of the opinion that the accused was wanted in another section of the province, his Worship sent the young man up on the bill for five days, thus giving the long arm of the law a chance to see if Marshall was wanted other places or not.

MITCHELL OF THURLOW IS ELECTED MAYOR

New Warden Discusses Financial Outlook on Installation in Office

Robt. M. Mitchell, Reeve of Thurlow, Chosen Without Opposition

VOICES OPINION

Rigid Economy Must Be Practised—Condition of Roads

At the opening session of the County Council of Hastings County on Tuesday afternoon, Mr. W. H. Nugent, clerk, stated that the first duty of the members was to select one of their members as Warden for the year.

Mr. W. Wiptook moved, seconded by Mr. James A. Sprackett, that Mr. Robert M. Mitchell, reeve of Thurlow township, be Warden.

There being no other nomination Mr. Mitchell was acclaimed to the position by a standing vote of all the members.

After signing the declaration of office Mr. Mitchell was invested with the emblems of office and addressed the council as follows:

"I am sure anything that I might say would be inadequate to express my appreciation of the honour you have bestowed upon me, and I realize it is only through your pleasure and good will that I have been able to attain this position, and I hope you will accept my sincere thanks.

"We are passing through the worst depression we have ever known, with no immediate outlook for improvement, but we feel that by adjusting ourselves to conditions that we can do much to relieve the situation in a great many ways, and with this thought in mind I think our first duty and the thing uppermost in our mind should be economy, while the major portion of our expenditure is for relief work I hope the part we do control will be kept to the minimum.

"I have always felt it was unfortunate that the County Councils of Ontario and twenty years ago had not seen fit to pay as they went along instead of putting debentures on, as it is making it that much harder now, and while it is a satisfaction to know that the county's debt has been much reduced and will soon be entirely wiped off, although we are in an unique position as I understand we are one of two counties in the Province that have no road debenture debts. Our largest expenditure ever we have to have full control, is the building and keeping in repair of our County Roads and bridges and I have always maintained that there should be a portion of our assessment set aside each year on one of our main roads.

"As our County is the largest in the Province and our County Roads excessive I am sure we can all understand the stupendous task your Road Superintendent and the Road Committee have had to contend with, roads in a terrible condition for modern traffic with the money at their command, but I think it is safe in saying that our roads never were into worse shape and condition than this year, however the open winter might have had some effect on them, and unless we keep a fairly open winter we will become through so good.

"As there is a point in the maintenance of a gravel road that the maintenance is too expensive for the excess travel, I think it is time for a permanent road and I think that condition has arrived in the case of the road, that is, the road from Foxboro to Madoc, and as the Government has lately taken over our other two roads as Provincial Highways I think it is time for our county to concentrate on the remaining one and make it a real road, however, this will be a matter of consideration.

"I hope the same consideration will be given to the appointment of the wardsmen and road foremen that have always been appointed in the past, as I feel that there is a great deal of criticism concerning the high cost of our maintenance and our Council as a whole only meets three times a year, and I know of some County Councils that meet every month, I think it is impera-tive that there be good, strong, representative committees to carry on the work between sessions as there are many important matters always coming up that they can give the sincere consideration and their work and reports on same have always been very satisfactory.

"There are many other matters of importance that will require the earnest and sincere thought and action, but I feel sure I know you will deal with in a fair and impartial manner for I am sure you realize that we cannot obtain the best results without the co-operation of every member of this Council, and sincerely trust I can secure your services appointed will work with the same diligence and care as they have always done in the past, and make this year one of the most successful we have ever had in this County Council.

"Wishing you all a most happy and prosperous year."

The capitalist system will last long as the workers are not worrying about.—George Bernard Shaw.

Rhodes Becomes Finance Minister in Few Days

Ottawa, Jan. 27—Hon. Edgar Nesbitt Rhodes, Minister of Fisheries, will become Minister of Finance within a few days, it is understood, on the coming session he will administer both his present portfolio and that of finance. Definite information of the appointment comes from the government of Ottawa.

Mr. Rhodes' promotion to the highly responsible portfolio now held by Premier Bennett will occur although immediately, it was made clear, no other cabinet changes will be made before the opening of Parliament on February 4.

The other changes predicted recently include the appointment of a successor to Senator Gideon Robertson as Minister of Labor. The latter's resignation, due to illness, is expected to be in the Premier's disposal. Hon. Wesley A. Gordon, Minister of Immigration, will fall heir to the Labor portfolio, it is believed.

MAIL ORDERS

Province Will Accept Only $25,000,000 Says Minister

Toronto, Jan. 27—Establishing a record for rapidity of public response the issue of Ontario's $25,000,000 bond issue was over-subscribed in two and a half hours yesterday in a deluge of buying orders from all parts of the Dominion.

In less than three hours after the bonds went on sale, the investment houses and banks handling the issue reported the entire sale of the $25,000,000 four and short-term debentures.

Issues Snapped Up

Expressing confidence in the province's credit, investors, by their eagerness to participate, the investing public reacted to the favorable interest rate of six per cent. by shaking loose their cash reserves and snapping up as much of both issues as they could afford.

The $6,000,000 six per cent. three-year bonds brought subscriptions amounting to $39,000,000 and the $20,000,000 five and one-half per cent. 15-year bonds resulted in subscriptions totalling more than $45,000,000. These were the figures at late hour last night and the total will be increased by many more millions when mail orders are received today, it is claimed.

Despite the fact that the Government has obtained two and a half times the amount it set out to raise, not a dollar more than $25,000,000 will be accepted, Hon. E. A. Dunlop, Provincial Treasurer, said last night.

Considering that though he had never doubted the success of the bond issue, the enthusiasm of the public was something he had not anticipated, Hon. Mr. Dunlop declared that the reception afforded this offering was another convincing proof of the confidence of Canadian investors in their own securities and further emphasizing the high credit standing of the province.

"But the Government has no intention of accepting any part of the subscriptions," said the Provincial treasurer, when informed that in financial circles were in the effect that the Government would increase the issue to $40,000,000 in view of the magnificent response. "We have asked the market for $25,000,000 and that is all we intend to take."

Allotment Necessary

Mr. Dunlop said that the public response to the offering would necessitate an allotment being made as the bond subscriptions have purchased large blocks of bonds will thus have their holdings reduced to the wide distribution may be obtained.

Haven in America Sought By Jesuits

Vatican City, Jan. 27. — Dissolution of the Jesuit Order in Spain will be followed immediately by an exodus of about 2,000 to "North America, South America, Belgium and Holland, it was said in well-informed circles.

While official confirmation is lacking, church authorities remarked that it was "quite likely" orders for the exodus already had been sent to Spain.

It was understood that Father Ledochowski, head of the Jesuit Order, foreseeing dissolution, proposed the plan to the Pope a few days ago and received his approval.

The younger priests, it was learned, will go to North and South America, and those who are older or not in robus' health will be transferred to Jesuit institutions in Holland and Belgium.

Included in the Council are five former Wardens.

PELTING RAIN MELTING SNOW

Rain Instead of Snow Wipes Out Last Vestiges

A pelting rain, borne on a strong east wind, settled over the city and surrounding district last evening and continued to fall steadily down throughout the night. All traces of the recent heavy fall of snow has been so much in evidence late-ly, has been washed away under the present downfall, road crossings, and in some cases, streets and sidewalks, have been inundated and swollen streams continue to pour their torrents into the bay. The ice on the bay, which has once again assumed almost winter proportions, however, carries with it a heterogeneous collection of debris, which has choked the banks higher up.

While the ice which has been so prevalent, for the past month or so seems to be the combined effect of the unusual and out of all proportion the precipitation involved does not measure any more than has been occasioned by an equivalent amount in snow, if the month were a normal Winter month. If it were colder then the precipitation would come down in the form of snow, but with the present temperature, warmth is a suite in the rain fall now being experienced.

There is only in the summer time and all the members of their communities die in the autumn.

DROWNING IS UNDER PROBE

Preliminary Evidence is Taken at Inquest on John Shortts

After taking the testimony of two witnesses the preliminary of the inquest over the death of the late Jack Shortts, who was found face down in the shallow water of the Moira River, under the C.N.R. car bridge at the south end of the city Tuesday morning was adjourned from the offices of the Belleville Burial Company last evening until Tuesday evening, February 2nd, at 7.30 at which time it will be held in the police court. Coroner Dr. O. S. Cronk occupied the chair while the examination was conducted by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. Police Sergeant Harman assisted. Mr. Shortts was by coroner's constable.

Jack Smith, yard foreman for the Conger Coal Company, who was the first witness called stated that he had known the deceased nearly all his life as a steady worker, had no enemies as far as he knew and was very popular with the public. He was witnessed by that there were a number of men from the coal company's shed in the same place of employment was estimated between thirty-five and forty years, and his age at the time of his death was close on to sixty-five years.

Finding of Body

Witness was the second person to view the body; Mr. Art Dougherty having been first on the scene. He was called by the foreman of the jury and told him that was shortly after eight o'clock on Tuesday morning. He had been on the look out for Mr. Shortt because the son of the deceased had advised him of the fact that his father had failed to return home from work that evening, and it was thought that he had been visiting some one of his friends. At the time came around for work next morning and the man still did not appear, a closer watch, had been kept by Smith but it was not until Dougherty had told him that he had known anything about the death. The evening before that he had seen him at a neighbor's house near the river, and thought that was on home later. Further questioning elicited the information that Shortts was in the habit of going near as he could tell, in any manner after it had fallen off the bridge, and that the face was submerged in the shallow water when found. Indications strengthening the theory that the man did fall from the bridge between the land and iron work, was the fact that a piece of skin and flesh was observed on a part of an angle iron on the bridge. He had no boots on when found but otherwise was dressed as usual.

Mr. Jack Bush, assistant to Joe Smith of the Belleville Burial Company, stated that when found the body was face down in the water and that the men from the fire department had lifted it out of the river from there, they were and then taken to the burial parlors. The face and head was quite bruised.

Coroner's jury was composed of: S. J. Wedden, J. W. Barlow, E. George, R. Wallace, R. D. Black, C. E. Reitheson, A. M. Bowden, Wm. H. Panier and W. J. Thompson.

Mayor's Permission Needed For Draws

Lindsay, Jan. 27—Mayor Alcorn, after accepting the public and reporters from committees meetings of Council, has sanctioned the purchase of a new printing machine for the Town Clerk's office, and to-day instructed Chief Police Lawler to stop the selling of tickets on the new year car raffle until permission has been granted by the Mayor. Acting on these instructions, Chief Lawler stopped the Sons of England Society selling tickets. Later, permission was granted, but in the meantime the prizes were removed from a store window and the details of the society notified that ex-cept for the sale of tickets on the street with appeals to buy. The Mayor stated that if the organization wishing to give prizes for draws, they must first obtain the law and the proceeds must go entirely to charity.

Paris, Jan. 27—Cotton clothes for every hour in the day was the spring's edict at today's Parisian openings.

Silks were pushed into the background and wools took a back seat as designers displayed suits, day and evening dresses and bathing suits of muslin, gingham, percale, in the new gunnysack weave, in all the prints, black to white.

Dinner dresses jolted the cotton chorus, with models of wire lingerie designed with short cap sleeves and black satine belts and other of spangled silks like that used for boudoir upholstery.

Today's suits and dresses displayed straight lines with pronounced pleats for walking. No frills and flounces and shoulder widened by puffs.

Sees Swing to Better Times Clearly Today

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 27.— Roger W. Babson, economist and statistician, who predicted the stock market break of 1929, says in a prepared statement:

"The depression is in retreat. The Babson chart which was the basis for my forecast of the market break in 1929, is now with equal positiveness indicating that we have seen the trough of the depression of 1930-32, and that the present year will show an irregular movement towards higher levels.

"The chart is now turning upwards for the first time in more than two years, except for the temporary rally of last Spring. For some years I, comm I do not expect to see the Babson chart below the depths reached last November.

"Of course, this does not mean any sharp rise back to normal conditions, but it does indicate the depression is in retreat. The long period of idle and fresh was destroyed on a part of an angle iron on the bridge. He had no boots on

Canada's navy was brought before the world in no uncertain style this week when two destroyers which have been cruising about the disturbed waters of the Communist disorders in the Central American republic of San Salvador.

Probably this San Salvadorean navy has not thought much of Canada's fleet but now the people will likely have a wholesome respect for the country which has a naval police which watches disorders among the unruly lesser states, who have a knack of getting into trouble again and again.

For once the dispensation of things put Canada's ships at the service of law and order and they did a good job. Another good deed can be checked up for the Canadian fleet.

CEMETERY CLEAN-UP

Clean-up of the country cemeteries many of which have long lain in disorder into which the throws everything when care is removed, is now obligatory upon the municipalities. Many burial grounds which had fallen into neglect in these parts have been redeemed to places of respect and beauty, and about them now the imagination or the memory may linger of the good men or builders who laid the true foundations of this present Canada.

Thought and respect for the dead who were just like us and women of a generation or two removed from this present and who breathed the same air and met the problems of life as we do, are the result of the new legislation in Ontario which names a chairman for the county commission while the county councils each name two members.

Pathetic have been some cemeteries which a generation or two were places of beauty but have been allowed to lapse into a condition of upset tombstones, weedy growth and disorder. Surely they owe it to the surroundings for the last rest of the grandfathers and grandmothers of the present generation.

What institutes and associate organizations have achieved much and have been winning the support of the people to the scheme of beautification and redemption of these God's acres.

OUT-OF-DATE SUGGESTION

A recent suggestion was made by a resident of a foreign country that turning over of a possession by one of the debtors of that country on the payment of war debt would be acceptable.

While this might be so to the speaker in question it is doubtful if it would be to the creditor nation. One thing is certain it would not be acceptable to the possession concerned to have it handed over to another nation as payment.

The idea seems something quite new, though it smacks very much of the old days when the conqueror ceded to the use the outskirt of the old Roman empire and marched its ruler and chief people in his triumphal possession.

Such payment would not agree with the modern principle, that of avoiding the splitting up of races and peoples.

There is not the slightest possibility of the suggestion being carried out unless there is a breach of modern principles to the days of the afore-mentioned conquerors.

COMMUNISM AT WORK

Those who have been reading the press of the past few days studying the outbreaks in prisons are beginning to realize that Communism is being exploited as most opportune for the spread of socialistic and communistic doctrines when the present organization of the world is not showing at its best.

That there is a spirit of anarchy at work among the bumptious seems to be clear, or they are showing the worst side of their nature.

Such threat of evil has to be met with the exercise of the best brains of the law-abiding public. Conditions outside the prisons in daily life are not all which they ought to be in these distressful times and any anarchistic tendency without is magnified many times in the spirit of the men within the prison walls. Somehow the sense of disorder which has flourished as in Russia finds lodging in many places and evil-disposed wrongdoing men are found giving themselves to wildest expressions. The cure they offer for the world's ills would be the ruin of the world as we would have been the Dartmoor prison insurrection to the people of the countryside and the moment if the insurrection had been a success. Ideas are just as dangerous as the criminals within prisons would be if they were allowed to communicate their thought as potent and blasting as the men in Dartmoor prison. How safe would the district have been with the criminals hag broken out? A reign of terror would have ensued.

The Dartmoor outbreak is the worst penal insurrection in British history yet the police and guards handled it as Englishmen might be expected to do with calmness and sense. Theirs is the way of reason and that of the convicts who revolted meant the opposite of everything for which law and order stand.

EAT MORE APPLES, eat more tomatoes, eat more potatoes, eat more this and that —all have had their place in the sun, but why not an Eat More Cheese Week? Brockville Recorder and Times has given voice to this suggestion which is real good and worthy of the endorsation and co-operation of all good Canadians. Cheese production is one of the leading and most important industries in Canada linking as it does city and country together and making a profitable partnership, production in the country and distribution in the city. Agriculture and the dairy industry is made much more pleasant and profitable by the revenue from cheese, particularly in Ontario where the cheese industry finds its greatest expression. Cheese is the perfect food, containing all the vitamins upon which the body depends for sustenance, but this is not recognized in Canada as it should be. Cheese education has been progressing slowly but surely until now many Canadians know the pleasure and nutritive for good OLD Canadian cheese, at least one year old. Among those who have preached the gospel of "eat more cheese" persistently with good results is Mr. John Elliott, of Belleville, who has succeeded in getting fine old Canadian cheese placed on the menus of many hotels and dining cars. An "Eat More Cheese Week" would greatly increase the demand for cheese among Canadians, and make more cheese eaters, for most anyone could develop an appetite for Canadian old cheese in a week, sufficient to eat all the old cheese in captivity, for as yet no great amount of Canadian cheese is put over the mature. Why is it that most of the Canadian cheese is exported? Because folks across the sea have learned to appreciate its excellence while Canadians, because of a local product pass it by. To be healthier, wealthier and wiser, eat Canadian cheese which has been maturing at least one year. Some folks like it at least two years old, but that is an acquired taste harder to attain, a higher price. Eat more cheese is the slogan. Give me some of that yonderful, full-flavored one-year-old cheese such as Mr. John Elliott gives to his particular friends every Christmas and in the words of the song "I'll not ask for anything more."

BELLEVILLE EXPORTS a lot of cheese and the sturdy ruddy faced cheese eaters of England provide ample proof that Belleville cheese is the best in the world, and a perfect strength building food. If Canadians would eat more cheese they would be stronger and healthier, besides achieving a balanced diet which would help them to achieve a balanced budget by eliminating some of the expensive frills of gastronomic present day madness and returning to the simpler but better life of our forefathers which made for health, wealth and happiness. HON. G. HENRY IN OTTAWA

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 27.—Premier George Henry of Ontario left shortly after noon Tuesday for Ottawa, where he will confer with Premier Bennett. It is expected Mr. Henry will discuss Hydro and unemployment, and possibly the appointment of a new lieutenant governor for Ontario.

Other Papers' Opinions

BUSINESS MAN ON POLITICS

The address of Mr. C. H. Carlisle as retiring president of the Toronto Board of Trade was so comprehensive and sensible a review of important current events that one might be justified in speculating on the benefits to be gained in government if a body of impartial business men were in power for a period.

As Ottawa, as explained, there are 241 members of the House of Commons and Senate legislating for a population of about 10,000,000. A similar situation of excess prevails in the provinces and municipalities. The evil is not limited to an overburden of salaries and sessional indemnities, or to the time wasted in useless speeches, a politician has to "consolidate his rashly" by filling as many jobs as he can and by rajing many nominees to himself in the way of public works and concessions. All is the political game. Political patronage rather than necessity", commented Mr. Carlisle has been responsible for the employment of one out of every eleven in the civil establishment. We can only hope from this sort of thing to oversee for efficiency in such services, and not far removed is the creation of tariffs for the sake of political favors.

The politician seeks growing popularity, the country pays the bill. Machinery of government, with more representatives, actuated by an honest desire for efficiency and economical government, would reduce the nation's annual bill by a large amount in the course of time.—Toronto Globe.

THE DEGREE OF TEMPTATION

A new religious doctrine has been promulgated in Berlin. It is to the effect that under certain conditions it is not a sin to steal. This pronouncing is based upon the principle that it is all a question of the degree of temptation to which the individual is subjected. Many will recall the case of Victor Hugo's Jean Valjean. The hero stole a loaf of bread to feed his sister and her starving wife and family. He was sent to the galleys and his life was made a misery until he escaped. On escaping from prison he stole silver candlesticks from a bishop. B. and took some of his silverware. He was arrested and taken to the bishop, in the presence of the law officers, exclaimed: "Why did you not take the rest? I gave them to you intended that you should have them."

Victor Hugo's powerful work of fiction was followed by many others which were enforced in France in his time. But though he regarded the theft justifiable, not so dear Valjean as excusable and unworthy. Now that he has the world over have justified theft as a moral act. The new theory of morals in Germany is that it is wrong to appropriate the property of others if the circumstances in which you are placed is that, given adequate temptation, the moral influence may be warped. If this line of logic were applied to each of the 241 parliamentarians at Ottawa, the authority of the Decalogue would be considerably weakened and perhaps, in time disappear altogether. It was Oscar Wilde who argued that the best way to overcome temptation was to yield to it.—Toronto Globe.

THAT CERTAIN SOMETHING

When the scientists get through with us, nothing "indefinable" will be left in the world. Their perseverance in the search for the causes and discoveries and revealed by infallible inference seems to slight every new register on the human senses. Like Alice in Wonderland, they keep on over the thorniest obstacles, nothing is too tiny, too tenuous, too vague or too elusive for their sterilized probes. They have the persistence of a bloodhound on a cat and the instruments of a surgeon, and, like the latter, are fond of exploratory operations. Just recently they are the scent of "personality." Before they are through we are going to know precisely what that fluttering, wayward word really means.

Several psychologists have in recent years produced works on the subject, which, while very satisfactory for the authors on paper, left in their understanding of the term. Some have made personality synonymous with character. Others confuse it with the quality of social adjustment, and there is another school that links it with mental emotional balance. There are enough definitions among scientific researchers. They have set out for the truth.—New York Times.

Today's Verse

HER LIGHT

The village street was dark at night,
That was the reason why
In a front window beamed a light,
To aid those who went by.

This house was where two high-wage men,
The years had left it still:
But nought could make that dame complain
This kindness to fulfil.

Though in the tasks of every day
This night as ever before,
Let up life's thoroughfare.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma made a lemmin morning pie yesterday, being one of the best things she does and this one being extra good, because as I suspect we was eating the last half of "it" for dessert and no pop, one also left on the plate, and I was looking at it while I hurry up my last piece, and my brother Jerry Benny you dont need to choke yourself with the crust, because Im going to take that last piece myself. Well I was only trying to enjoy it as much as I have this one and I've thought of a way of combining myself in a 2nd helping, I dont care what you say, she said.

And if your mother should change her mind by some stroke of luck, there wouldnt be any other priority rites over you, in fact be ready to consult your mothers wishes before you were born, pop said.

Meaning I should be considering, Heck, 2 against one, what chance I got.

Which just then I had a idear saying, O well Ill just think of my self as a egg, you see I have to have my self as a egg, you see I have to have some sense and I said, O well, that is the best I can do, I am not very exspert a half a water melon full of rice pudding and 4 candelopes, stuffed with ice cream.

O goodness im through, I cant even think, and then one of you ever such a boy, ma said, and pop said, I mean to say, I dont see how you can for a while too yes pop.

The result was that I got the other slice of pie, on account of it being more than I,awt to effect my appetite.

CONTINENTAL LIFE IN STRONG POSITION

Surplus Stands at Record High Figure—Increase of $1,000,000 in Year

Annual Report of the Continental Life Insurance Company presented by the President, C. H. Mead, at the Annual Meeting held today, January 27th, at the head office of the Company which is the Company's 22nd shows continued progress, including the high record: reserves stand at $6,635,116.00 and total assets at $7,538,903.00 also new high records for insurance in force covering 22,812 policies for $32,000,000.00.

An increase was recorded in net premium income of $224,000.00 for the year. Payments to policyholders totalled $814,563.02 of which $214,582.02 over 73% of which was paid to living policyholders.

Evidence of the Company's careful management is noted in its decreased mortality ratio which was the lowest in history of the Company, 49.5% and the lowest history return of 5.84% on its investments, that fluctuating monthly word realized.

Reserves are exceptionally well placed, 32% of the total investigates, 36% in bonds and Debentures, 22% in mortgages, loans, 6% in real estate, 4% in stocks, 1% cash and call.

In speaking of the investments, the President said: "Practically the whole of the money loaned on mortgages is on city property. The annual amount loaned on farm property on mortgages or otherwise during the last year and the year is $9,000 only being 1% of the total amount of the Company's assets. The payment of interest during the year has been very satisfactory, the amount overdue and uncollected at December 31st being comparatively small.

The Company's holdings of stocks is taken from the balance sheet at market values as of December 31st. The auditors certificate being taken of the Government's permission to use December 30th, 1931 values. Had the latter values been used in the Balance Sheet would show a further very satisfactory addition to the surplus.

Assets are very carefully placed, only two of the Company's blocks, that of Ontario and Quebec are written down in the Government Valuation of Securities.

The one thing about which political parties must not contend is a contentious question. — Nicholas Murray Butler.

LABOR UNIONS TAKING VOTE

May Take 10% Wage Cut to Restore Work to 700,000 Jobless

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 27.—Two unions had taken a stand and 11 voted today on the $765,000,000 pay slice five 2,000,000 United States Railway workers.

Executives of the 16, however, gave no inkling what course their synd had taken, saying it would not be revealed until after all the unions had voted and submitted the results to the rail committee of nine presidents.

Labor, willing to barter the proposed 10 per cent wage cut for a year for certain concessions that would stabilize and restore work to 700,000 jobless and 600,000 partly employed, renewed the final answer to the carriers to that programme yesterday.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 27.—High winds yesterday caused Gar Wood, veteran speedboat driver, to postpone indefinitely attempt to break the world's speedboat record of 119.22 miles an hour.

He called off the trial after learning a southeast wind of 14 miles an hour was blowing across the course and that there was no assurance from the weather bureau of a decrease in its velocity.

VARSITY LOSE TO NIAGARA FALLS 3 TO 2

Students Stage Grand Stampede in Final Match

WILD FINISH

TORONTO, Jan. 27.—Surviving a last-minute onslaught for victory, Niagara Falls emerged from the senior O.H.A. game at the Student Arena last night 3-2 victors over University of Toronto. For sustained speed, action and thrills the game of hockey compared with the best in the amateur ranks for a long time, and far in a crashing see-saw struggle. Voices were harsh from continued cheering, booing and yelling and few in the crowd spoke above a whisper when the game was over.

Niagara Falls raced to the front with three goals, one gained in the first period, another during the mid session and the third at the start of the last period. Then Varsity finally clicked after losing dozens of chances to score. Two tallies resulted in the Students' closing stampede, leaving the clubs, just a single score apart, even on the scoring standings at stake, and players just as excited as the fans in the last mad struggle.

Speed, a sprint slip from first to finish, Niagara making the most of it chances, Varsity missing twice as many, solid hunks of body-to-body defense, private feuds here, there and all over this is the picture of the one team weak then the other, and great saves by the goalers, were a few of the features of the game, but to make a great game of hockey, Niagara Falls and the finish around the goal some and that accounted for ninety per cent. of the interest in the play was even closer than the difference on the score sheet at the finish.

It was fast hockey, brilliant hockey with sudden flashes of speed. Varsity appeared on the path of victory with the last five-minute rampage, but the assault came too late and their deficit was too big. Last Friday night the Students tide the score with eight seconds left to play, and then downed Nationals in 80 minutes of overtime. Last night they tried to repeat, and although they failed they came mighty close.

SURPRISES IN FIRST MATCH

Bankers Defeat Hotel Men By Two to Zero

The opening game of the "blood and thunder" hockey league which was played between the Bankers and the hotelers at the Arena last night, brought forth many surprises.

The hotelmen ran in a couple of "ringers" to try and stop the "interest-drawing" boys but with no avail, as the "ringingers" were just a little too good for the hotel boys. Hank Penn, in the nets for the losers was a real out-standing player on the ice as he turned back the powerful attack alone but also could not stop them all and his team went down to defeat by the score of 2 to 0. Chuck Jerry was the "bad-man" for the hotelmen driving down the majority of the penalties handed out.

For the winners Bert Walsh was the star with Carbuld and Burry a close second. The bankers were a little too speedy for their rivals and left them stranded at the post on many different occasions. A return game will soon double be played in the near future.

The line-ups:

Bankers — goal Davies; defence Amey and Miles; centre Walsh; wings Scott and Carbuld; substitute, Hodgkinson — goal Penn; defence, Jeffery and Trualach; centre Baker, wings Scott and Jeffery, Rae. Referee T. Black. Referee (?).

By The Observer

By virtue of their 3 to 2 victory over the Queen's Frontenacs on Monday night, the Queen's Redmen are now one full game ahead of the local Intermediates. The Belleville city cannot afford to lose a single game from now until the end of the schedule if they expect to emerge loop winners this season.

If the locals can win from Campbellford tonight and defeat the fast-coming K.C. team on Friday night they will have gained considerable ground. The locals are sitting in a very good position as they will take about seven game away from home, that being in Gananoque. All of the downing Easterners made here, we are of the opinion that the locals will find their heads full when they travel east next week. It is the other hand, they should have little trouble in winning from Gananoque if they put "in there" and play hockey together.

Tonight's game should be one of the toughest that the fans and the locals will have to perform in this year. The Campbellford players are in much better condition than they were in their recent battle when the locals defeated them in the Belleville Arena. Coach Holway saw his team a couple of times during the last night's practice and the boys are ready to do or die in their remaining games.

Word was received from Trenton this morning stating that they had taken the night's game. As the first and second games will be on a two and two number loop the locals have no need to worry about as they are assured of a "bye-off" game in their loop. Coach Thompson let up on the ice last night as he is going to let them coast along until the end of the week when he will start some heavy training in preparation for the play-offs. It is expected that the play-offs will start in the latter part of next week or the beginning of the week following.

Now that the Collegiate hockey team has entered the O.H.A. a league to play in Coach Les Childs will get his boys down to work in the near future. Although they have had a few practices to date Mr. Childs feels that they need considerable training before they can really show their worth. A number of the local juniors are members of the Collegiate and if Coach Childs can induce them to come out to practice he will be able to trot out a pretty smart team of "puck-chasers" this year.

The local "basketeers," under the direction of Coach Jack Adams are practising at the Albert College gymnasium and on the Collegiate gym floor in preparation for their coming game against the Queen's team on Friday night. Coach Morden's idea of taking the team on two floors is merely the fact that the local Y.M.C.A. floor is a lot smaller than the large Queen's floor and he wanted his players to get used to the large floor again. Coach Morden has a pretty speedy basketball team in the making and expects them to win the E.O.A.A.A.

History was made down in Kingston last Saturday when a sail-boat race was staged on the bay down there. This is also the earliest boat race ever staged in those parts and it came from the Limestone City to the effect that the water was exceedingly calm for this time of the year. Did you know that the three leading sport stars of the feminine sport world, and several runners-up have same name? Helen Hicks leads in golf; Helen Wills Moody leads in tennis, while Helen Madison—with an extra "s"—stands in the swimming world.

People talk of a so-called depression. The University of California football team played before a total of 404,393 spectators in 1931. These figures show an increase of 23,760 over the previous year. The depression not as bad as they're painted.

INTERMEDIATE MATCH HERE

Campbellford Will Play Locals at Belleville Arena

Headed by "Buster" Whitton and "Ken" Davis, the Campbellford hockey team invade the Belleville Arena to battle the Belleville Intermediates tonight. Campbellford will win this battle or be eliminated from the "Big Four" race, as no team can possibly hope to win the local intermediate group with more than three losses during the season.

Manager Jay Ferris is bringing his full line-up to Belleville for the tray and will also include Bush and Hendy, his two stalwart juniors, in the line-up. Campbellford's starting lineup will, no doubt, be Goal Martin, defence, Cowell, MacArthur and Fred Ingram; the forwards will be picked from Davis, Whitton, Mackay, Fraser, Bush, Hendy and Harrison. All of these boys are proven hockey players and are coming to town for the express purpose of "trimming" the locals.

Coach Bonnar Holway put his proteges through an hour's practice last night in preparation for tonight's battle. All players were on deck and the rail-birds saw some fast-moving hockey being tried out by the local forwards. Tim Dunn, of St. Paul, was one of the rink while "Rube" Bullard guarded the home nets for the duration of the ice. Herbie Morris and Alex Weir were teaming together while Coach Holway was calling changes on the fly. Points of the game at the other and of the rink. Bert Graham, Doug and Campbell formed one forward line, while Jack Cassidy, Ken Davis and Bob Bull on the other front line. Ken St. Denis and Ted Bullard were also present.

The team looks like a perfect natural as the last time these two teams met it was a case of "nip and tuck" and the locals were fortunate to pull out with a 4 to 3 victory. The Campbellford boys are of the opinion that they can turn the tables on the locals tonight and the love will be lost when Referee Jackson starts the boys on their way tonight.

BOLSTERS OLYMPIC TEAM

Norman Malloy, veteran right winger of Winnipeg Hockey Ranks, has been added to the Olympic team. The fact that Malloy is not connected with the Dominion champion Winnipeg team Malloy from breaking into prominence as a goal scorer this season. He has two goals to his credit whitewash given the champions by Saskiwa was sipper-fully sufficient reason for his selection to the Olympic team. Malloy, a veteran, has plenty hockey has speed, and hockey brains, and will look to advantage and thought he is never near the top of the goal scoring list few real goals to his credit this season, including via his wing. Malloy spent the past season playing for the Regina Capitals and helped them to win the senior title of Saskatchewan. He returned to the fray in the spring, and played best three all games, helping the Winnipeg Saskiwa in the fall.

Easter Rally to Bring Five Clubs to This City

At the regular semi-weekly meeting of the Quinte M.C.C. the question of affiliation with the Auto-Cycle Union, the British governing body of motor cycling sport, arose. Mr. W. Rundell, to whom had been delegated the task of investigating this phase of club life, explained very thoroughly and convincingly the advantages of this step. After some discussion, it was decided that the club should complete this detail as soon as possible.

Accordingly, Mr. Rundell and the secretary, Mr. Frizzell, went to Toronto, where they were met and given a royal welcome by officers and members of the British Empire Motor Club, the Auto Cycle Union representatives for the Province of Ontario.

As an outcome of this step, the annual Easter Rally of the A. C. U. Clubs in Eastern Canada will be held in Belleville. It is expected that at least five clubs will be well represented and a sporting reliability trial will be held to celebrate the occasion.

EXPERTS CALL 1932 A MODEL

Mild Winter Beneficial. Not Unhealthy, Weathermen Say

Toronto, Jan. 27—"All this rain," during January doesn't involve the precipitation of any more actual moisture on the earth than would fall in the form of snow in a normal winter," said Mr. Finnis, so it seems, that's all.

And as for the unbearable value of various kinds of weather, the belief that mildness is detrimental to healthy because it is unreasonable to group the way of red noses, fevers and rabbits' feet. Professional weather-testers do not regard these factors as any good reason for interest in his effect upon the human race. Consequently, they are precisely the same set of climatic conditions that they were those of yore.

At the meteorological bureau they have records and statistics to show that rain is ever so much more beneficial than snow to numerous business activities and needs. They think it would be a good thing if January, 1932, could be established as the model for a permanent future Ontario climate.

"Yes, sir, the climate's changing. Here we have January like April and in California they had their first snowstorm the other day. We certainly don't have the winters we had when I was a kid. It's getting warmer every year."

That's another popular chant which the experts with the instruments and apparatus throw into the hokum category. The last January in Ontario which compares with this one was in 1916—just about the year when a lot of these oldtimers were kids, walking six miles to school through breast-high snow—and as the present month is not quite ended there is some doubt whether it will actually reach the high mean temperature of January, 1916.

MRS. CARMAN PASSES AT 90

Widow of Church Head Founded Women's Missionary Society

Toronto, Jan. 27.—The death occurred last night at her residence, 43 Murray St., of Mrs. Mary Jane Shaw Carman, widow of Rev. Dr. Albert Carman, former General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, in her 90th year.

Mrs. Carman for more than half a century was an outstanding figure in Methodist Church circles. She was the founder of the Women's Missionary Society and was the first president of the general board for many years. In addition she was prominent in the W.C.T.U. movement and frequently spoke in Toronto and throughout the province on missionary and temperance questions. During her years of residence in Toronto she took keen interest in the affairs of Victoria College, which she helped to establish.

Daughter of the late Captain James Shaw, of Irish ancestry, she was born in Newmarket, the family coming to Canada when she was four years of age. She was married at Belleville in July, 1860, and came to Toronto with her husband and family in 1866, making her home here ever since. Dr. Carman died in 1917. Mrs. Carman's last survivor of the Stat family. A daughter, Miss Alice Carman, resided at home, two sons, Albert R. Carman, K.C., Toronto, Frank A. Carman, of Ottawa and two grandchildren survive.

CAL ENDAR REVISION URGED BY SPEAKER

Professor Kingston Sees Further Step Toward Change This Year

Toronto, Jan. 27 — The total eclipse of the sun on August 31 which will be seen in the north west will cross a portion of Quebec, could be broadcast clearly by radiotelephone from a place above the clouds. Professor R. R. Kingston told the Royal Canadian Institute last night.

Professor Kingston of London, past president of the society for two years, was presiding at the dinner marking the end of the year in the field of astronomy.

He believed further progress toward the adoption of a new calendar, a plan which he favors, would be made this year, though he felt that the public would not be ready for the change until after 1933. Increasing complexity of industrial life and the need for simplicity must bring about a new calendar, he declared. The present calendar was not far off. A 13-month calendar had been suggested, but from the standpoints of the business man who had to balance his books monthly, that was hardly feasible. Besides, it was essential every year should be exactly divided into halves and quarters.

Professor Kingston felt that either the calendar proposed by the World Calendar Association or the Pacioli calendar would be acceptable. In the former January, April, July and October would begin on Sunday. The year would be divided into quarters so that each quarter was the same. There would be 26 working days in each month and 31-day months would have a fifth Sunday. At the end of each year there would be a day without a name, probably a national holiday, and during leap year a second day of the sort would be included.

LOTS OF ICE UP IN NORTH

Eighteen Inches of Ice in North County Lakes

Here's a tip for local ice men who have been worrying for the past few days about the shortage of that frigid stuff they've generally had all packed away before this: Load your tools onto the truck and drive just 97 miles back north to Madoc or Stirling. While we've been dodging rain drops here they've been shovelling snow off the walks back there, and the cutting ice on the lake, which for the past few weeks has been an average depth of eighteen inches.

R. G. Revell reeve of Limerick township, which takes in the territory surrounding the lake, was in town yesterday to attend the county council session and informed this paper of the disparity in temperatures between this district and Limerick County.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Hands Up! Inspect Them Carefully

With velvet evening gowns having a gala time of it, at theatres and dances and on other memorable nocturnal occasions, hands have got to be above par. Hands resting against the velvet have so strong a background that every defect shows up. Haven't you noticed that? Velvet especially advertises the low-down on feminine hands. There's a merciless side to consider. If little paws are naughty they show up pitifully in sagacity, like the family pearls on the dowager in the Jewel cast-off.

Except for fathering freckles, hands behave prettily in warm weather. Perspiration keeps them from drying out. In cold weather they have their real troubles. With a hot, dry atmosphere and cold winds rampaging around outside, hands must be confused with the daily change of seasons. That's what makes them take on the mutmeg grater surface and that hard drying after washing. Or using soap that isn't as kind as it might be to the human hide.

Hand lotions are cheap. They are effective. If a woman will pay two or three dollars for a cream with which she hopes to wipe from her facial map all of time's traitorous, why can't she separate herself from half a dollar for the good of her hands? Maybe she does and doesn't remember to ply the application. Or maybe she doesn't have lap to a healing liquid three times a day with gratitude.

Beauty shops, out for business, supplement manicures with a three-minute hand massage. Sometimes them out of cold water.

BE THRIFTY IN BUYING

Some Hints in Choosing and Laundering Curtains

Everyone wants a generous window layout in one's home, and nothing is more conducive to the charm of a room and the happiness of its inmates than floods of healthful sunshine, but have you ever thought of the hard thought does to curtains?

You may have wondered why the lower part of your curtains become weaker in fibre and why the strands part and ultimately cause holes. Well, you will be loath to blame the sunlight, which brings so much cheer into our daily lives, but, investigation has it, is due to direct exposure that the lower part of curtains becomes weaker so much sooner than the upper portion. Sunlight and air make the fibres tender, so that a solution that will not only obviate unsightliness, but will also retard the life of these cherished window coverings.

If you have your curtains ready-made, it is a good idea to make sure that these are long enough to allow, on the other words, see that the hems at top and bottom are both of proper and convenient depth. The next time you see a curtain material with a pattern that you like and desire to make your own curtains, leave wide hems so that, after laundering, the section may be alternated in hanging.

A fine window curtain is very desirable for the sake of appearances and comfort, but remember that the fineness of texture beyond a certain degree is not obtainable by the same than the home-lover buys a curtains from which she wishes to obtain service as well as good appearance, she should endeavour to find a happy medium, a proper balance between these two properties.

Experience, such as was alluded to above, has shown that when curtains are drawn at midnight with moisture, especially when the windows coverings are left open to the glass or blinds, a greater tendency to mildew appears. This is due to the ultra-violet fraction or sunlight although the ultra-violet light is necessary for health, it is destructive to cotton and hence protected portions of the curtain, such as hems, suffer.

So it is that breaks occur in the curtain material. Careful attention to the laundering process, while the upper portions are seldom affected, is a necessity in the case of the housewife that curtains should be kept in good shape for the next laundering process. They should be washed in soft water and a pure neutral soap should be used. If hard water is used, borax soap is not quite apt to be deposited in the fabric, and a harsh coarse feel of which is disagreeable to the touch is imparted.

Starch contains, while presenting a much finer appearance than cotton or woollen goods, is not advisable, but the disparity in cost and service is often offset by this application and material and individual problem for every home-lover, depending upon the extent of her family budget. The use of soft water and a good neutral soap is also advocated in the laundering of silk window curtains. It should be remembered, however, that silk loses approximately 20 per cent. of its tensile strength when wet, and should be handled with care during laundering. This loss is usually regained, however, when the fabric is finally dried.

Beggar Gets 6 Fresh Eggs From Old Woman in City

City Lodge Attendant Tells Transient What He Thinks of Him

SOLICITING ALMS

Many of the transients, who are given free shelter and food by the City are deserving and are honest in their endeavours to obtain employment and they appreciate the good treatment which they receive at the Lodge the city has fitted up for their accommodation.

Others there are, however, who are here basing on whom the word appreciation and its meaning are unknown.

This latter class fortunately is in the minority and when they show their "true colors" to the attendants at the Lodge, they are properly treated with.

There is no necessity for these men, who seek shelter here, to beg from door to door. The food at the Lodge is good and nourishing and they have as much as they care to eat. It may happen that assistance will be asked for, out of ignorance that a place of relief is conducted in the city, and that is required, in such instances is for the applicant or person to this place.

Cases have been reported of transients being fed at the Lodge and later soliciting aid from householders. It is said these men want but money. They will tell the householder that they cannot eat the food supplied at the Lodge and will follow this up with a request for a dime or two with which to buy a little decent food.

One such ungrateful fellow returned to the Lodge one evening recently and in the bag he had a fresh eggs and some other food, which he was able to obtain through by an 'old woman'. "I did not want to hurt her feelings", he said, 'so took the stuff she handed me.'

The attendant at the lodge told this man in the kind of a language men which he considered him to be, but as it was late he could not throw him out but the next morning he 'saw him on his way' at an early hour.

Fun and Fish

By Thornton W. Burgess

Old Man Coyote shivered at the splash

Who fails to have some fun each day.
In shortened life is bound to pay.
—Old Mother Nature.

Like the oil that keeps an engine running smoothly and keeps it from wearing out before it should, fun, which is only another name for play, prolongs life when rightly used each day. No one knows this better than Little Joe Otter. That is why he builds a slippery slide down a snow-covered, steep bank in winter, and one of mud in summer, for sliding splash into the water is his favorite sport. So even in hard times when he has to travel far to get enough fish to eat, he never fails to get in a little fun every day.

"I keep me feeling fine and good natured," says Little Joe, "and it would do the same for you, Grandpa if they would try it."

Old Man Coyote, who had changed his mind about attacking Little Joe, watched from his hiding place on a clump of young hemlocks at the top of the slippery slide. Suddenly Little Joe appeared, running at full speed close to his sides, gave a mighty kick, and disappeared over the edge of the high bank. Then Old Man Coyote heard a splash and knew that Little Joe had struck water. The sound of that splash made him long for a chance to get where the water was.

He crept out of his hiding place and trotted over to where he could see that slippery slide and when Little Joe came swimming down to where the bank was low and climbing out, had made his way back to the top of the slippery slide he was sitting there as if he had just arrived.

"I just happened along this way and heard a splash and wondered if you were sliding today," said Old Man Coyote, pretending that his being there was quite accidental.

"Of course. I am sliding," replied Little Joe promptly, "With my slide in such perfect condition I would no more think of letting a day pass without using it than I would of going without my dinner. Fun is just as important as food. Don't you think so?"

"Some of us sometimes have to do without either," replied Old Man Coyote, a little bitterly, "I don't have much fun these days and I'm sure of that."

"You do look a bit thin," admitted Little Joe, who was himself sleek and plump. "I tell you what try my slide a few times, and then we will go fishing."

Old Man Coyote tried his best to grin. "I would like to," said he, "but my coat isn't waterproof like yours, and that water gives me the shivers whenever I look at it. Besides, I am no more fit home in the water than you would be in a tree. As for fishing, if you will show me any place where fish can be scooped out of the water without my getting wet, I will be glad to go with you. I haven't had a meal for a few days. Say, I could do just that."

Little Joe kicked off and flat on his stomach, with his arms back close to his sides and his hindlegs straight out behind him, shot down the slide into the water. Old Man Coyote grinned at the splash. In a moment Little Joe's head appeared. His eyes sparkled. "It is great fun" said he. "Come on and try it."

Old Man Coyote shook his head. "It may be fun "for you but it wouldn't be for me," he said.

Little Joe was soon back on the bank and away he went down again. He did this half a dozen times. The last time he called to Old Man Coyote. "Follow me down below here and I will show you how to catch fish," said he.

Old Man Coyote followed along the bank. Soon they came to a pool at the foot of a fall. It was only partly frozen over and the water looked black and cold. Little Joe slipped in and disappeared. A moment or two later he climbed out with a fine fat trout in his mouth. As a draught down one's neck.

HINTS FOR THE HOSTESS

With the party season in full swing, everyone is thinking of entertaining, and many young housewives are worrying themselves unnecessarily, fearing that something may go wrong with their party.

Don't worry. The less you worry, the more certain you can be that your party will be a success. Nothing sets guests at ease more quickly than a hostess who is at ease herself.

Don't over-entertain your guests. By that I mean, don't make sure everyone joining in everything. There are sure to be some people who would rather sit quietly and talk to one another.

Better than Cakes

Don't play the radio or the gramophone all the time. People can hear that any time. Much better if they have come to see you and to talk and enjoy one another's company. Continual music means that one is sitting silent listening, or else screaming over the sound. Neither condition is ideal if your party is to "go."

Don't invite so many people that your room be overcrowded and everyone uncomfortable. Two parties are better than this.

Little dishes filled in neat, make sure that everything is properly prepared beforehand. Last-minute rushes or overlong pauses are both to be avoided.

At an evening party at which you are serving light supper refreshments, see that you have plenty of sandwiches and plain or savoury cakes. Nothing is more trying than fancy cakes.

Don't overload your table with too many dishes at once. It is better to have something in reserve and to bring it out when plates begin to empty.

Be Natural!

Keep your room well ventilated, but not draughty. Not so many that you must think out some method for your individual needs.

Don't let your room become stuffy, but if it gets "chilled" with tobacco smoke, open a window for a few moments, but don't forget to shut it again. Nothing is more unpleasant

LONDON ENJOYS GREAT DISPLAY OF FRENCH ART

Art Lovers Throng to Burlington House to See Collection

FROM FRANCE

Louvre Has Sent About 100 Pieces of Art

London, (Canadian Press) Art lovers not only of Great Britain but many other countries are thronging to Burlington House this week to see the magnificent collection of French art, containing pictures seldom or not ever before out from the museums and private collectors in Great Britain, on the continent and in America. It is the greatest of all the series of "national" art exhibitions instituted a few years ago by the Royal Academy. The present exhibition surpasses them.

The Louvre has sent about 100 works of art, including tapestries; a contribution never envisaged before. Examples from the 14th century are numerous and every century since is well represented. The 19th century, however, occupies about a third of the entire exhibition. M. Paul Jahoel, conservator of the Louvre, says that the 19th century was one of the chief glories of French art, because in all other countries except England there was something of a decay in art at that time.

The exhibition runs until March 4. Those who cannot expect to see in the Burlington House exhibition is an art which ranges from mid-fourteenth and heaven, essentially human, usually realistic, and on occasion delicately sensual; with the art critic of The Times, "the wedding of the Gothic fourteenth century with the Renaissance." JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

She nodded and turned away to hide the tears of mortification that were welling to her eyes. Why couldn't he see that she did not want to leave Valle Verde at all? Why had he not urged her to stay? Of course, he had urged her, but then he had not been persistent in it. If he had persisted she would have reconsidered. No, he did not love her. Absolutely not! Outwardly she was fiery; inwardly he was cold; she felt very miserable as she rode him good-night with a little wave in her throat.

Abercrombie noted the circles under her eyes and rejoiced exceedingly thereat. "When they worry about a fellow that they can't sleep, a deaf man may not infrequently catch the faint sound of distant wedding-bells," he reflected.

They chatted in desultory fashion during the meal; then Roberta went to fetch her hat and coat. She was waiting for him at patio gate when he emerged from the ranch office, a carbine in his hands, a belt of ammunition around his waist and two pistols tied to his legs. Jose brought the enclosed car up and when they climbed in, Roberta noticed that beside Julio sat Ken Hobart, who was armed similarly to his chief and carried a spare carbine.

An hour later they pulled up at the Astrin ranchhouse. It was a humble-down affair set in the middle of a desolate field. Not much of heritage. Roberta thought, as she looked on the weary and unpicturesque walls. Ken Hobart got out, walked to the front door and banged on it loudly. A Chinaman, in a greasy apron, opened it.

"Where's Dingle?" the foreman demanded.

"He go ketchum sheep."

Hobart walked around the house and inspected the interior of an early dilapidated barn.

I imagine the Chinaman's telling the truth, Dingle's car is not in the barn," he reported.

They had one drive for nothing, then. Well, we'll go back to Valle Verde, put a couple of saddle-horses in a truck and run down to the range where the sheep are. We'll go as far as we can with the truck and ride it, then unload and ride up into the hills. Game for the four of you, Bobby?"

She nodded and they whirled across the dusty plain to Valle Verde. Here four horses were saddled and led up a ramp into a large motor truck, and, preceded by the car, they headed down the road toward Los Algodones.

From time to time Don Jaime's riders had reported on the approximate locations of the main body of sheep still on the open range and the direction in which they were moving. Consequently they were enabled to make a good guess as to where they would find them. Just short of the road presently and north of Algodones they came upon the foot-hills of Ken, you and Julio ride in a north easterly direction," Don Jaime ordered. "Manuel Antrin and I will ride in the general direction of that butte yonder to the southeast.—He one fifth the old landslide scarring its western front. Aurelio, you will remain here with the truck and the car. We will meet here not later than o'clock this afternoon, Senor."

Roberta mounted the hunter Don Jaime had given her. To her surprise she found a light carbine protruding from a holster swung under the broad leather on her stock saddle, and a belt of cartridges hung over the pommel.

They rode steadily into the southeast, gradually climbing the butte; when they reached its crest, Jaime halted in his horse. With his bin he swept the country for not in every direction.

"Do you see anything, Don Jaime?" asked Roberta.

"Nothing beyond those low stale-colored hills yonder!" Jaime pointed. Roberta adjusted the glasses and looked. The cloud in question was very faint, but —it was a cloud.

"Sheep moving——south." Don Jaime informed her laconically. "I have a hunch Mr. Dingle is headed for Mexico with the said sheep."

"You mean——he's stealing them?"

"I do. There's fair range below the Rio Grande—but sheep—and it isn't at all a difficult job for the Dingles of this world to get across the line without being detected. Money sometimes does it, more frequently guile."

They rode on, keeping to the backbone of the western fringe of Jaime hills. At noon they had ridden brought them to the crest of the last stale-colored hills. Below them a plain sloped gently into the bluish haze; faintly to them came the continuous bleating of sheep; a dirty gray blur indicated the flock—and it was moving southward, slowly, tortuously, as a worm moves. At its rear and on the flanks, little black dots, that were herders and sheep dogs, urged the weary animals along. Don Jaime counted the largest dots.

"Twenty herders," Roberta heard him remark. "Hum-m-m! It doesn't look as if it would be quite safe to give Bill Dingle his walking papers today. He is not in a mood to accept them." He eased his Mexican-shod bridle and, without even a look at the girl beside him, started back the way they had come.

"What are you going to do, Jimmy?" she asked anxiously, spurring up alongside of him.

"We're going back to the car, Bobby. I'm going to send Aurelio back to Valle Verde for reinforcements."

"Will there be a fight?"

"I think so, Bobby. Dingle has twenty herders. Six, with the dogs, should be ample to maneuver those sheep. So it looks as if he had prepared for trouble, and when one prepare for trouble, it's a pretty good sign they will not avoid it."

"I don't want a fight," the girl cried passionately. "You and some of your men may get hurt—killed!"

"Quite likely. I have no intention of making this anything but a slaughter."

Roberta commenced to sob. "Oh, Jimmy, I'm afraid——terribly! I have a presentiment you'll be killed!"

"Would that matter so very much to you?" His hand closed over her arm. "Look at me, Roberta. Would it matter so very much?"

She nodded an affirmative, unable to trust herself to speak.

His said something in Spanish. Roberta suspected it was an oath!

"Oh, Jimmy! Please—please, for my sake."

He pulled up his horse and glowered at her. "My dear girl," he cried sharply, "you're trying to make a quitter out of me. Would a man permits a woman to rob him of his strength he might as well get killed and have his shame over with. Is that understood?"

Roberta nodded miserably. What argument of hers could prevail above his logic? And yet, beneath her cold fear there burned a wild pride that he had made his decision so, and deep down in her rebellious, belligerent heart she knew that, come what might, she would not have it otherwise now.

Twenty-Man Engagement

Clustering where the ground permitted, Roberta and Don Jaime reached the truck and motor-car in thirty minutes. Throughout the journey (following her host's announcement of his inflexible purpose to fight) Dingle and his herders before sunset) no word had passed between the two. Don Jaime rode ahead, occasionally looking back to see that all was well with the girl; seemingly, he was looking for conflict, he would gladly have expressed his feelings in words. He could. At least, Roberta thus read his thoughts, and knew that she was as his first subsequent words proved.

"Bobby, this job of mine is man's work Aurelio is going back with the truck, so if you'll be good enough to take the car and drive it home for me I'll be your debtor."

"No," she answered sharply. "My horse and the car should remain here. I might be of assistance to you; some wounded men to the doctor in Los Algodones or some dead men to the morgue. When this issue is settled, I'll know what to do and I'll not have to be told."

The objection you raise is a logical one, Bobby. Have it your own way." He gave Aurelio his orders in Spanish and when the latter had departed with the truck, Roberta seated down on the running board of the car and motioned to Roberta to dismount and sit beside him.

"I'll have to teach that below-the-Border gang a lesson," he said caustically. "They seem to need it very much. I'm four men shy on a fifty break in my ruckuses with Diego and Dingle since Sunday. One of them was Julio's father —and Julio shall have his chance at a pirial this day. This matter is personal, Bobby, and I'm going to get every mother's son of those sheep or I'll have to follow them to Mexico City."

You are going to walk here until Aurelio returns with more men and horses? How many men have you sent for?"

"Twenty, Caramba, the riding boss will pick the best. That will be five trucks with four horses and the rider on each truck. Don't talk to me now, Roberta, I have to formulate a battle plan."

"BEAUTIFYING THE NEIGHBORHOOD

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 23.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)—

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

As the chief's canoe rounded a snarp bend in the river, it came suddenly upon the thing he sought. Yelling like mad devils, the rage leaped to their feet and the two canoes had almost touched before the blacks realized the nature of the crew which manned the white man's dugout. Then would they have given all the beads and iron wire they possessed to be safely back in their village.

Scarcely had the two crafts come together than the frightful spes of Akut rose, growling and barking from the bottom of the canoe, and, with long hairy arms far outstretched, grasped the menacing spears from the hands of the black warriors. The savages were overcome with terror, but there was nothing to do but fight. Now came the other capots swarming about Tarzan's craft.

But when they saw the nature of the enemy, all but one turned and paddled swiftly up the river. As that one touched the ape-man's craft, Tarzan spoke his few long words to Sheeta and Akut. Before the attacking warriors could draw away, there sprang upon them with a blood-freezing scream a huge panther, and into the other end of their canoe clambered a great ape.

At one end the panther brought fearful havoc with his mighty claws, while Akut at the 'other buried his huge sharp fangs into the necks of those who came within his reach, hurling the terror-stricken blacks overboard as he made his way to the centre of the canoe. Kaviri, the chief, was so busily engaged with the demons that had entered his own craft that he could give the other no assistance.

Disorders Continue in Kashmir in Attempt to Oust Ruler

SRINAGAR, Kashmir, India, Jan. 26.—Disorders flared again in the State of Kashmir today as Mourn leaders from the Punja began another attempt to drive the Hindu Maharaja, Sir Hari Singh off the throne to establish a Moslem ruler in his place.

Fourteen villages in the Reasi district which have Hindu populations were reported on the march toward Rajouri for a concentrated attack. State troops were being rushed to this point over all possible routes. Great distances and lack of roads, however, have made it almost impossible for the Maharaja's to render prompt assistance to terrorized areas and it was said it might be necessary to appeal to Lord Willingdon, Governor of India, for British troops.

Kashmir, which is called the "Paradise on earth", is sprawled across the Himalayan mountains and valleys like a glittering Jeweled Mosaic. It is famous for its papier mache work, wood-carving and shawls which provide the wool for its famous Kashmir shawls.

TORONTO, Ont. Jan. 27.—A jury is not competent to decide whether the alleged nightly crying of children is a nuisance, Mr. Justice Middleton ruled today. His Lordship struck out the jury notice in the action by residents near the Kingston Infants' Home against the institution.

Hydro Rate Structure is Protected From Rate Increase

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28 (CP)—Charging critics of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission with an "ulterior motive", Hon. George H. Challies, Provincial Secretary for Ontario and the Hydro Commission when he addressed a joint session of the associations of Municipal Electric Utilities and the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association here today.

"There must be some ulterior motive behind this criticism of Hydro. Is it to make an attack on this democratic institution or is it merely a smoke screen to beclood one of the most credible incidents in the political history of this Dominion, the sensational scandal?" he asked.

Hydro Unashamed.

In answer to general criticism of Hydro, he declared millions of dollars, "a large portion of this from United States sources," had been spent in adverse propaganda to the public ownership of hydro. "I believe the Hydro Electric Power Commission is correct on both its policies unamiched and its relationships with the municipalities beyond reproach," he declared.

It was not necessary for the new government would wish to hamper Hydro power, he continued. "Rather than reduce another million in sun's fruitless investigation, I have good reason to believe amount to assist rural Ontario to the hydro power service on reasonable of added line."

Mr. Challies said ed his listeners that the Hydro rate structure would be protected from radical increases that might follow the development of the St. Lawrence River. The Conservative view was definitely opposed to the proposal of covering the cost of such development by power charges, he declared.

B. MUSSOLINI GIVES ADVICE

Tells Physicians to Fight Against Birth Control

Rome, Jan. 28 (AP)—Premier Benito Mussolini has proposed Brenfield immediately to Italian physicians—to fight against birth control, to discourage the desire of women for "excessive thinness" and to encourage better mental and physical life.

The charge to the physicians was given in an address delivered by Il Duce to the Italian Medical Congress on November 25, but made public until today.

The premier said the birthrate was diminishing even in Italy, where 24 more births occurred in 1930 than in the previous year. "A word is often better than medicine," he said, in counseling the doctors to fight anti-Fascism and economic depression in their bedside talks with patients.

He told the physicians to go into the eight thousand towns in Italy and teach the people the value of sun and movement and to encourage open air sports. Motorcycle, the automobile, gymnastics and sports, not only for the physical but for their spiritual benefit.

RAIL ISSUES AGAIN LOSE

New York Discouraged Over Lack of Seasonal Recovery

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 28.—The stock market sank gradually and apathetically today, with the pulse of trading very dull.

With some two-thirds of the mid-January rally lost, and traders thus scourged over the further dragging out of the railway wage controversy and the faintness of signs of seasonal recovery in business, The market presented a rather dismal appearance. Absence of an important volume of selling, however, was the redeeming feature.

Rails led the decline with such issues as Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and New Haven off 2 or more, and 1 point loses numerous. In the Industrial category U. S. Steel lost more than a point, and Bethelehem, with directors meeting after the close to consider the dividend, sagged a point to a new low at 16. Standard of N.J., and General Electric sagged fractionally to new lows. American Telephone lost more than 2, and General Motors, Westinghouse Sears and others lost 1 point.

Financial quarters took some comfort in the Washington news that the Democratic members of the ways and means committee had agreed that the forthcoming tax bill would not be revised but that it be called to stimulate the stock market.

News that the reconstruction Finance Corporation had taken over the functions of the National Credit Corp. was in railway with expectations in several quarters, and banking executives expressed encouragement over unofficial reports from Washington that the Reconstruction Corp. would pursue a liberal policy in extending credit.

POSSE RETURNS TO AKLAVIK WHEN SEARCH FOR MAD TRAPPER FAILS

Edmonton, Alta., Jan. 28 (CP)—Through the bleak Arctic country of the Mackenzie River district, studded Arctic northwest, Albert Johnson is desired by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who always get their man, and have sworn to capture the sullen-faced, sharp-shooting trapper of Rat River.

A Mounted posse returned yesterday to Aklavik, 100 miles inside the Arctic circle, weary from mushing the 80 miles back to operate the police post from Johnson's fortress-cabin, and reported grimly that the crafty "mad hermit" had disappeared.

It was the third police squad to visit the lone trapper's dug-out shack beside the Rat River post last December 31 and the first that was not greeted by a hail of bullets. Johnson severely wounded Constable W. King when the latter tried to question him with the only gun he possessed, according to fellows of officials will be dealt with at the fourth sitting to be made.

CHINA ACCEPTS JAPAN'S DEMAND

Situation at Shanghai Will Be Relieved Immediately

London, Jan. 2.—Official British circles believe that China's acceptance of the Japanese demands at Shanghai should relieve the situation there immediately.

The government is still considering proposals for sending a British ship to Shanghai by the United States and France, but it was said this morning that no further announcements would be made about the Anglo-American negotiations until a final decision is reached here and has been communicated by Secretary of State Henry L. British officials consider the situation at Shanghai much improved. It maintains there have been exaggerated reports of the seriousness of the fighting. In one authoritative quarter it was said that an Anglo-American boycott of Japan is too absurd to be considered.

RIOTS OCCUR DURING PARLEY

Nationalists Killed and New Ordinances Passed

Bombay, India, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Round Table Conference committees carrying on the work begun in London met at New Delhi today and probably had their first daily meetings for two weeks or more.

While they proceeded to plan Nationalists were killed, at Allahabad when police dispersed a threatened mob after the arrest of several Nationalist pickets.

Sir Hari Singh Gour, Maharajah of Kashmir, could not attend the conference committee meetings because the Moslems in his state are restless.

To curb the disturbances of the past several days the Viceroy issued ordinances throughout Kashmir empowering the local authorities to disperse prison meetings and fines in the disturbed areas.

Troops are being held up to points where Moslems have burned and looted Hindu settlements.

The Bombay government has enacted a new press law providing for the arrest of Indian merchants, who abused their places of business in protest against the emergency laws. The new ordinance already has been applied in Surat and Cawnpore.

The government has moved to check the activities of young Hindu nationalists by resorting to the old-fashioned practice of whipping. Charged with picketing a bank, one boy was sentenced to be lashed today.

LIGHTNING NOW MADE HARMLESS

New Protector Devised Which Acts as Shock Absorber

London, Jan. 28.—Something new in lightning protection, a method of "stretching" a thunderbolt was reported to the United States Institute of Electrical Engineers today.

By this method a man-made lightning stroke of 1,000,000 volts, said to be bigger than anything likely to come from a real thunder cloud has been developed, and it is said that it passed harmlessly through a 100,000 volt transformer.

The smoothing consists in reducing the size of some of the big waves of electrical energy which make up the lightning stroke.

Engineers call these waves "surges," and by reducing or distributing the waves more uniformly, so that instead of having one excessively high wave that smashed everything in its path, there is a series of more moderate waves.

Crafts Strike Obstructions on Bed of English Channel

Portland, England, Jan. 28. — Seaplanes flying over the English Channel off Portland today discovered a large patch of oil on the water which pilots believed might indicate the presence of the sunken submarine M-2.

After circling the patch of oil several times one pilot was able to see that it was consisting according to the surface from below. In the centre of the patch was something which looked like a fender but could not immediately be identified.

The patch covered an area of four or five square miles and was located about three miles south of Portland Bill, some distance from where the British ships have been searching.

Meanwhile, for the first time since the search began, a diver was able to reach the bottom of the channel at a depth of 120 feet and all objects was being investigated. He has not, however, been able to locate the obstruction to a sweep which was dragged over the bottom when the object was located. Four huge cylinders suitable for lifting a sunken submarine to the surface were ordered rushed from Portland to the spot where the oil patch was discovered first by the destroyer Beduin.

Obstruction is Swept

The Saros had dropped anchor near the spot where an obstruction to the sweep had been encountered when a large quantity of oil began to come up from below. It was believed that if the M-2 was beneath that spot the oil might have been deliberately released in order to show its position.

The watch of 18 fishmen deep at that spot. Diving operations were begun immediately but the first man was unable to reach the bottom. He was hauled up and a second man prepared to descend.

Another obstruction was found by the destroyer Thrasher this morning at a spot about two miles from Shambles Shoal. A wire dredging drag was brought to the surface it was bent and mangled in parts. These developments renewed hope that some of the submarine's crew might be alive and could be rescued. Earlier reports had suppressed the belief it would be possible for the crew to keep alive as long as four days under favorable circumstances. It was believed that the divers and other men who have packed themselves into one compartment.

Scene of Operations

The location of the new operations was not far from where the 1,000 ton Canadian-built steel schooner Crown of Denmark, notwithstanding manoeuvres on Thursday, the day before the disaster, after exercises.

The lifting cylinders, known to navy men as "camels," can be sunk alongside a ship and then hauled by filling them with water and the object can then be removed to them. The water is then pumped out by compressed air. The result is that the cylinders rise to the surface, bringing their catch with them.

Howard Seymour, Bell Telephone, Belleville, as he rode his bicycle out of the Semmens driveway at Bay St., Kingston Rd., Tuesday afternoon Gerrard McTaggart, 15, of St. Quentin street, suffered head and face injuries and was removed in an unconscious condition to Trenton Memorial Hospital by Mr. Seymour. The boy was between 30 and feet, police stated, and the bicycle was thrown under the front fenderpiece of the car, smashing the glass.

Constables Howard Crump and McDaniels of Seaborne police, did not detain the driver. McTaggart's condition is fair.

Fortunately Mr. and Mrs. Seymour escaped injury. They returned to Belleville Wednesday.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles go quickly and don't come back, if you remove the cause. Bad blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct these conditions. Thousands have recovered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 980 cases, the name of HEM-ROID. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store gives one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

On this whole earth of ours there are but few souls that can withstand the dominion of the soul that has suffered itself to become beautiful.—Masterdinck.

STATEMENT IS CHALLENGED

St. Catharines, Ont., Jan. 28 —Sir Henry Thornton, president and general manager of the National system, challenged "the statement that the Canadian National Railways is in any sense responsible for the position of its privately owned competitor."

Sir Henry referred to remarks made recently at Toronto by J. T. Hackett, M.P.

Sir Henry, spoke of a group of underconsolidated railways competing with the C.N.R. and charged with the Royal Commission on Transportation he said, was that it should have been appointed forty years ago instead of last year. He added, however, that he believed the commission will suggest useful things to be done and perhaps a remedy."

Police Court

Answering a call from the C.N.R. station Constable Izzard arrived at the station and found Mrs. Izzard and Joffre Perault early Monday morning. Constable Izzard then charged the prisoner to C.N.R. Officer Proctor and the young man was arraigned before Magistrate Ponton this morning on a charge of vagrancy. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three days in the common gaol by the magistrate in the court.

Perault admitted breaking into a box car which was the property of the C.N.R. at Scarboro junction, and stealing numerous articles including a suit of clothes, which he said he would be taken to Scarboro this afternoon, where he is expected to answer theft.

Two other young men are alleged to have been with Perault at the time of the robbery but they were not apprehended. Perault was then arrested through Belleville.

A number of Trentonites faced a second charge of intoxication laid by the Provincial Police. Each of them pleaded guilty and was fined $50.00 and costs or in default one month at hard labor in the common gaol by His Worship.

DEATH!

Death is an onward flight,
So, upward and onward go;
Determined to trust the might,
And will of the Lord we grow.

Death is a heavenly flight,
Far from the earth beneath;
Its seat and home of eternal light,
Which God Himself shall bequeath.

Death is the last great flight,
Of those who trust in Him;
Whose rising becomes more bright,
When earthly ties grow dim.

Securing of Counsel is Discussed by Members

County Council Session Devoted to Long Discussion

VIEWS OF MEMBERS

With the reading before Hastings' County Council on Wednesday afternoon, of a letter received by the county clerk from the law firm of Messrs. Payne, Porter and Arnott in which reference was made to the position of counsel for the county council, especially in so far as it pertained to the law action and injunction pending of Whitton versus the County of Hastings, in regard to a residence built on county property by the county treasurer, Mr. J. W. Haggerty, after it was stated, having been given permission by the old council, Mr. George Arnott, reeve of Frankford village, immediately jumped to his feet with a question to the point as which he asked that no move be taken to appoint any solicitor for the county, especially in this matter; claiming that it was no "right" that belonged to the county council but merely a law action between Mr. Haggerty and Mr. Whitton, who was seeking the injunction.

Mr. Arnott came out with the declaration that Mr. Haggerty had never been authorized to build the house on the grounds, and that he must have known the inevitable result of doing so. "I can't understand why council should jump into this law suit, when it apparently has no business doing so. Let Mr. Haggerty finish what he started," Mr. Arnott declared, and continued. "We all we know this thing may drag on indefinitely, and it will probably entail a loss of hundreds of dollars before we are through with it. I submit the motion that we should keep entirely out of it."

Mr. Malley of Deseronto, remarked:—"Personally I do not understand this whole thing, and I think there are a lot more like me. If the old council had made an understanding with Mr. Haggerty then I think that we should certainly stick with him now. As far as I can see the house he built is an asset to the community, and it seems to be value well spent. I certainly think that this thing should be gone into very carefully and very thoroughly and not dropped by any motion the last speaker (Mr. Arnott) is trying to put across."

Mr. F. R. Mallory of Sidney, said:—"I agree with the last speaker. I also think a fuller discussion should be given this thing and I can see no sense in dropping it. For the benefit of the new members a clearer understanding of the whole thing should be given them."

Mr. Arnott said:—"I can't see the house as an asset like some of you. The house was built by the treasurer, for the treasurer, and what benefit will any of you get out of it? I think it is the perfect right of any ratepayer in this county to object when money is being spent in a manner that does not seem to merit the expenditure—and Mr. Whitton did a good deed when he took the trouble to put an injunction on this council forbidding them to pay over their money until this case is heard in court—like it should be. If the thing were put to vote to the taxpayers of the county, then I have no hesitation in saying that a seventy-five per cent. vote would be polled against it. I am certainly not in favor of getting mixed up in the thing in any way, Let Mr. Haggerty finish what he started. I have no sympathy with him. I haven't as much sympathy as I got when I wanted anything I couldn't have."

Mr. W. N. Ciney, of Wellston:—"Gentlemen, I was not in favor of the house; I was not in the least enthusiastic, and I voted against it when it came up, but the whole matter to me seems to resolve itself into the fact that the real issue is being overlooked. The question before the house is a question of employing legal service for the benefit of this council. We should go very carefully and warily if there is a case against the county, as some of you claim there is, then it is high time to retain a law firm to protect ourselves."

Warden R. M. Mitchell: reeve of Thurlow said:—"Well, gentlemen, I don't know much about law or about this injunction that is being put on the county or the treasurer. We are without a solicitor of any kind—and that letter asks, that a solicitor be appointed. I never had a law case in my life, and I know nothing about such, but it looks to me that if this Mr. Whitton intends to press this case, then we will certainly have to do something."

Mr. A. L. Burke, reeve of Sidney:—"What will happen if we don't have a solicitor? Nothing! But we spend a lot of money if we do go to court. My opinion is that when the case is called to court that Mr. Haggerty will be the one who is up against it, not us. This council didn't do anything wrong so why should we worry about it?"

Mr. C. W. Malley asked:—"How did these fellows take it on themselves to get into this thing at the start anyhow?"

Mr. Arthur Burke: "I'm a new man, and I just heard you say a few moments ago, Your Honor, Mr. Warden, that you didn't know anything about the injunction. You were in the council last year so why don't you know something about it? Any man, who has been here for the number of years, that you have certainly should know something about it."

The Warden:—"You have altogether the wrong idea. I said that I didn't know much about law."

Mr. Arthur Burke: "In order to clear all this wrangling I think we'd better have the minutes of the meeting that was held, when the treasurer was granted permission to build, read to the assembly."

County Clerk Nugent said:—"I don't exactly believe we have them in that manner just apparently want them."

Here ensued considerable delay while the books and papers were searched to find the required minutes. After an interval the past year's records were brought to light and further search revealed part of the meeting. The only record read was the following: "That the county council confer with Mr. Haggerty, in the building of the house for which permission had been asked. It is understood, that he is to supply and finance the building."

Mr. Judson Gunter, Reeve of Bancroft: —"Well, that looks to me as if Mr. Haggerty had very good authority to build the house. This whole argument looks to me like a tempest in a tea pot anyhow."

Mr. F. R. Mallory, Deputy Reeve of Sidney:—"The county didn't build the house so why should the council fight? The whole thing lies between Mr. Haggerty and the ratepayer, who put the injunction on."

Mr. Gunter:—"I can't for the life of me see why one ratepayer should be able to put the whole council up like this."

Mr. W. Stiles, Deputy Reeve of Rawdon:—"This injunction is on the council, not on Mr. Haggerty. What are going to do about it?"

Warden Mitchell:—"The article that has been read to you plainly authorizes the Treasurer to build on the property, so why should he be the one to get all the blame? The seal was authorized."

Mr. Geo. Arnott:—"The ratepayer had a perfect right to put an injunction on this thing and thus put a check on the spending of the money which belongs to the residents of the county. If there is any waste there it will be shown up."

Warden:—"It is unfortunate that the firm should have mentioned, that one particular case in the letter when applying for or tendering their legal services for the coming year for the council. It has raised a discussion that none of us have been ready for and it has served no good purpose. We do need a solicitor, however, and the wisdom of it will in all probability be shown later on when numerous technicalities begin to crop up. Then the choice will be shown as a wise one."

Mr. Walker Whytock, Reeve of Madoc Village:—"To end this thing I'd like to put a motion that the whole matter be laid over until some other time, when we can get legal opinion on the thing. Also I will incorporate the suggestion, that a solicitor be employed as soon as the committee can be formed to deal with it."

Mr. Henry Larkin, Reeve of Tyendinaga:—"I'll be happy to second that motion, Your Honor."

Motion carried without further comment.

The closing remarks of the Warden on the subject were:—"I have been in the old council as one of them; the old council have never tried to do anything out of the way or behind their backs and now we start out with a new one with the same ideas in mind. We want to get things right while we're at it. We're not authorities on the law and it behooves us to get legal advice whenever we think we need it. I think it is a very good idea to retain a solicitor for this council and I am glad, that the motion had been made. It will now be up to the committee."

The next order of business was the reading of applications for positions of road superintendent and corn borer inspector.

DOES NOT WISH TO BE INVOLVED

Prem. Henry Refuses to Comment on Maguire's Address

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28—"I do not wish to become involved in any discussion on Hydro matters," declared Premier George S. Henry of Ontario, referring to the speech last night of C. A. Maguire, Hydro Commissioner.

"There has been entirely too much talk about the Hydro already. That is what we are suffering from now, and I have no desire to ascertain, nor am I interested in, the motive behind the opposition attacks on the Hydro Commission."

Mr. Henry stated he had an idea regarding the identity of the "American and Canadian interests" which Dr. Shillington, of Ottawa, represented some years ago, but did not care to disclose his idea.

THE STORY OF MOSES

What a treasury of historical and religious lore lies in the early record in the Bible! It is furnishing incentive to research and inspiration to the finding buried history of individuals and nations.

The other day the story of Moses in the rushes and his discovery by the Princess of Egypt was brought to the mind of the public as announcement was made of the discovery of the tombs of the Kings of Jericho by Prof. John Garstang, who found that Hatsau was in all probability the name of the princess.

Further finds have shown that large quantities of pottery and Egyptian scarabs were found in the tombs definitely fixing the date of the Exodus in the chronology of the Old Testament. In the fifteenth century B.C., the kings of Jericho bore Syrian names and were vassals of Egypt. They even wore sigents of the Pharoah under whose government they were.

Sir Flinders Marshall, under whose name the expedition of which Prof. Garstang, set out and carried on investigations reports:

"One tomb was dated as of the joint reign of Hatsau and Thotmes II, and this is of especial interest in confirming the modern theory that the exodus must have taken place after the death of Thotmes III.

"Hatasu was the most masterful Princess of Egyptian history, and during the reign of Thotmes II, which lasted thirteen years, she ruled the whole country. It is extremely probable it was she who discovered the baby Moses among the bulrushes, and the dates coincide. Under the protection of Hatasu Moses became an important official at court and a favorite of the Princess.

"After the accession of Thotmes III Hatsau continued to exert wide authority in Egypt and incurred the bitter hatred of the new King. On her death in the fourteenth year of his reign he seized all her possessions and her favorite, including Moses, were compelled to flee the country. Thotmes III reigned about fifty-three years, and it is recorded in the Bible that Moses spent forty years in exile. Not until after the death of the King did Moses return to Egypt, and then the exodus took place."

OPTIMISM JUSTIFIED

Never did new motor cars look so attractive as they do this winter as new lines have been worked into the bodies and new thoughts and inventions have been brought into the modern vehicle of transportation.

Motorcar makers are not afraid of the future and see no way ahead though there may yet be a haze due to the clouds of depression or unsettlement which have rested upon the world. Now the motorcar producers like any other body of men, the farmers for instance, stand by their business or calling for they know that they cannot afford to do nothing towards rehabilitation of the world. The end will justify them and when recovery is in certain as depression, only recovery is longer and more spread out than depressions are.

The present day world looks at the new models and new things. Old models are wearing out and there will have to be a lot of replacement in cars as in clothing and a thousand other articles. The motorcar manufacturer is on the side which wins. So are the farmer and the business man who stick to their guns and are not frightened by slumps.

FAITH IN PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Ontario and the rest of Canada gave a wholesome demonstration this week when in 24 hours the Ontario loan of $25,000,000 was over-subscribed to the extent of about forty million dollars.

Somewhere is the money which was once here and has always been here. Here was a good opportunity of a high rate of interest combined with the best security.

People may talk of high expenditures and attack the policies of a government but when such faith in the province is indicated by those who possess the wealth, the small and the larger purchasers of these bonds, the signs are good. To them depression has provided opportunities which may never be repeated.

A GREAT CAREER

Building up a fortune of millions on what was sold for a nickel is the achievement of S. S. Kresge, Detroit, Jr., who died at Phoenix, Arizona, on Monday. He was a believer in modern advertising and he reaped a reward of at least $70,000,000 of business in the year 1925. He put in place of the old spruce or parafin, chicle and used standard packages. He made a general custom out of which had been classed a bad habit, the chewing of gum.

Wrigley once ran away from home like some other boys. He sold papers in New York City and slept at night on the unsold portion. But he soon returned to his father's factory and became a soap peddler. His climb in business was rapid.

He had wide interests—baseball. For he owned several clubs and he was interested in smelling and mining on the island of Catalina which he purchased.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF and the blue ruin prophets of today had their counterparts one hundred years ago. Read the following extract taken from Macaulay's Essays, written in 1830—100 years ago.

"The Tide is Coming In"

"The present moment is one of great distress. But how small will that distress appear when we think over the history of the last forty years: a war, compared with which all others sink into insignificance; taxation, such as the most heavily taxed people of former times could not have conceived: a debt larger than all the public debts that ever existed in the world added together; the food of the people studiously rendered dear; the currency imprudently debased, and then suddenly restored. Yet is the country poorer than in 1790? We firmly believe that in spite of all the misgovernment of her rulers, she has been almost constantly becoming richer and richer. Now and then there has been a stopping now and then a short retrogression; but as to the general tendency there can be no doubt. A single breaker may recede; but the tide is evidently coming in.

"If we were to prophesy that in the year 1930 a population of fifty millions, better fed, and better lodged than the English of our time, will cover these islands—that machines constructed on principles unknown to our age will be in every house—that our debt vast as it seems to us will appear trifling to our great-grandchildren, many would think us insane. We prophesy nothing; but this we say: If any person had told the Parliament which met after the crash of 1720 that in 1830 the wealth of England would surpass their wildest dreams—that instead of making a journey from London to York in twenty-four hours, that men would be in the habit of sailing without wind, and would be beginning to ride without horses, our ancestors would have given as much credit to the prediction as they gave to 'Gulliver's Travels'.

"We cannot absolutely prove that there are in error who tell us that society has reached a turning point, that we have seen our best days. But so said all who came before us, and with just as much apparent reason.

Stages running from London to York in twenty-four hours, men sailing without wind, and other wonders of 1830, were beyond the wildest dreams of the people of 1720 who considered that the world was well old and might as well shut up shop. But Macaulay takes a bold step when he ventures to prophesy in 1830 that 1930 will show even greater wonders, with a population of fifty million for the British Isles, "better fed, clad and lodged, that machines constructed on principles yet undiscovered (1830) will be in every home, that our national debt, vast as it may seem to us, will appear trifling to our great-grandchildren, many people would think us insane."

National debts, the billions, commonplace today would have scared our ancestors into apoplectic fits. And the end is not yet. The world will continue to build higher and better national debts, and a higher and grander scale of living for all who care to scale the peaks of frivolity and emotional insanity generated by the germs of unlimited money. There will be wars and rumors of wars and signs and wonders in the air, on the earth and under the earth—with the end not yet. Other generations of stock brokers will reap the golden harvest sown by those who do not believe in the law of gravitation—that whatever goes up must surely come down, and come down on a good deal faster than it went up. Oh, yes, history repeats itself, and then some.

FEAR MOTIVE IN EVERY LIFE SAYS DOCTOR

Varies in Different Lives and May Not Even Be Noticed

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.)
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

No person living is without fear. This fear may not be realized; it may not even be conscious. On the other hand it may be so prominent in the mind that it dominates one's every thought and action. But in any event, fear we all have to grapple or lose out.

The reason for this is, first of all, because we have been, in a sense, in the measures, brought up on fear. Children we were organized and threatened with punishment; and as grown older fear still dominated us, only it was a social fear—fear of offending standards, social, moral, religious, etc.

Secondly, we all have inherited a fear sense from our remote ancestors. Primitive man was afraid. He feared the elements, wild beasts and other savages. He was afraid of hunger and thirst. When the thunder roared and the lightning flashed, he hid away in his cave.

And then, of course, we all inherently are afraid of death. It is mysterious to us. We try not to think about it, because we don't care. Yet in the end most of us turn to the fear of death and lose a continued life after death.

It is probably because of this such an instinctive reaction in all human beings, as well as animals, that we have evolved a fear of crime and of punishment. In other words, fear is such a terrible experience that society has used it to punish those who are against its accepted modes of conduct.

We try therefore to instill criminals with fear of what we will do to them if they transgress. We try, in short to frighten them out of their evil ways.

Recent experiments in psychology have shown conclusively that all this is wrong. Children, for instance respond to rewards and praise much more readily than to punishment. In experiments, carried out in a practical way in reformatories and prisons, yield results of the same kind.

Fear is, however, one of those emotions of which a very little goes a great way. A small degree of fear is probably useful. Every body knows it acts as a restraint or balanced effect to over-confidence or much ego—an expression of the primitive within us that must be kept in check if society is to prosper at all.

Nevertheless, most persons harbor an excess of fear, and so fail to find timidity present in individuals who are otherwise capable, strong of body and robust of mind. An overdose of fear gives them inferiority complexes and holds them back.

Neurotic states also exist where fear, so to speak, has run riot The symptoms known as "fear neuroses" is one of these. Such people dare not go in small rooms, elevator, closed car or subway. They feel the walls are closing in on them. Absurd though this may be, it is under such conditions they are fearful of their very lives.

Other exaggerated fear states, the opposite of which we scarcely can be mentioned, namely, "agoraphobia" or the fear of open paces; "acrophobia", or the fear of being in a height; "misophonia", or the fear of dirt and infection, etc.

The world is too full of fear. That's one of our greatest problems. At present, in this time of depression, most of us are even afraid to enjoy ourselves and be happy.

Yet fear is only a state of mind. Try always to feel as much as you can.

Poet's Corner

MOON SET

All light must vanish like this yellow disk
Shadowy hill;
So shall the sudden winds of April whisk
The golden petals from the daffodil,
Even a evening hides the amber rim.
So in its moment must a comet swim
And planets disappear, one after other,
For so, inexorably, the world is made.

Then if this little light of love must flame,
Quietly, strangely, in life's hurried hour,
To share a fate with every light the same,
And this be truth unswerved by any power—
Such rapture shall be deemed, with yonder moon,
Splendid for vanishing so soon.

APPLES

The agricultural economics branch at Ottawa has been investigating the preferences of consumers in large cities for various varieties of apples, and finds the Boyd and McIntosh easily the leaders in Toronto and Montreal. The Boyd, for all its reputation at home and abroad, averaged only 13 per cent. as first choice among retail buyers, the Delicious three per cent., and the McIntosh, whose varieties achieved two per cent., the significance of these preferences should be emphasized, the report points out, since there is a disposition in some sections to encourage growers exclusively on the popular varieties of the moment when setting out new orchards.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

BACK TO THE LAND

With farmers generally complaining of the difficulty in finding markets or adequate prices for their products, there may be some disposition to doubt the efficacy of back-to-the-land movements as a solution of present unemployment situation. It may be argued that to promote a "back to land" movement would be only to intensify the difficulties which the agriculturists are now experiencing.

Against this view is the fact that those who are placed on the land produce their own home produces and competitors with those who now draw their living from the farm. In the time which must elapse before they are ready to market their produce it is to be hoped that conditions generally will have reached a healthier state. In the meantime, those who might be placed on the land would be put in a position which, even in hard times, would provide them with the necessities of life.

But how such a plan is to be financed and directed is an easy problem. Each family would have to "stake" for the first months of the experiment, and it would be worse than useless to put on the land those who lack the capability of taking root in the soil.

The deplorable unemployment situation in the cities has been intensified by the thousands who have left the farm, during a period of great industrial and commercial activity, to seek employment or to pick up easy money in the big centres of population.—Toronto Telegram.

THE BETTER COURSE

More than fifty residents of Pelee Island decided that it is better to stay at home and deer in Canada's Northland than to be attacked themselves by famine and starvation in the accompanying picture. Rather than be deported, they have left for the sub-Arctic, where they intend to subsist by fishing and trapping, for the duration of the years, or the duration of the depression.

Their decision will help us to understand what their lives from home presumably till them—how appalling are the conditions today in Germany and Central Europe. No doubt the life of a hunter must be very fine and healthy, but one needs to have health of a particularly robust character to stand it for long. In bad years even an Eskimo will find that there is no growing fat on it. To choose a life which combines cold with starvation can endure, and then only if luck is not unusually against him, argues either a very high degree of fortitude or a singularly profound horror of the alternative which they must expect if they return home to their native countries.

The policy of deporting those who have been found undesirable and have been receiving direct relief has been sharply criticized, and not always with good reason. But this appears to be an instance where deportation means the deprived Canada of the kind of citizen which this country most needs. The North is calling Canada for development, and if men are found to answer that call as a result of the economic difficulties which we, in common with the rest of the world, are now endeavouring to overcome, we have that little to be thankful for. In helping themselves, the adventurers from the "as are helping Canada. May they meet with all the luck they deserve, and return in due course to take out their naturalization papers—Montreal Star.

Locals Lose Match to Campbellford by One Point

Rough Play Marks Game

Deciding Goal in Dispute Though Referee Said it Was Scored

DAVIS AND WHITTON

Campbellford Has Seemingly Struck its Stride

Whether Fred Ingram pushed into the net, with his hands, for the winning goal or not will never be known, but, referee Walter Jackson said no, he didn't, and the local intermediates lost last night's game to the Campbellford "puckers" by the score of 2 to 1, in one of the most hectic games seen in Belleville

There was good hockey, poor hockey and indifferent hockey played during the sixty minutes of play.

This boy Marrett, in the nets for Campbellford, was just too good for the local sharp-shooters last night. Too much credit cannot be meted out to Marrett on the exhibition which he displayed last evening. He did not out-shine Belleville's guardian of the twine, Lee Tice, as Tice literally saved his team-mates from a much worse beating by his sensational saves from the shots of the Campbellford team.

The game was filled with roughplay throughout and no less than 17 penalties were handed out by Referee Jackson and he could have dished as well had he seen as many if he had been at all strict.

Davis and Whitton Star

For the winners Ken Davis was the hero when he helped himself to two nice goals and played the best game of his career. The colorful "Buster" Whitton was also clear cut, and Davis when he was in on top of Tice time after time only to be beaten by the great work of Tice.

Fred Ingram also played excellent hockey for his team while their two lumbers, Jim and Bobby Ingram were at all out-classed by the locals. MacKay, Campbellford's regular right wing player, was the only threat-tune to fall and break his shoulder leadership although the Campbellford team were minus his services last night.

Locals Do Not Click

On the other hand failure to pass the puck by the locals at the opportune time, spelt defeat, as, they had plenty of chances to score had they demonstrated a little combination in the early stages of the game.

Tice and Welr Good

Lee Tice was again the stalwart of bulwarks of the locals with Alex Weir turning in one of his best games. The second line of Leadman, Hull and Morgan completely out-skated the opposition, while Gordie Scott and Campbell. Pete Morgan skated miles and miles in their combination but there fact he did not seem to be able to locate the twine when the opportunities arose. Bob Hull worked hard and should have had at least two goals to his credit, but shot the disc into Marrett's pads on both occasions. Johnnie Leadman starred as many a play but Marrett was also too good for "the mite". The forward line of Bobby Scott and Bill Campbell were completely at sea, as they did not display their usual combination plays which they are capable of. Morrison also displayed his ability as a poke-check artist, on different occasions, but, these three had the good luck to keep off the scoring column. The main reason being that they did not pass the puck when approaching the Campbellford defence, but, tried to carry their way through without success. Morrison not be done, drew a penalty every time he got means to tie the score. In the dying moments but with no avail. In a few words it might be said that the locals should have had a few more smaller town teams with a little more experience and all the boys in the Big Six loop are average intermediate teams and it will take sixty minutes of hockey to beat any of them.

The Play

When the game started play centered around the Campbellford nets before Whitton and Fred Ingram tested Tice. The Belleville goalie was called upon to make a difficult save to beat them. Play was rather slow this period as the locals seemed to be satisfied to let the other team come to them, with the result that individual rushes were in evidence. Only two penalties were handed out this period, three each to Campbellford and one to Morris of the locals. Just before the final gong sounded, Davis answered the first goal of the night when he belted the puck behind Tice from in front of face-off in front of the net. The period ended 1 to 0 for Campbellford.

The second period was the most hectic twenty minutes of hockey seen in Belleville this year. No less than ten penalties were imposed by the official in charge, six going to Belleville and four to the visitors.

One minute after the face-off period Alex Weir rushed and passed to Bob Hull and Hull evened the score when he banged goal number one for Belleville. The second line of Morgan, Leachman and Hull were all over the Campbellford team and had the play completely to themselves. Whitton and Davis combined a few times for the locals but Tice was invincible and simply rose to heights to save the day on seven occasions in the latter part of the period. Play was awfully rough throughout and Referee Jackson was kept busy throughout the whole twenty minutes. It might be added here that absolutely too much rough play and carrying sticks high was seen and the sooner the players realize this fact the sooner the patrons will see a better class of hockey.

Alex Weir rose to heights this frame and are easily the outstanding player on the ice. His rushes were very effective and in the dying moments he put the locals ahead when he rushed from out the corner to beat Marrett. Coach Holway used the fast skating Leachman, Morgan and Hull combination for the first half of the frame and they completely shackled the visiting combination. As the period ended the locals were bombarding Marrett in a will, but, the lad rose to heights to beat the locals for the winning goal. The period ended with Belleville leading 2 to 1.

The final, or disastrous period for the locals, opened with both teams playing hockey and nothing doing for after Tice made the most sensational save on a shot by Whitton when he went out to beat Harry Ingram and Ken Davis after they had passed the puck to their fellow team. This play was of note as Whitton had the puck on the end of the stick and was completely out-guessed the two Campbellford players who were on top of him. Tice saved the locals time after time but eventually he was beaten him for the winning counter. Exactly three minutes later the winning goal was scored by Fred Ingram. This was "the straw that broke the camel's back" as the whole local team surrounded Jackson and Marrett, the latter having carried the puck into the net with his hand. Jackson said no, and the game was on again. Ken Davis and Jackson rang the bell on account of the latter's failure to get a mere second before the goal was scored. Just as the play was on the scene the puck was in the net and the final scoring of the night and although, the locals used five minutes of the extra time they could not slip one past Marrett who was in brilliant form. Jackson and Ingram rang the bell on account of the latter's failure to get a mere second before the goal was scored. Just as the play was on the scene the puck was in the net and the final scoring of the night and although, the locals used five minutes of the extra time they could not slip one past Marrett who was in brilliant form. Jackson and Ingrams their way through to tie the score but were thwarted at every attempt and even when Campbellford were a man short in the last minute of play they were completely disorganized and could not get the puck through. Leachman with the locals taking the short end of a 2 to 1 score. Referee Jackson called another rung down the ladder, behind the league leading Querent team.

Campbellford have, seemingly, struck their stride and after coming to Kingston to beat the Queens intermediates on Friday night, they will journey to Belleville on Monday evening that the locals entertain R.M.C.

The line up—Belleville—goal Tice, defence Morris and Weir, centre Morgan, Leachman and Hull, forward ball, subs Shannon, Hill, Leachman and Morgan.

If one manager serves no right it seems to be that we associate the fact that "hockey players cannot eat the puck, even if they put salt on it."—quite some time ago. After a game is held a few times to "try over spill milk" but if the locals had have play-ed the combination that they are capable of they would have scored at least two goals in the opening period last night.

If some other team in the group does not take a fall out of Queen's pretty soon, it looks as though the Students can simply coast through to the league title. Of course the Queen's boys have three good games left against R.M.C., Belleville and Campbellford. If one other team can take a fall out of the Students then the locals will be sitting pretty once again.

On Friday night the locals are certain the fast-skating R.M.C. Cadets. Joe Irvin, their stellar defence man is the best bet for a rear of no mean ability and will be a great favorite with the local patrons of the game. Joe is one of the best hockey players we are in the Big Six loop, a gentleman and a sportsman. It is too bad that there are not more players the calibre of Irvin in the game. He is an asset to the pastime.

It is quite likely that the locals will meet the Cadets on Friday night and the result will be that a big crowd will witness one of the classy combination plays.

We are of the opinion that the locals have improved a great deal, also, it was a dear one.

We never like to question the rulings of an official but we are assured of the fact that all officials are human, the best of them they can. It is our humble opinion, however, that referee Jackson rang his bell before the winning goal was scored. We do not claim that the puck crossed or to whether or not Fred Ingram shoved the puck in the net or not as we could not see it, but we are willing to state that Jackson rang his bell during the play up in front of the Belleville net.

The Central Ontario Baseball League of old looks like a possibility once again. Secretary Newton Thompson received word from Campbellford last week to the effect that they had a strong community meeting there and the citizens are behind a senior team for 1932 in the game. H. Ochawa also are ready to form the league as are Peterboro. Port Hope is also willing to place a team in the field and after the meeting here on Monday we are certain that the North Hope league will come in. We wish to congratulate the members of the Campbellford executive on their great misconception of what the Big Six district is doing up these times of C.O.D.L. operation once again.

Now the scene turns to Belleville, just what is going to be done in the line of hockey for the next summer? For a number of years H. Jack Gouge and the local district "put more teams in the league," but, of late years the trick has been turned the local players have sub-made a single move to Belleville at the last approaching season. We do not like to "knock" but we do bet quite as often as we do, but, the fact remains that a new executive is needed locally. The days of the Belleville baseball circles is some young gentlemen who will "do" for us as we in Peterboro. Now is the time to act, not next May, when the season is right on the verge of opening.

Coach Ralph Marden reports that his Peterboro team is in very best of condition for their game with the Queen's boys on Monday night with the Queen's basketball team. The locals had three practices this week and are shaping up in excellent condition.

It was with regret that we read of the death of William Whitney, Jr. Bill, naturally he will be missed by the sporting fraternity of Belleville as he who first introduced the "mat" when one was not known. when he sponsored the Catalina bathing splash, in which Geo. Young established his world record fame. He was also owner of the Chicago Cubs and the Los Angeles baseball team.

STILL GOING STRONG

"The point is open to argument but we believe hockey players be born quit faster than any other team-athlete in sportdom. Basis for the belief is gleaned from the fact that there are many old players in the National League who have played 10 years or more." remarks Bob Goldie, sports editor of the Buffalo News.

They are John Ross Roach, goalie, New York Rangers, who broke in in 1931; Billy Burch, centre, the New Americans, who began his big league career in 1923; Joe Cooper (Buck) Boucher, Chicago Black Hawks, who started in 1917; Frank (King) Clancy, Toronto Leafs, who first played his first pro game for Ottawa in 1921; Aurel Joliat, Montreal Canadiens, who replaced Newsy Lalonde at left wing in 1922; Red Noble, Detroit Falcons, who started with Toronto Arenas in 1919, and Frederick Lionel Hitchman, Boston Bruins, who started with Ottawa in 1922-23.

"A player says Boucher, "who seems to be due for a long life in the game is Carl Voss, goalie of the Sioux. Rockne used to say of a football play that it had the 'legs of motion.' Voss has that on the ice. He's cool and sure, never flurried, never nervous, but always breezing in his nonchalant way. He doesn't seem to make a show of hustling but he's usually there at the right moment and usually comes across with the right play. He's another fine athlete in every sport. By instinct he's a natural conserve energy, how to accomplish much at a minimum of effort. By doing so they are keeping their own reserve in high and mighty ing strength on the team's attack and defense.

This goes pretty well for each of the seven N.H.L. stars above, with the exception of Newsy Lalonde. Clancy, but then King is a superstar, though of no great stature and the son of a superman, the orginal King Clancy. And he's Irish too.

R.M.C. CADETS LIKELY TEAM

Can Tie Locals By Winning Here Tomorrow Night

Smarting under their defeat at the hands of the Campbellford "Stonemen" last night the local intermediates play hosts to the R. M. C. "Cadets" tomorrow night. The locals cannot afford to lose another game this season, if they expect to get into the play-offs.

So headed by Joe Irwin, their stellar defenceman, the R. M. C. Cadets come to Belleville on Friday night for their regular league game. The "Cadets" have won three out two starts namely, Campbellford and Gananoque and seem to be on a winning streak.

Getting back to Irwin, we might say that he is about the best "find" of the year in the Big Six loop. "Joe" is the realization of a coach's dream as he can skate stick-handle and shoot. Teamed with Kennedy they give the Cadets one excellent defence and as they can both give and receive at a will it looks like a battle of brawn and brain on Friday night. Coach Oelley will no doubt start White or his play-off game, with Irwin and Kennedy doing defence work for Carl Peck and Blanchard will form the first line, while Carson, Connor, Palmer and Carling and Kelly will do the goal-stifling. As the locals must win this game to stay up within striking distance of the league leading Peterboro Shamrocks, the Cadets must win or pass out of the picture as the game looks like a perfect natural.

All the locals will be on hand to battle the Cadets in this all-important game. Coach Howay may shift his second line of attack around, but it is more than likely that the usual regular players will be on deck. This will guard the twine with Morris, Weir or Shannon, Hull and Leachman, Morgan and Hill doing defence work. St. Denis will no doubt be the fourth man.

Bobby Armstrong, of Toronto, has been appointed as referee for the tilt and as he always keeps the play clean and fast the fans will be assured of one real hockey game on Friday night.

The local intermediates do not have another game until February 5th when they go to Gananoque to battle the "Easterners" in their own back yard.

HAWKS WIN IN OVERTIME

Gottselig Returns to Line-up and Scores Both Goals

Toronto, Jan. 28.—It was the excellent performance of Johnny Gottselig, clever wingmand of the Black Hawks, who returned to the line-up after two weeks absence, that accounted for Chicago's 2-1 overtime triumph at the expense of the fast travelling Detroit Falcons in the only National Hockey League fixture on last night's program.

The speedy forward, who is rated as one of the best wingmen in the league, staged somewhat of a one man exhibition by belching both Chicago tallies and giving the Hawks a four point margin over Detroit in the race for second place in the American group.

BUNCH OF FUNMAKERS IN "MANHATTAN PARADE"

Manager Forhan of the Belle Theatre is pleased to announce tomorrow as the opening of "Manhattan Parade," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone production in Technicolor and featuring a double entanglement of funmakers, Smith and Dale, Joe Frisco, Winnie Lightner and Charles Butterworth.

The former team remembered for their grand and glorious clowning in the stage's Avon Comedy Four, have the best comedy story of the season in the dazzling all-color sequences of a play that is as dramatic as it is amusing, and with a gorgeous array of stage beauties and all the interesting wingers-on of the show world. The story is from a Samuel Shipman play—one of his many successes.

Other players of note in "Manhattan Parade" are Walter Dickie, Moore, Orrin Granstedt, B. Watson, Lois Alexis, Charlotte Middleton, Claire McDowell, Ethel Griffies, Polly Williams, Douglas Gerard, Mae Madison, Ruth Hall, Ned Pendleton, Bill Irving, William Humphries, Edward Van Sloan and Harold Wilbridge.

Blue Green, Radio's favorite Baritone, and a host of funmakers are also to be seen in the stage offerings entitled, "Dream House," a Funny Cartoon Co-Ed Comedy, Bell Sound News, and a new adventure of "The Variable Legion." Adventure play are announced for exhibition on the same program.

"Charlie Chan Carries On," a mystery drama based on one of Earl Derr Biggs, famous detective stories, its engagement at the Belle Tonight, is a most interesting picture, splendidly acted by a cast extraordinary. Warner Oland enacts the role of Charlie Chan, the oriental detective who solves an enigmatic crime in the city. Marion Nixon, James Kirkwood and Linda Watkins are in the cast.

"PLATINUM BLONDE" SCINTILLATING COMEDY

Frothy, effervescent, sparkling comedy, "Platinum Blonde," the current attraction at the Capitol theatre, with anything indicated and you have a pretty fair idea of how delicious is its entertainment quality—but only a pretty fair idea for you cannot begin to describe its delightful audacity and its infectious humor.

Loretta Young and. Jean Harlow share leading honors with Robert Williams, Loretta playing the role of Williams' pal on the newspaper. She has always been called of "Gallagher" and none of the boys have ever looked twice at her —just one glance and she looked like their pal and never like a lovely woman. And now how Stewart Smith, nicknamed Stew—an injustice, by the way—has held his liquor very well—came to fall for Anne Schuyler, heiress to millions and culture without price. Anne has a brother who has disgraced the Schuyler name by failing into the clutches of a gold-digging chorus girl and that's how Stew ever got near enough to Anne to be pointed by the monstrous question as to whether her eyes were blue or green.

RESILIENCY OF THE CHILD

BY CONSTANCE CAMERON

We can learn a great deal from children if we watch them thoughtfully for a while. And one of the big lessons reaches us in their resiliency, their aptitude for coming back to normal from a condition of fright, illness, anger or resentment.

You've heard people say that children get stok quickly and when they begin romancing, they get well with equal speed. It is true, and is explained, to my mind at least, by the fact that when an experience is done, it is DONE, not lingered over, not recited to friends, not pondered upon. When a child feels better he is only too glad to get back into circulation again, to see what has happened the last few or see what the new doll is wearing under her fluffy dress. LET your child forget. Don't retail the horrible operation when his tonsils came out, nor the degree of temperature he ran when he had measles. His very forgetting is his safety sa-paralus, his means of rebounding back to normal.

A child becomes frightened, if sensibly comforted with explanations he soon dries his eyes and goes about his play, humming within a few seconds after he's let the protecting warmth of Mother's arm. Let him forget it.

A clash of wills between mother and child is wiped out in the child's brain long before it is in that of the mother. Make your discipline, call it punishment if you like, conclusive and immediate then FORGET the episode as your child will IF you'll let him. But he can't rebound as long as you tell Daddy at the dinner table what a bad boy Sonny was, or how Sister spilled milk all over her pretty dress. FORGET it after you've done what you feel is wise and just at the moment.

The child fails down and skins his knee. Treat it calmly efficiently figure out some pleasant activity to immediately follow the dressing and let the child forget it. He will IF you don't insist upon reminding him of it.

Yes, we could all learn this lesson of resiliency, this lesson of rebounding to normal to good advantage. We harbor grudges, hang onto our memory of the operation, enjoy the attention a broken finger accords us, insist upon remembering what frightened us long after it has been proved a false alarm, and by doing these things we hold ourselves back from fully expressing happy, useful lives. Rebound and allow your children to rebound. The best things about good health is to forget. Go on to something good.

The Beauty Box

BY HELEN FOLLETT

When the grey day comes, illusions begin to go, dreams all shattered, the old check book balance looks sick, the reflection in the mirror a calamity, chaos and a sinking lifting spree. Buy a manicure and a new coiffure, the outlay is not much and the results are revitalizing. When a woman doesn't look well she can't feel well. Dolling up, getting out and breathing bucketfuls of fresh air are beautifying processes that shake up the circulatory system, chase away the blues light up dull eyes, freshen sagging cuticle. No woman can afford to slump. It is the prelude to going to seed.

Blood-red finger nails are as passe as nails filed to unnatural pointed claws. Buy the veneer that imparts the natural pink rosebud tint. Don't cover the white crescent at the nail base or the white line of the nail as was done when it on with the camel's hair brush. An added touch is to rub the nails in palm of the hand.

Part of the day's beauty schedule is the downing of six glasses of water. Fifteen minutes of complete relaxation in the middle of the afternoon will ward off that five-o'clock-tea fatigue and make the busy gals. Milk with meals furnishes calcium, iron, helps to preserve the teeth and which keeps finger nails from going dry and brittle.

Cosmetic chemists offer astringents, creams, lotions, balms, nails, soap, perfumes all scented with the same flower theme. They also put together beauty kits, each container in a small container, so that the toilet table will not be cluttered with large boxes and ungainly bottles. The one woman often has them all in a small space. Wunnerful!

The vinegar rinse is what the oily-headed girl needs. After three soapings and a rinsing in the usual cold rinsings, pour over the head a quart of water in which two heaping spoonfuls of cider vinegar have been added. Shampoo and comb out the hair strands; must be removed with a final rinsing of clear tepid water.

FRAUD ALLEGEDLY PRACTICED

Windsor, Jan. 28.—Charged with passing a worthless cheque for $163 on George McGaskin, a cripple, who operates a news stand in Windsor, Fred Eastman, 38 years old, of 231 Waukeza Avenue, Windsor, was remanded eight days by Magistrate D. M. Brodie in the Windsor Police Court. Bail of $5,000 was demanded.

ANCIENT HISTORY OF MOHAWK INDIANS, THEME OF MRS. H. BRANT'S ADDRESS IN TORONTO

Mrs. H. A. Brant of the Mohawk Reserve, Deseronto, who is a great great grand-daughter of the famous chief, Joseph Brant, is being much feted in Toronto where she is staying for a few days. Mrs. Brant has been known to Ontario Intelligencer readers as a contributor of poetry and charming stories of Indian lore. Regarding an address given in Toronto by Mrs. Brant, the Globe says:

Perhaps the "dark ages" were not always quite dark. At least, the Indians on this continent had their own manner of counting time.

We have long been told by the historians that the centuries of Indian occupation of this continent were uncounted, vague and indefinite. For example, the date of the formation of the Iroquois Confederacy, in what is now New York State, was uncertain. This confederacy has sometimes been described as the first League of Nations.

Historical interest attaches for Canadians because the Six Nations, as they later became known, moved over into Canada with the Loyalists after the American Revolution, and have ever since been loyal citizens.

One of the tribes was the Mohawks, and a visitor to Toronto this week was one of the women of this tribe, Mrs. H. A. Brant, of the Deseronto Reserve, a direct descendant of Joseph Brant, Chief of the Mohawks for years before his death in 1807. Mrs. Brant, whose maiden name was Teresa Brant, and whose father, a great-grandson of Joseph Brant, still lives on the Deseronto Reserve, married H. A. Brant, who is not related to the celebrated chief.

MRS. H. A. BRANT

During her visit to this part of Ontario, for the first time in her life, Mrs. Brant was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Nelson Campbell, 214 Glenaly Avenue, Forest Hill. To a party of friends she read a paper which traced the history of the Mohawks in some detail, with information derived from Indian tradition rather than printed books. One of her most interesting statements was that the Iroquois Confederacy was formed in 1390. Let that pass for a century or two before the discovery of America by Columbus, and long before clocks and calendars were known. Some other means of computing time were available on this continent, Mrs. Brant was asked to explain.

"Oh, this one down to us through tradition. Our tribe counted time by the number of moons, and the year 1390 was reached through counting back the number of moons."

A group of Canadian historians heard the news with surprise and delight. Selwyn F. Griffin, author of "Open Secrets," in which Iroquois lore is presented, said:

"I should say the date of the formation of the Confederacy was about 1450, but if Mrs. Brant says 1390 I would not contradict her. She should know more about it than we should, especially in view of the traditions in her tribe. It is unlikely that any one can settle this date, and she is at least to be correct as any one."

Mrs. Brant, who is deeply interested in Mohawk history, displays a keen poetic touch in her prose and verse. She is proud of the record of her race, and reflects the satisfaction felt by the Deseronto Mohawks over a great Mohawk of modern times, Dr. Oronhyatekha, who was married to Ellen Hill, a great-granddaughter of Joseph Brant.

Beatrice Lillie to Appear in Play Shaw Wrote for Her

New York, Jan. 28. — Beatrice Lillie, Toronto actress, familiar to Canadian audiences for eight years only as a madcap of musical comedy and vaudeville, will try her genius for satiric absurdity for the first time in a straight play here this Spring.

The Theatre Guild engaged her today for a role in George Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good," which probably will open in April.

"I got Shaw to write me a play," Miss Lillie explained. "And I'm going to ruin it."

She will play the part of Sweetie an adventuress who poses as a nurse and tries to steal the jewels of a wealthy patient.

Hope Williams, engaged by the Guild earlier in the week, will play the patient's part, bringing together the two actresses who have perfected individual fashions in comedy.

Miss Lillie said she was pleased with the manuscript and delighted with her role.

The wife of Sir Robert Peel, a descendant of the English statesman, Miss Lillie is a graduate of the London music hall stage where she began her career in 1914.

She went to school in Belleville and sang in an early movie theatre there.

73rd Birthday is Marked By Friends

Thomasburg, Jan. 28—On Friday evening, Mrs. Dorothy Elliott was tendered a very pleasant surprise at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Morgan when a few friends met to celebrate her 72nd birthday. After the guests had assembled a very delicious supper was served, also a nicely decorated birthday cake. During the evening she was presented with a new Hymnary. The remainder of the evening was spent in music and games. The evening was completely taken by surprise and thanked her friends for their kind remembrance. Her many friends wish her many happy returns of her birthday.

Her Parties Don't "Go".

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Mother is serious nice about letting me have parties but they are never a success. The boys just hang around the wall and the girls flock in dismal corners. We have very good eats, but apart from that the parties are a failure. What would you suggest?

Rita.

I wish you'd told be a little more about these parties you claim are so dull. Is there room in your house or apartment, roll the rugs back and start dancing. A few good dance records will turn the trick. If there isn't room to dance, start some games like "Questions and Answers." Another scheme is to get some impromptu favors. These can be made, or bought at the "5 and 10." Duplicate favors are drawn and the girl and man getting the same favor are partners, or a waltz may take together, and there is another drawing of favors, and another couple are partners. Cards or slips of paper will do instead of favors. This will be found to break up that melancholy fate of a parties boys hanging around the walls and girls flocking in corners. Almost all women's magazines have suggestions for parties, or you can get books with suggestions from the nearest public library.

Who Who Will Not When She May?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A few years ago I went with a boy of 21. I was nineteen. He used to call on me two or three times a week. He stopped. I soon become engaged to him. At that time I refused, saying I was both too young to be united down. He said he'd promise not to go out with anyone else if I'd do the same, I refused.

Later that he dropped calling on me and I didn't see him again for about six months and only twice after that. I haven't seen him now for two months. I have come to care deeply for him. We are both a year older and since he avoided me I realize how much I love him. I know that he goes out with other girls. I think he really cared, he'd come. I won't make the first move so I am waiting.

Anxious.

Don't be unreasonable. The young man has thought that what might have been expected, under the circumstances, is the simplest way of finding out if he still cares is to write you a little note and say you'd like to see him again. If he has become seriously interested in someone else he will probably make excuse for not calling. It does seem as if you're looking

FINANCIAL NEWS

LAKE SHORE VERY ACTIVE

Otherwise Toronto Stock Exchange Shows Little Change

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—Undisturbed by the lull in the Toronto Stock Exchanges markets dragged through another quiet day. There was no appreciable change to the price level; in fact the street commented more upon the lack of energy of the market than upon the course of prices.

Changes were mostly fractional and were individual. C.P.R. at 17 1-4 was off 1-4 for a loss of 1-2 on each lot; I-S. Ford and Lake Shore each gained up 1-4. Lake Shore was one of the most active issues on the board with a total of approximately 1,000 shares the property changing hands.

Brazilian was more actively traded than yesterday but showed no change at 5. Consumers' Gas at 180, Page-Hersey Tubes at 52, Steel of Canada at 30, Imperial Oil, International Petroleum were unchanged. Maple Leaf preferred at 12 showed a loss of 2 points compared with the previous sale.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—Improved demand for Lake Shore and a stronger tone among Kirkland Lake Gold marked today's forenoon session of the Standard Mining Exchange. Balance of the list remained quietly irregular, with the big percentage of stocks unchange at midday.

On buying believed to have originated from outside sources, Lake Shore moved above $20 for a 23-cent gain over last night's final, and Wright Hargreaves was up a few cents at $4.84. Hollinger, whose preliminary statement for 1931 showed dividends earned by a fairly comfortable margin, was down 10c to $5.40.

Among the cheaper Golds St. Anthony recovered another cent to 17, and Vipond reached the same price for a small gain. McLeod Roy or and Moffat Hall were fractionally higher. Sisco regained a couple to 97.

This Cat Goes for Ride, Jumps, Doesn't Come Back

Cat-Tale From Bayside Reads Like Fiction But Story is Guaranteed

HIGHWAY STORY

Joyriding is a term used in connection with automobiles and is a practice that has brought injury and death to many people. Police courts are also prone of increasing actions arising out of joyriding accidents and other results. Homes are saddened, lives blighted and spiritual secrets terminated by crimes of the intoxicating, thrill-inspiring game of joy riding. The undertakers think about the habit. It's contagious and catching aspect.

Up in Bayside present joyriders have been members of the human race, respected and loved by their families, out for a hilarious time. But as I have already pointed out the habit is contagious and as a result, it communicated itself one morning this week to a cat. The cat was partially fine, intelligent all-round pussy. Whatever got into that cat I don't know; but the other morning it held a conference with itself and the poisons of it was, it decided to go joyriding. Seeing a local truck standing at the door Mr. Cat slipped out and hopped up into the driver's seat. The man also hopped in, closed the door, started the car and pussy started out into the world to seek its fortune and its first joyride.

Now this deliveryman couldn't have acted more nicely because this respectable cat resented his attentions and went so far as to scratch his face.

It was during this unmanly exhibition that the cat made several attempts to get away from the driver. After the agony of his grief had subsided and seeing that he had made a mistake in his choice of companion, he saw to his utter astonishment that the cat had jumped out of the window and from the high way directly in front of a prominent farm residence. Then immediately saw a chance of widening her circle of friendship and made with her might for the house. But the sight of the house was so alive as she thought, the man drop the cat and the reception kitty got wasn't very good. The cat's purpose was the order to air her views to the man so she lathered his cat with tears in her eyes and the effect of that lecture must have been terrific, for the poor cat is stone dead.

Now, one lady blames the truckman for taking her cat, another lady is accusing him of dropping a cat and one lady is charging another lady with killing her cat. The case is bringing in counter charges against the scratching he got. The cat is dead because it was overjoying. Home training "ain't" what it used to be.

Holstein Club Urged to Improve Standard Future Appears Good

R. Parks Elected President of Club at Annual Meeting

OUTLOOK BETTER

Market, Says R. B. Faith, For Holsteins Remains Firm

Mr. R. Parks was yesterday elected President of the Belleville District Holstein Friesian Association at their annual meeting held in the Belleville Chamber of Commerce Building. One of the largest and most enthusiastic gatherings ever called the members when the meeting was called to order.

Following the transfer of membership and the enrolling of new members, the election of officers for the next item of business. Mr. A. E. Hector acting as president and Mr. R. Parks was unanimously chosen for the ensuing year. 1st Vice-President, E. O. Butler; 2nd Vice-President, Fred Hubbs; Secretary-Treasurer, P. F. Nelles. The directors are Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Dempsey.

1932 Sale

Upon assuming the chair the new president, Mr. R. Parks, thanked the members for the honor bestowed upon him and stated briefly that he would try his utmost to make the association a success in 1932. He was then moved and seconded that the association hold a Holstein sale this year. It was decided advisable to leave the rules the same as last year, one female must be shown with the first bull entered by an exhibitor and only females to be entered and shown with every additional bull entered.

It was noted that due to the scarcity of dairy cattle, a sale would be a success in Belleville at this period.

After considerable discussion it was decided to hold the sale in Belleville on the last Wednesday in March, which happens to be the 30th. 1932.

Sales Manager

Mr. Jas. Casey of Madoc was suggested as sales-manager and will supervise the sale from all angles. The question of a location for the sale arose and after considerable controversy it was left in the hands of Messrs. Hubbs and Reynolds. It was also deemed necessary to engage a local auctioneer for the sale but this matter was not definitely decided upon at the meeting. Mr. Bonter moved a motion to the affect that a blood-test would not be necessary by the exhibitors, this motion was passed.

Inspection of Cattle

It was decided, by the meeting to hold a "bull show" in connection with the sale if the government grant of $2,500 could be obtained. On the matter of inspection of the cattle it was decided that an inspector be sent from the department at Toronto, to inspect all cattle entered at the sale as they wanted the standard of cattle to be higher than in previous years. Mr. Faith, representative of the department, assured the meeting that an inspector would be provided. It was urged the association to send a committee with him on his tour of inspection. This plan was adopted with detail pending.

Conditions

It was also thought advisable to lower the fee on members entering cattle and then not showing After considerable talk on the subject it was decided that the member or members cataloguing exhibitions and then not having them there for sale would be called upon to pay no less than 50 per cent of the cost of the sale thereof. It was also decided not to give any cash grant to any fair as the association was not in a position to do so just at present. Although the question of a field day was discussed nothing was decided at the meeting. Mr. D. N. Foster of Bloomfield was re-elected as director and was instructed to go to the annual meeting of the parent body in Toronto requesting the lowering of registration prices.

Raising Standard

Mr. R. B Faith, of Brantford, of the Holstein Friesian Association, lauded the Belleville District Holstein Association on their work of years past. He also stated he was glad o hear that the members could see the advantage of raising their standard of sales. It was a sign of uplifting a new foundation to the raising of Holstein standards throughout the district, he thought. "You have got to keep moving either forward or backward, and it depends upon you as individuals whether or not the Holstein question goes ahead or, backward," said Mr. Faith. He pointed out that the parent body was increasing their standard and stated the increase with the following figures—there were 22,476 Holsteins registered, 5,000 transferred, 4,963 exported and 511 new members admitted last year.

Mr. Faith also pointed out that Canada's export trade in cattle to the United States amounted to over 40,000 head last year. He also went on to point out that the expenditures of the parent organization this been less than the appropriation for the past three years and he was of the opinion that this fact should also be marked well by the smaller clubs.

Outlook Good

Mr. Faith told the members present that the outlook was very good for the farmer who had plenty of perseverence, faith and courage because he was sure that good times would once again be seen in Canada. He pointed out that to be prepared, for this occasion the cattle breeders should try and build up the standards of their cattle as much as possible, so as to be prepared for the return of prosperity. "You must pay more attention to TYPE and cattle if you expect a good herd," stated the speaker.

A Good Market

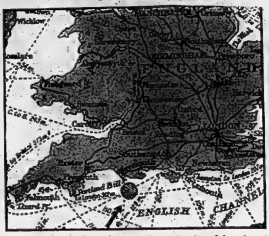
Mr. Faith spoke very emphatically and told the members that the price of good cattle had never gone down and that if they wished to sell their surplus cows and bulls they must try and raise their standard. He pointed out that there were plenty of buyers but they would not buy present day inferior cattle and he, as an individual, did not blame them He pointed out that there had been no less than 13 bulls sold at the recent Royal Winter Fair at Toronto and this alone showed the fact that there was plenty of market for good cattle. "Breeders are looking for a better class of young bulls today", said the speaker and he urged the members to build up the standard of the herds. He also told members that good bulls were scarce in Canada and now was the time for any breeders to meet the market demand.

Record of Performance

Mr. Faith came to the meeting of the R. O. P. work and although he knew that the breeders did not like this work he was of the opinion that it was to their interest to keep record as this would help them in their sales later on. "R. O. P. work is cheaper in Canada than in any other country in the world," stated the speaker. He was of the opinion that perhaps the work was too cheap but he urged the members to pay more attention to it. He also told them that the government was going to buy first grade bulls and he could sell any amount of them if they could meet the requirements set by the government.

"The Belleville district should get into this work and be ready to meet those requirements," quoted the speaker.

Sources of Income



In conclusion he pointed out that the cattle breeder had two sources of income; first milk and second, the sale of surplus cattle. This with that outlook he was of the opinion that with selective registration and better young bulls the local cattle breeders would increase their business beyond their conception.

"Each generation is giving a better test and I have no fear for the future of the Holstein breeder", said Mr. Faith in closing.

Mr. J. O. Herity welcomed the association and its members to Belleville and assured them that Belleville always welcomed the cattle breeders of this district.

The meeting closed after a very hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Faith for his inspiring and instructive address.

BRITISH SUBMARINE FEARED LOST OFF PORTLAND

The above map shows the approximate situation of the submarine M-2, which is believed to be lying disables 17 fathoms deep on the floor of the English Channel, about five miles off Portland Bill. This popular submarine, recently re-designed to carry a seaplane, went out on exercises and did not return to the surface after diving. Forty-six men are aboard the ship and unless they are rescued within the next twenty-four fours it is doubtful whether they will be found alive.

TASHOTA, Jan. 28.—James D. Rowlandson, 28, a resident of Tashota for two years, was shot in the leg about eleven o'clock, Tuesday night with a .45 calibre revolver allegedly in the hands of Howard Cashaback, 16. He died at 4.30 a.m. Wednesday, death being due to bleeding.

The shooting occurred in the Cashaback store in Tashota. It is reported that Rowlandson had forced an entrance into the premises, and young Cashaback claims he fired in self-defence.

An inquest will be held and young Cashaback given a preliminary hearing on the arrival of Magistrate Young of Fort William, who is on his way to Tashota.

Meanwhile, Cashaback is being held by provincial police.

Rowlandson was employed for a time as a miner by the Tashota Gold Mines, Limited, but for some time past has been unemployed. The remains will be taken to his former home in Porquis Junction for interment.

ASK CITIZENS TO BE READY

Want Them to Move Into Settlement in Event of Emergency

Shanghai, Jan. 28.—J. F. Brennan, British consul-general, today advised British citizens living outside the international settlement to be prepared to enter the settlement quickly in the event of an emergency.

He issued the warning after unidentified persons had hurled a bomb against the Japanese consulate.

Edwin S. Cunningham, United States consul-general, issued a similar warning to his nationals.

No damage was done by the bomb, except for a few shattered windows, but Japanese authorities said a hat picked up in the streets bore the insignia of a Chinese Anti-Japanese Society.

Five hundred additional Japanese marines were landed from the cruiser Yubari, which arrived today, with twelve additional Japanese destroyers.

POLICE RAID CLUB

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28—Charged with keeping a common gaming house, Joseph Le Ditta, president of the Italian Recreation Club, was arrested yesterday. Thirteen others were taken into custody on charges of being "found in." Police raided the club room and allege they found gambling going on.

ULTIMATUM WILL EXPIRE AS SUN SINKS

China, Expected to Yield Partially, Prepares to Resist Onslaught

Bomb Hurled at Japanese Consulate Intensifies Situation

Shanghai, Jan. 28—The municipal council of the Shanghai international settlement declared a "state of emergency" effective at 4 p.m. today, two hours before the time specified in the "final ultimatum" from the Japanese.

(By E. R. Ekins, United States Staff Correspondent).

Shanghai, China, Jan. 28 — The long-awaited crisis in the conflict between China and Japan at Shanghai is expected before sundown. A "final" Japanese ultimatum, demanding cessation of the anti-Japanese boycott, expires at 6 p.m. (5 a.m. E.S.T. Thursday).

A bomb was hurled at the offices of the Japanese consul-general yesterday a few hours before expiration of the ultimatum.

This act of terrorism, which was perhaps the most serious outrage for the recent series of anti-Japanese incidents, occurred shortly after Shanghai had awakened to the cold sunshine of a day which may be historic in the modern history of China.

Japanese warships and landing parties are expected to act against the city, probably occupying it after a bombardment if such action is necessary to overcome the resistance of 24,000 Chinese troops in the area. The Japanese ultimatum expires at 6 p.m. (5 a.m. E.S.T.), after which action by the powerful naval force in the harbor is expected.

Chinese forces, concentrated at Shanghai in the last few days, were ordered to remain at their posts to resist any attack. There are about 25,000 Chinese troops in the area, holding well fortified posts.

STRICT WATCH ON JESUITS

Pope Makes Protest Against Dissolution of Order

Madrid, Jan. 28 (AP)—Government authorities throughout the country maintained a strict vigilance today as the Jesuits abandoned their houses, to prevent removal of property, which has been confiscated by the state.

In Chamberi, a suburb of Madrid, vigilance of the police was so strict children were unable to remove their personal possessions from a Jesuit school.

Papal Nuncio Federico Tedeschini plans to present to the Spanish Government a protest from the Catholic church over the dissolution of the Jesuit order, it was learned in Catholic circles today.

Cardinal Vidal Barraquer of Tarragona, ranking Catholic clergyman in Spain, has been unable to get from Spanish Bishops and Archbishops saying the dissolution "violates the principles of fair execution." The premiers and officials of Spain defends the Pope because it imposes a maximum penalty against the Jesuits merely on the strength of their vow to him of spiritual obedience."

Prince Tells Boys, Girls Depression is Unpatriotic

London, Jan. 27—Depression and apathy are the Devil's own, the Prince of Wales told 10,000 boys and girls in Albert Hall Wednesday night at a meeting arranged by the National Council for Social Service.

"They're not English," he cried, "away with them!" and the roof rang with cheers.

"Emerson said a good many years ago that the Englishman is the one who stands firmest in his shoes," said the Prince, "and I know that is true of the rising generation of today.

"So far as I am concerned, many paths in life are closed to me. But that I would like to do I cannot, but I have tried to bring the people of the Empire closer together. I have had my failures, I know, but in these years with few precedents to guide us, to have had no failures is to have attempted nothing.

"There is a danger that some people are getting too used to the present critical situation," he said. "It's not a good time for that; doubtful no use waiting for that doubtful day. A good time coming. We have got to fight, and here I pin my faith to the younger generation, to keep England 'a bulwark for the cause of men'; to keep our great heritage in trust for those who come after.

"We have before us today a world with woeful doubt and weary with repeated disappointment— A world of troubled nations whose vital need is courageous faith in each other. It is an era of potential plenty, when confidence should be supreme, yet we see in every land widespread distress and perplexity. The enemies today are depression and apathy. Let us stand them with two of our old-fashioned characteristics, good sense and good humor."

There's a wealth of rich flavor in a small quantity of this tea.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

He took out a note-book and pencil and commenced writing. "Here," he said abruptly, when he had finished, "please hand this to Ken Hobart when he reports here. If he's body reforms by twilight, drive the car back to the ranch. You know the way." He stood up, hitched his belt and held out his hand.

"Where are you going, Jimmy?"

"I'm going to circle ahead of those sheep and get to the only water-holes they can reach tonight. There's an old branding corral in the valley by that water-hole—one I built myself. I'm going to dig in there and wait that gang out. There is a tiny county by the corral where we keep tools for cleaning out the waterholes, so I'm fixed!"

"Surely you're not going alone?"

"Julio will follow at four o'clock. He's dependable. Good-by, Bobby—in case I do not see you again. It's been wonderful to have known you. When you get back, think kindly of Jim Blagsius, if he's in the cemetery and send him an occasional picture postcard if he's not."

He took her hand. It trembled in his. "Jimmy," she said in a very small voice, "the other night you told me you loved me. Was that a statement of fact or just—ah—hooey?"

"It was a statement of fact. I'll love you as long as I live. Some day, if I live, I suppose Jill marry somebody else, but in the cool of the evening, darling, when the day's work is done and the Higuenes boy and his thoughts are alone together—well, I'll do some thinking. And if Mrs. Higuenes should say, 'Jamie, what are you thinking of?' I shall tell her a harmless lie."

"I shall go right home!" Jimmy—provided you come back to Valle Verde. If not——"

"They'll plant me in a hurry and you can go the day after, Bobby. I'll be took her fresh, lovely face in his palms. "Bobby," he said very seriously, "remember as the maid who never made love for fun." And he kissed her on the lips and left her go. Dully, she watched him swing into his saddle and ride away.

About three-thirty Ken Hobart and Julio returned and found Roberta sobbing as if her heart must break.

"Where is the Big Boss?" Hobart demanded.

Roberta held out a couple of leaves of paper.—Don Jaime's battle plan. Hobart read it. "The boy has some sense after all," he decided. He and Julio will guard the waterhole and stand them off fr'm.

With Fraser, Lambert, and O'Grady, and two good pistoles to be selected by Caraveo will flank them or take them in the rear. We'll I've got three of my own kind with me! Caraveo, with other fourteen men, will constitute the reserve for, of course, Dingle and his bunch will break for the border the moment they realize they are actively opposed. Not to do so would be ruin ous. And at the river dog will eat dog." He whistled. "Who says this is a dull country?" He spoke to Julio.

"Si senor," murmured Julio, and rode away on Don Jaime's trail!

Ken Hobart, lit! down with Roberta, lit a cigarette, and waited. Then:

"Crying over the old man!"

Roberta nodded, and added defensively: "I'm sure anybody would! Don Jaime's so young and so fine, and if he should get killed—"

"Quite so," murmured Mr. Hobart. "However, we have our consolation. He'll have a lot of company on the way up! I imagine he'll get killed—somehow."

"In heaven's name why?"

"Well," said Mr. Hobart with exasperating deliberation, "he's made love to Jill—with you, Miss Antrim, but he realizes that you'd never dream of marrying the man who killed your uncle—"

"My uncle was a scoundrel. He employed gunmen!"

"Still he was your uncle. You know of course, that with Don Jaime's breed of cat an uncle is a kinsman, no matter what he does. I've felt like telling the boss he was all wrong about you but then a hired man who speaks out of his turn to Don Jimmy gets fired pretty sudden."

"If you'd only told him!" Roberta wailed. "Still, if you only had!"

"Why didn't you tell him yourself?" he protested.

"There are things no girl can say —when a man acts as queerly as Don Jaime has done, Mr. Hobart. He's so sensitive, so retiring—"

"Don Jaime Higuenes and to cover his strangled cachinnation coughed violently into his cupped hands.

"Would you marry this Higuenes hombre, if he asked you?"

Roberta looked furiously and flung her head.

"Oooh!" Hobart urged, "this is serious business. There's a question before the house and I want an answer. Speak up! Would you marry this Don Jaime if he were the ugliest mongrel ever put into the pot with him and help extend his irrigation system and then a thousand gone hired Hereford breeding cows?"

"I would gladly if I married him! I'd be his partner as well as his wife, I could be a—a secretary."

"None better," agreed Mr. Hobart. "Well, if you want him, go get him. He's yours for the asking!"

"Mr. Hobart! How dare you? No girl asks a man to marry her!"

"That's why we have so many old maids, Miss Antrim. I advise you to take a leaf out of Don Jimmy's book, and whatever you want anything go get it. Now listen to me. If you hop aboard that horse of mine and ride after Julio he'll lead you to that old branding corral where he and Don Jaime are going to dig in and do some fancy shooting. You can easy follow Julio He's riding a pinto hoss and even two miles away that hoss looms up. You'll have time to get to the scene of the festivities before they get going. Save your little pow-wow with Don Jimmy, and then beat it back here before dark."

"Oh, Mr. Hobart, I couldn't! I'd feel so brazen. I'd die of shame."

"Very well, then, die, Don Jimmy is sure to die, because he doesn't want to live. Of course, he'd never let you know that but right here in this note he left me he says: 'Arise amigo'. See that Miss Antrim gets to the station all right, and whatever you do don't plant me in the same cemetery with her under!"

"But, if he's bent on getting killed—"

"He wouldn't be so bent if he knew his luck, the fool! You tell him things and he'll keep his head down. He may even pull out of the fight and let me and my men do his dirty work for him."

"Mr. Hobart, you are not loyal to Don Jaime. Whatever his faults—and I believe he has a few—he kills his own rats."

"He's got Spanish blood in him," the sage urged, "and there's a quitting point in all of his breed. They die well after they've lost hope, but while they have a shred of hope left they're the champion long-distance runners of the world. You can save a human life, if you care to. If you do not—care not—that's your own business."

"I wish I could feel that your judgment in this matter is not in error, Mr. Hobart."

"Error, my eye. I get my information direct. It seems Don Jaime and Mrs. Gauby got to discussing you and him the other day. Mrs. Gauby's about twenty years older than Jaime, so she talked to him like a son. Being a woman she saw things no mere man would recognise if he walked over 'em. Well, Don Jimmy gave her his confidence and both of them forgot little Robbie was listening in. What he heard startled the boy. He got the notion, from what Don Jaime said, that you did not care for his hero, so he came over to my quarters to talk it over with me, man-fashion. That's how come I found out. Then, too, I never did see Don Jimmy so depressed as he's been here of late."

"I hadn't noticed it, Mr. Hobart."

"He wouldn't let you notice it. But he let down a mile to me."

Roberta got up, walked to her horse and mounted him. "Thank you a lot, Mr. Hobart," she said. "You're a true friend."

"I'm glad I measure up. Hello, here come Caraveo and the trucks. I must head him off and send him down the road a few miles farther, to save time." He made a flying leap to his horse and galloped away to meet the riding boss. Just as Roberta disappeared over the skyline he gave Enrico Caraveo his orders, then without waiting for the five men to follow he galloped swiftly after the girl.

"I am ill," he muttered, "I got so interested fixing things for Don Jimmy I clean forgot that girl wears pants, and a two-gallon hat. Some one of those non-coms may mistake her for a man!"

Twenty-Ninth Instalment

Ken Hobart had been much too preoccupied with the responsibilities of his job as Don Jaime's general manager to waste any time speculating on his employer's affairs de cour. When Don Jaime first presented him to Roberta, Hobart had instantly decided that she was the sort of female no man could afford to take to wife, being much too skittish for the obligations of the married state. In districts where the phrase "until death us do part" still is taken seriously, the new Don Jaime Miguel Higuenes, so it never occurred to him, would be forced to him that Don Jaime would be the last man in the world she might be expected to fall in love with.

Robbie's report to Hobart and the confidential information revealed by that young eavesdropper had first amused and then interested Hobart. Robbie was furious at Roberta for her apparent failure to appreciate his beloved Jimmy and was for going to Roberta and telling her about it. Hastily Ken Hobart vetoed that procedure, but promised Robbie to look into the matter and see if something couldn't be done about it.

Well, he had done something, nor had he been too particular as to the means employed to accomplish that event. To Mr. Hobart's direct way of thinking this charming scarf at Valle Verde had demonstrated that Don Jaime was still a heartless society girl. He had found her weeping in terror and grief because, forsooth, Don Jaime and Jimmy might presently be killed. Many years as a Texas Ranger had convinced Ken Hobart that if Roberta Roberts was Jaime's destiny was far from nebulous; consequently he had to take those tears seriously. That was the way to fight. No doubt about that. And somebody usually got hurt in such fights.

MR. ANDMES.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 24.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)—

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

A giant of a white devil had wrested Kaviri's spear from him; hairy monsters were overcoming his fighting men, and a black chieftain, like himself, was fighting shoulder to shoulder with that hideous pack of apes. Though he fought bravely, it was useless against the superhuman strength and agility of this mighty white man, who was slowly choking the breath of life from him.

When he regained consciousness, Kaviri found himself scarcely bound in the bottom of his canoe. A great panther sat upon its haunches looking down upon him. Beyond the panther kneeled the white giant who had overcome him. The man was winding a paddle, while behind him Kaviri saw some of his own warriors similarly engaged. Back of them squatted several of the hairy apes.

Kaviri was now only too glad to comply with any demands the ape-man might make, if only by so doing his remaining warriors would be taken back to their village. The three canoes moved steadily up river, though at every moment Kaviri's warriors expected to be pounced on and torn asunder. During their trip Tarzan talked with the chief and became greatly puzzled over Kaviri's words.

"White man very bad," said Kaviri. "I try to 'kill him first. Three moons ago come white man to my village; they took our goats and young women. They kill many of my people. They say they hunt another white man, with white woman and little white baby who ran away from them." The child must be my little son," thought Tarzan. But who could the woman be—and the man?

Maguire Alleges Some Doherty Interests Had Plans on St. Lawrence

Hydro Administration is Defended By Commissioner

PROPOSAL DOWNED

Ontario Municipalities in Hydro Hold Annual Meeting

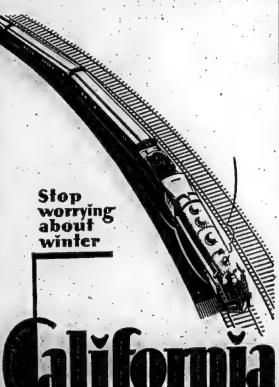
Toronto, Jan. 28 — While the Beauharnois investigation was in progress at Ottawa last year, United States power interests, allegedly represented by the Henry L. Doherty group of New York, staged a private luncheon at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto, and made overtures to Alfred Maguire, Ontario Hydro Commissioner, and to Mayor William J. Stewart, for the purpose of securing their aid so that the Doherty interests could acquire the Beauharnois development.

What was proposed, Mr. Maguire declared in a stout defence of Hydro before the annual convention of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association here yesterday, was that Mayor Stewart should "excite the people of Ontario over the Beauharnois situation" and that Mr. Maguire would "help by not attacking him."

Then the Doherty interests would endeavor to get Ontario "at no cost to the people of Canada" and proceed to develop the 4,000,000 horsepower for the United States interests.

Defence of Hydro

Mr. Maguire's revelations came in the midst of a lengthy and telling speech in which, as representative of the 30 Hydro municipalities, he gave an account of his stewardship and made a ringing and exhaustive defence of Ontario Hydro. In his speech he reminded his hearers of the Sifton Georgian Bay scheme which, he said, was defeated by the Hydro municipalities and saved the province a great resource and many millions of dollars. Then he attacked Capt. Elmore Philpott and the Globe, declaring as a former Liberal that the Liberal party had abandoned and deserted public ownership. He was stressing the point that Hydro needed always to be on guard against predatory private interests.



He was challenged from the floor by Mayor Peebles of Hamilton and others, and as readily and vigorously defended. "Hands off the Hydro" was advocated as a slogan by Mr. Maguire's most enthusiastic defender, a Liberal and former critic of Hydro, J. B. Buchanan of Ingersoll.

Charles R. Hanna, former Liberal M.P. for Hastings, in the afternoon meeting moved a formal vote of thanks to Mr. Maguire for his "very interesting and enlightening address." Answering questions Mr. Maguire stated that his position was a little perplexing in not dealing with matters proposed for investigation. Prime Minister Henry, he said, had under consideration, the question of investigating the Hydro administration; therefore, as a member of the commission which might be investigated, he was in an anomalous position if he touched on the matters likely to be the subject of official probe.

A plea to let "Premier Henry have a chance" was voiced by A. S. Buchanan, one-time Liberal candidate and Hydro commissioner for Ingersoll, when he expressed thanks for Mr. Maguire's address.

"We have a new premier and he is besieged with problems" he explained. "We may not all be satisfied with certain things, but let us give him a chance. Will it be a royal commission or a committee? That is the constant question. I think he needs more than much for other purposes to throw £250,000 to a judge for a royal commission to sound a new challenge of 'Hands off the Hydro'.

PARESIS CURE IS ANNOUNCED

General Electric Physicist Tells Method Found By Chance

Toronto, Jan. 28—A cure for paresis, a disease hitherto thought to be incurable, was discovered by chance by a group of laboratory workers who felt ill after working for a few hours on a high frequency oscillator broadcasting tube, Ellis Manning, physicist in the General Electric Company's research laboratory at Schenectady, told a total luncheon of the Electric Club of Toronto, the Association of Municipal Electric Utilities, and the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association in the Royal York Hotel yesterday.

An accidental treatment for a year or two to make certain that the cure is effective, public publicity has been given to it, although some complete cures have been made, Mr. Manning explained. He explained that the men who were working in the laboratory with the high tension oscillators seemed to get tired after a few hours' work and on investigation it was found that the rays from the tubes heated the blood stream with no effect on the skin or tissues. The high salt content of blood makes it a good conductor of electricity, he said.

The heating of blood has the same result as the pasteurization of milk. By heating the blood, a patient's body became immune from certain ills.

In reality, the equipment used in the treatments is a small broadcasting station, Mr. Manning elucidated. The body of the patient is placed in the field of the oscillating waves. At the outset a large percentage of mice and rats that have been given a dose of the paresis bacillus were cured completely, but now the treatment is used on humans, he said. Paresis is a form of muscle paralysis.

BRITISH GOODS EAGERLY SOUGHT

New Channels of Trade Open Due to Depreciation

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 28.—New channels of trade are being developed through encouragement given to Canada during in Britain because of prevailing exchange rates, according to A. M. Wiseman, British Trade Commissioner to Canada. Since the depreciation of the Canadian dollar in terms of United States currency, a marked increase in inquiries for British goods of specific description has been experienced in the commission's office, he said. Canadian tariffs against United States had been a contributing factor, he asserted.

Huge Timber Wolf Has Been Killed

SUDBURY, Jan. 28.—The king of all timber wolves, near Nashville, is no more. Orland Seguin, a farmer there, now has his pelt, more than seven feet in length. Seguin smarted the animal, but around its neck were two old snares it had previously broken in defiance of all the wolf-hunting equipment that the Ontario Government has been able to procure.

Muir Memorial Raised This Year

Toronto, Jan. 28—The long-delayed memorial to Alexander Muir, Scottish-Canadian author of "The Maple Leaf Forever," is to be raised at last. This year, next month in fact, Canadian artists, amateur and professional, will be given an opportunity to compete for the honor of designing the Alexander Muir Memorial. The memorial is to be erected in Toronto where Alexander Muir lived and taught school, wrote his greatest song and died.

Within the next two weeks the conditions of the competition which is to decide the form of the Alexander Muir Memorial will be made public. Magistrate Jenny Edmund Jones and C. E. C. Dyson of the subcommittee on design are now discussing the final arrangements with Dr. Jones L. Hughes, chairman, and other members of the Alexander Muir Memorial committee.

Kennedy Wants Farmer Envoys

Lindsay, Jan. 28—Addressing a meeting of the County Council on Wednesday afternoon, Thomas A. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, urged the need for more representatives from the National Council of Women, the unions, doctors, veterinary surgeons, dairymen, poultrymen and others call at his office in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, but had never had a farmer there, and that is why I am in this county and other counties to appoint representatives from these minds who can come to Toronto at any call and at my expense to talk over farm matters.

"The government wants to get heart-to-heart talks from the farmers. I find the farmer to be a shy chap. He stays on the farms and does not seem to get out to see things. I am not talking politics, but I have never received a deputation or a resolution from the farmers."

Artists Found in Many Places

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 28.—Artists of today are not all to be found in the studio and the library, Miss Nora-Frances Henderson believed. "The Art of Life, the Art of making life beautiful", she said, "demands just as much tolerance and patience as 'pure' art has ever required from us."

Miss Henderson, recently-elected Alderman of Hamilton, Ont., and women's editor of the Hamilton Herald, addressed the Heliconian Club—a group of local artists.

Many artists striving to make life more beautiful, more harmonious, may be found, she said, in the ranks of public servants, the busy aldermen, members of parliament or anything else.

COUNCIL AGREES TO THE DEMANDS

Unemployed Are Refused Money to Join Hungry March

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 28—Ehat Windsor city council yesterday agreed to twelve relief "demands" made by a group of about 100 housewives of unemployed men but declined to pay unemployed in their proposed "Hungry March" to Toronto and Ottawa.

The women, a section of the United Front Conference, asked among other things free vaccination, a dollar cut recently on welfare orders; right of workers to get any commodity they wished; furnishing of necessary clothing to all unemployed workers and their dependents, provision of hot milk and noonday for school children, free of charge; and free transportation of children of unemployed to and from school wherever necessary.

INGERSOLL, Jan. 28.—Improvement of various spots in the town under the direction of the Ingersoll Horticultural Society, will likely be made during the year. SEARCHING IN WRONG PLACE SAYS WITNESS

Captain of Steamer Saw Submarine Dive Stern First

TIDES FOIL WORK

No Trace of Location of Submarine M-2 Which is Missing

London, Jan. 28—Search for the missing British submarine M-2 was being made in the wrong place nearly six miles from where it disappeared, Captain Howard of the steamer Tynesider told the Gravesend correspondent of the Daily Mail today.

Captain Howard said he saw a submarine submerge stern first and had no doubt that it was the M-2 as he clearly read the mark "M". Her head was rising out of the water, and before the Tynesider could approach she sank suddenly.

The hours of battle already a very slender hope—for saving the lives of the submarine's crew had dwindled at midnight, until only ten hours remained of the forty-eight, which was the normal limit within the submarines craft.

Six destroyers rolled in a strong swell, with their signal lights flashing to and fro in the darkness, around the red flag that marked the position where the M-2 was supposed to have sunk.

Salvage ships, unable to work in the dark and too unwieldly to anchor in the open sea, went to Portland Harbor for the night, prepared to return at daybreak.

Further Aid Asked.

An urgent request was sent to the Portsmouth dockyards for an observation chamber, from which divers might search the sea bed safely. This is an improved sort of diving bell with glass windows through which a diver can scan a radius of about twenty yards with the help of powerful electric lights. It can be lowered even in a comparatively rough sea.

The chamber left Portsmouth immediately aboard a van destroyer.

Ordinarily, the air supply in a ship like the M-2 is enough to last 48 hours to 50 hours. That period will expire some time between 10.30 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. tomorrow, and until then there still will be some faint hope that the crew is alive.

FORMER FIREMAN FINED

St. Thomas, Jan. 28—Frederick W. Kitchener, former member of the city fire department, was fined $100 and costs in city police court today on a charge of having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling. He pleaded guilty. Bail that he would serve the three months.

Pessimism One of Worst Sins Says McGill Professor

Montreal, Jan. 28.—"Stupidity, ugliness, moral turpitude, cowardice, meanness, hypocrisy, pessimism," is the "revised" list of seven cardinal sins given by Professor Rene de Roure of the Department of Romance Languages, McGill University, to a group of business men in a service club address here. Claiming to speak with authority, "from the point of view of an old sinner," Professor de Roure stated that the clergyman's list of cardinal sins may be all right, but to me it is obsolete—most of the sins are too good."

The speaker described his list of the seven most objectionable sins "in creation," and named pessimism as the worst. "Men should be hanged for helping the current dramatic attitude," he said. "One loses energy or the will to strive by repeating that all is lost. Offering salaries is bad enough, but when it comes to severing the confidence in life and the future of humanity, all means possible should be employed to fight and keep an obsolete—most of the sins are too long."

BIT MAN'S EAR IN HIS HUNGER

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Jan. 23.—When George Braicheli, 45, appeared at a doctor's office with half his ear missing, police decided to investigate.

"It happened yesterday, "Braicheli told them. "A panhandler approached me and said he was hungry and needed a dime. I refused. He bit my ear in two.

SCIENTISTS SOLVE PROBLEM OF FISHERMEN

Many Problems Discussed at Meeting of Biological Board

GOOD PROGRESS

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 28. — (By the Canadian Press)—The reaction of fish to the noise of motor boats, the mysterious cause of salmon not losses in Nass River, B.C., and discoloration of certain fish in the process of freezing, were some of the interesting features of the investigations carried on during the past year and reported upon at the annual meeting of the Biological Board of Canada, Ottawa early in January.

The Board is an institution for conducting and controlling scientific investigations and attacking practical and economic problems connected with marine and fresh water fisheries. It operates under the control of the Minister of Fisheries, but is, however, a semi-independent body and its members give their services free of any charge to the Government, excepting such expenses as may be incurred in travelling to attend meetings. The membership is made up of representatives from the staffs of the various universities in Canada, partly of men directly engaged in the fishing industry.

The Board employs a permanent staff of scientists and operates four main research stations. Two are known as Biological Stations, one at St. Andrews, New Brunswick, and the other at Nanaimo, British Columbia, where the more purely scientific and fundamental problems are dealt with, etc. Two known as Fisheries Experimental Stations, one at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and the other at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, deal with practical problems arising in connection with the handling, preservation and marketing of fish.

At the meetings of the Board and its committees reports were submitted by the directors of the various stations on a great variety of investigations that had taken place in the course of the year.

The Prince Rupert Station described an investigation carried out as to the effect of noise from the exhaust of motor boats on fish, and it was interesting to note that it was found that while at first there was a definite movement away from the noise, the fish soon became accustomed to this and were not affected at all. The distribution of food combined with noise was tried and it was found that the fish moved to the feeding spot notwithstanding the noise. Noise was then produced at the same place without feeding and the fish responded to the noise just as before.

The same station investigated a problem that had been causing the salmon netters of Nass River, B.C., considerable inconvenience and great expense — the annual loss of many nets because of some unknown matter forming on the apparatus and weighting it to the bottom of the river. It was investigated by several scientists and eventually the cause was proven. It was found that Nass River silt, charged with fibres of jelly fish and other marine organisms of a gelatinous matter, was causing the damage, clinging so tenaciously to the nets and increasing the weight that the nets were quickly overweighted. The damage occurred at irregular intervals and those occasions were featured by exceptionally high tides coinciding with special abundance of marine life. Warned of the cause of their trouble the fishermen were enabled to take the necessary steps to avert loss.

Other features of the report included investigation with a view to improving the smoking of fish, which is of great importance to the fishing industry. This was practically concluded and its effectiveness demonstrated at a number of fishing industry. This was practically concluded and its effectiveness demonstrated at a number of canneries in the course of the year.

Fish smoking has potential on the Atlantic Coast, has been attended with what seemed to be insurmountable difficulties due to high humidity and temperature of the atmosphere, so that the ordinary certain seasons smoking was practically impossible. The solution of these difficulties seemed to lie in conditioning the air in the smoke houses so as to produce uniform drying from day to day. This was done and an experimental plant installed which is successfully working in a commercial plant on the Atlantic Coast.

Experiments were conducted "to find the most economical and satisfactory method for preparing cans and implements where salt fish are handled with a view to preventing the destructive 'reddening,' process.

Investigations were carried on in connection with the fresh fish industry, such as the control of the discolouration of halibut the relation of marine bacteria to the fish, composition of fish, the temperature changes of fresh fish when stowed in the hold of fishing vessels uniced and iced.

Investigations were also conducted in connection with the frozen fish industry. These took the form of improved construction of cold storage rooms, the prevention of discolouration of fish in cold storage, the freezing rates of commercial fishes of the Pacific Coast, the chemical study of "rusting" of frozen fatty fish, and engineering problems concerned therewith.

An investigation of the nutritional value of canned salmon has been started. This covers the studies of the bacteriology of the canned product, changes during storage, changes after opening the can, the rate of bacterial decomposition as compared with rotten food stuffs, and the various vitamin potencies of the foods canned salmon.

The important investigation connected with the utilization of the great quantities of pilchard oil produced on the Pacific Coast was continued. These had to do with the refining of various fish oils, the use of pilchard oil in the soap producing industry, the use of pilchard and other fish oils as food and for animal feeding.

An investigation has begun on the causes of the destruction of fishing nets by rotting in storage when not in use.

Investigation of the lobster was continued with a view to determining rate of growth and the spawning stages to provide authoritative information for the fixing of close seasons and the regulation of the fishery. Studies of the oyster in Malpeque Bay, Prince Edward Island, with a view to re-establishing the Bi-valve in these waters were continued and advanced.

A general survey of the fisheries possibilities of the Bay of Fundy was carried out by the St. Andrews Station staff, and hydrographic and oceanographic studies were continued in order to determine the factors governing temperature and salinity.

Experiments were carried on at the Station hatchery with a view to improving hatchery methods and preventing losses in fry and eggs.

Investigation was continued of the so-called disease that has been evident in the herring of the Bay of Fundy in the last few years.

A study has been made of the slime on the surface of fish, which has been considered of the particular value during handling or curing.

Eskimos Gasp in Awe of "Big Dogs"

Churchill, Man., Jan. 28.—Eskimos are flocking hundreds of miles to see the "big dogs" as they call the first horses ever brought here. Fleets of aeroplanes, even Lindbergh bound for Japan, failed to draw forth the slightest sign of interest from the copper-hued natives.

The leaders of commerce and politics have last fall upon the visit of the Canadian Chamber Commerce, drew forth only smiles from the natives. Large tractors and scores gigantic dredgers are only items of passing interest, but today upon the arrival of teams of horses to do freighting work along the bay, the natives gasped and ran.

COUNCIL HEARS COMMUNICATIONS

Many Matters Brought to Attention of County Council

A considerable portion of Wednesday afternoon session of the County Council was occupied in a discussion arising out of a communication from Messrs Porter, Payne K.C., and Arnold and Butler, K.C. in reference to the matter of the erection of a residence for a County official.

As the County apparently had no solicitor the Council decided to engage a solicitor and the above matter will be referred to whoever is appointed.

Messrs D. Thrasher and H. W. Pearsent addressed the Council relative to a grant of $40 toward the heeding of a district seed show. The grant asked is $10 less than that granted last year. Referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. R. C. Brett, Reeve of Limerick township stated that Earle Reed whilst in the employ of the County sustained injuries, which incapacitated him from work for some time he received compensation, but of late it had been withheld. The man is still a cripple and has a wife and family, and is in need of assistance.

Mr. J. A. Spracklett said he knew the man since his boyhood and he had never met before the accident and was in every respect worthy of assistance. His hip was injured to such an extent as to render him helpless.

Mr. Gilroy suggested that the County Superintendent might write the Compensation Board relative to the matter.

Mr. Reed in answer to a question stated that the man was seriously injured by a large stone rolling upon him, rendering him a cripple. At present he can get about by a cane and crutch. Dr. Mickel attended the man.

The motion the matter were left in the hands of the County Superintendent.

Several applications to be appointed cow boss inspector for the County were read also three applications for the position of County Superintendent. These were referred to the committee of the whole on bylaw.

Mr. Peter Keller of Bancroft wrote the Council requesting $12 for damages owing to his cellar being flooded on the 19th inst. The trouble was caused, he said, by a culvert at Bancroft. Councillor Mr. Davis and Mr. Gunter both stated that the cause was that a culvert was too small to carry off the water, which was extraordinarily high.—Reference was made to the Roads and Bridge Committee with power to act.

A request for a grant to the Hospital for Consumptives, was referred to the Ways and Means Committee for the introduction of several bylaws were given and referred to the Committee of the whole on Bylaws.

Dr. H. M. Robb, Provincial Minister of Health informed by letter, that the Council that it would be necessary to appoint two on the Cemetery Board, and third to be named by the department.

One of the applicants for the position of County Superintendent offered to do the work for $1800 per year.

Council adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Since July 9th., 1920 when the Board was organized 80 pensioners have died and 68 have moved out of the County, 6 have been cancelled and 5 have come into the County. GOVT MAY CURB NUMBER OF NURSES

Hamilton, Jan. 29.—Speaking last night at the Dent dinner of the new Assembly Hall of the Ontario Hospital, Hon. Dr. James (the Provincial Minister of Health, said that unemployment among nurses and the overcrowding of that profession might make it necessary for the government to take drastic action to control the situation, unless hospitals overcame the shortage in the strength of nurses' training schools.

Dr. Robb stated that there were 15,000 graduate nurses in Ontario, of whom 7,500 were employed in public health service. Of those nonactive. An equal number were unemployed, and the serious aspect of the situation, he said, lay in the 7,000 additional nurses would graduate during the next two or three years, thus adding approximately 2,500 annually to those now unable to find employment in Ontario.

Invokes Articles 10 and 15 of Covenant Before League Council

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 22 (AP) — W. W. Yen, Chinese spokesman at the League of Nations Council invoked articles 10 and 15 of the league covenant before the council today, calling for drastic measures to protect the integrity of China.

The new Chinese appeal, switching the discussion from a minor article of the treaty was made in a letter to Secretary-General Sir Eric Drummond today.

Mr. Yen said he took the action on instructions from his government at Nanking. The League council was slated to meet at 3.30 this afternoon.

W. W. Yen, the Chinese spokesman, made the decision after learning the Japanese had occupied the city of Shanghai. China's appeal immediately was based on the less drastic article eleven of the covenant.

In calling upon the League to give effect to the sanctions and procedure provided in articles ten and fifteen, China reserved the right to invoke any and all other articles which may be warranted by the developments in China, Mr. Yen said.

He indicated he had orders for some time to extend the appeal to these two articles if the events in the East reached a certain stage.

Truce in Shanghai Battle Denied by Japan
Russia May be Involved Says Report from Tokyo
Britain and U. S. Preserve Silence on Intentions

Report of Armistice or Truce Denied By Japanese

VARIED REPORTS

Britain and United States Take Steps to Protect Settlement

Shanghai, Jan. 29 (AP)—Japanese military headquarters said reports that they have signed a truce with the Chinese. At 11:00 p.m. more than two hours after the reports said the armistice was to have taken effect, fighting was still going on.

At that time a number of Chinese soldiers made their way across the northern boundary of the International Settlement where a Japanese detachment was watching for just such move.

The Chinese attacked a Japanese car which was bombed and one small group fired on the Japanese military headquarters. The skirmish was brief and the Chinese were driven back.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 29 (AP)—Through the exchange of notes the British and United States Consul General, the Japanese and Chinese Shanghai authorities arranged a truce to be effective at 7 a.m. Eastern Standard time today.

40 Planes Held Back

Nanking, Jan. 29 (AP) — The government is holding back the commander at Shanghai today that the Chinese losses in the fighting there totalled 300 killed and wounded up to this afternoon. It said the Chinese had captured four Japanese armored cars in the Chapei district.

Forty Chinese airplanes arrived here this afternoon and their pilots insisted on going to Shanghai immediately to engage the Japanese air force, but the government refused to authorize such action.

The Japanese Consul General at Nanking protested to diplomatic representatives here that Japan contemplates no attack on Nanking.

Word that a heavy raid four Japanese destroyers had arrived there by the Yangtze River at Great Britain which closed the local Chinese newspapers.

Carriers Ordered

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP)—The navy department ordered the two aircraft carriers Akagi and Kaga, three additional cruisers and a flotilla of destroyers at the Sasebo naval base to join warships now in Chinese waters.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Four United States warships were directed from Manilla last night toward the strife-torn area of Shanghai, presumably for any eventualities in which they might be required to protect the city's citizens and interests.

Their announced mission was to join the two United States gunboats patrolling the Yangtze River, many miles above Shanghai, and where Japanese and Chinese forces are reported fighting.

Meanwhile, pending word from Japan, Ambassador Forbes Morgan Stimson kept his counsel last night. It was known that he conferred elsewhere, however, that the United States government does not intend to take any part in the Chinese-Japanese situation without accepting an invitation from the League.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 29 (AP)— Officials here said Great Britain are preparing to take joint action with the United States in the Sino International Settlement at Shanghai, it was learned today.

The conversations between the two countries were described by officials as informal, and as not having dealt with the broad problem of Japanese activities in Manchuria or at Shanghai, but as having been restricted to the International Settlement.

Certain rights were accorded Great Britain and the United States almost immediately after the treaty about the middle of the last century. These, have been built up into a body of international rights.

London, Jan. 29 (CP)—It has not been revealed whether Great Britain has yet formally approved the United States proposals regarding the Shanghai situation, but it was understood that Mr. Stimson had to say in his conversation with the British Ambassador Monday afternoon that he closely guarded here as in Washington.

The fact that Britain has made direct representations to Tokyo and United States Ambassador Mr. Dawes, is expected to add materially to the security of Shanghai's International Settlement.

The Cabinet met this morning but there was no indication that things have reached such a state that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald need return from a visit to Edinburgh, Scotland, where he went during his absence Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President, presided over the Cabinet business.

Correspondent Tells of Street Scenes in Shanghai

Chinese Police Transfixed With Surprise as Japanese Marines Disarm Them — Chinese Waiters Quite Unperturbed Over Scenes

The following story by Morris J. Harris, Associated Press staff correspondent at Shanghai, described his personal experiences in the streets of the battle-torn city last night as the Japanese invasion began.

(By Morris J. Harris)

Shanghai, Jan. 29—Late last night I set out on the outskirts of the northern districts of the city and the areas adjacent to the Japanese International Settlement in which the Japanese headquarters have established.

In the darkened streets, almost deserted by civilians, Japanese bluejackets and marines were lined up, rank upon rank, awaiting the order to begin the invasion.

The entire section was maintained over the Japanese plans—was indicated by the fact that I saw Chinese police in the native city patrolling the streets as usual. They stood transfixed while their rifles were taken away from them, and then some of them were marched to Japanese headquarters.

Just previously I had visited some of the streets of the Chapei section which were bombed today. I found everything completely quiet and peaceful there. Even the railway station was deserted. Within half an hour these same streets were echoing with the rattle of machine guns and rifles and the bellow of Chapei had begun.

I then went to an all-night restaurant. The Chinese waiters served us unperturbed and seemed entirely uninterested in the raging battle outside. An hour later, from the top of a small skyscraper in Shanghai I saw the beginning of the disastrous fire which continued throughout all of today to ravage the center of Chapei.

The fire reflected an angry red in the clouds, which hung over the city and through their weird banks in a few minutes the Japanese airplanes came with a roar and began to scatter bombs.

The tide of battle surged backward and forward throughout the night. The rain fell steadily. Lowering clouds delayed the dawn and hampered the action of the dronling aircraft. With dawn the fighting out and the planes redoubled their attack on Chapei which the Japanese had expected to occupy within an hour or two after the fighting began, but encountered more.

Today the Chinese population of the International Settlement did no work. I toured the city later in the day and there was not a car which was not covered thick with Chinese, washing with cold-like fascination, as the wheeling aeroplanes swooped like hawks, sometimes within 200 feet of the ground to loose their bombs.

Casualties

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP)—Japanese casualties in the first night of fighting were two officers and seven bluejackets killed, 28 of all ranks seriously wounded and 19 others slightly wounded according to an official account.

Canadian Missionaries in Vicinity of Shanghai

No Definite Word as to Their Safety or Whereabouts

NO ACTION TAKEN

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 29:—For many years Canada has maintained a large missionary staff in China, now the centre of Japanese activities in the Far East. At the present time the Department is in. L. D. Cosgrave, and he has with him as Assistant Mr. Hector Charlesworth, K.C.

A. MacDonald.—Information obtained here indicates that the staff in the office of the Trade Commissioner is largely Chinese. Trade Commissioner Bell recently left to visit his good offices in an effort to secure information as to Canada of a number of aviators, who had gone to China under the impression that they could obtain remunerative employment with the Chinese army.

It is probable, although, that there are a number of Canadian missionaries in the disturbed districts, but no definite word on this point has been received by the department. Immigration, which maintains an office in Hong Kong, does not do so at Shanghai.

The Canadian Government is following the practice of Canada of not taking action is contemplated at present, as far as can be ascertained.

Russian Troops Move to Harbin. May Show Russia's Hand

Russian Manager of Railway Forbids Movement of Troops By Rail

Tokyo, Jan. 29—(AP)— A new possibility of direct conflict between Soviet Russia and Japan threatened tonight when the Rengo News Agency reported from Muk-den, Manchuria, that General Jiro Tamon, hero of the previous Manchurian campaign was ordered to take a division of troops to Harbin, where earlier today a Russian railway official blocked transport of Japanese troops over the Chinese Eastern Railway.

At the same time the Japanese Government planned to hold officials of the Russian-owned Chinese Eastern Railway responsible for delay in the arrival of Japanese reinforcements at Harbin, where a battle has been in progress for three days between Chinese forces.

Joint Ownership.

The Chinese Eastern Railway is jointly owned by Russia and China. Rail Hsi, Governor of Kirin Province, has been fighting a force led by Ting Chao, Commander of the railway zone, which has attempted to send a body of troops to Harbin. Ting Chao is said to be under the Governor said.

M. Kunnelieff, Russian Manager of the railway, forbade the transport of the troops over the line, on orders from the Russian Government at Moscow. M. Kunnelieff, pointed out that Russia had leased to transport Chinese troops southward as the latter had the Japanese invaded the Nonni river bridges was near Tsi Tsihar, and that Japan and suggested that neutrality be observed.

Late today it was authoritatively stated the Japanese Government would hold officials of the railway responsible for any delay in the troop movements to Harbin and the accountability would be extended to any damage done Japanese subjects as a result of the fighting in and around the city.

New York, Jan. 29 (CP)—The conception of a United States of Europe was defended at the Brooklyn Academy of Music last night by Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, distinguished British statesman and former Chancellor of the Exchequer. However, he said, as European solidarity increased there should be a corresponding growth of solidarity and closer communion among the English speaking peoples.

CHILD SWALLOWS OPEN SAFETY PIN

A peculiar accident occurred to the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh, recently, which fortunately did not prove serious, according to the Shining News Argus. In some manner the baby secured a safety pin and as the mouth is the first place a child desires to dispose of any article, the pin was no exception and the little tot evallowed it, while it was open. Mrs. McIntosh was not aware of this until some time later, when she went to feed the babe and it was discovered the infant could not swallow. Upon examination the mother discovered the pin in the child's throat and immediately summoned Dr. W. H. Pedley, medical director, the use of tweezers, had little difficulty in removing the pin. Dr. was fortunate the pin stuck in the throat, as it did, or otherwise a serious operation would have been necessary for its removal.

ASSASSIN STABS ENTIRE FAMILY

Creeps Into House, Kills Eight and Two Not Expected to Live

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 29.—An assassin crept into the home of Martin Sitar at Elma, Man., early this morning and stabbed to death eight persons — Sitar, his wife, their five children and a boarder whose name is not known.

Two other children are in a critical condition with knife wounds. They were rescued from their beds by an uncle, John Sitar, who lives nearby, when he rushed to the house when he set afire by the killer.

PERMANENT ROADS?

Road Problem to Fore at County Council When Report is Read

With the reading of the report of the committee on Roads and Bridges submitted and read by Chairman James A. Moore, Reeve of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, it was stated that at the December session the report was somewhat incomplete as the time was not completed, as there were some outstanding accounts since then the Provincial auditors of the Highway Department have audited the accounts and expenditures for the year and following are the amounts for the various classes of work: Brush and tree cutting, $3645.55; grading $40,-997; dragging $6416.31; culverts and bridges $31,172.92; resurfacing, 4,748 yards costing $64,351.96; dust layer $3161.44; surface treating and purchase of right-of-way, $696.50. Total $197,561.39. Several accounts totalling $18,413.96 or $184,536.95 for all purposes.

Detail account carried forward from 1930, $1000, $1,174.44; $33.05, amount appropriated for 1931, $181,500.00. Balance carried forward to 1932, $6,964.66.

Proposed expenditure for 1932, as follows: Brush and tree cutting, $3000; grading, $30,000; dragging, $6000; culverts and bridges, $2000; resurfacing ($1,000 yards), $55,700; dust layer, $4,000; surface treating, $1,400; general account $12,000; engineers, $12,650, making a total of $142,000.

Levy, 3 mills, $55,000; government grant, $77,000; $132,000.

This would be a reduction of 28 per cent from 1931 levy. In order that we may get the opinions of the council we are proposing an alteration in expenditure to include about six miles of gravelling which would leave the levy the same as 1931, or 4 mills $77,000.00
Government subsidy 77,000.00
Balance from 1931 appropriations 6,000.00

Total $157,300.00

Distributed as follows: Brush and tree cutting, $3,000; grading $16,-000; dragging, $6,000; culverts and bridges, $8,000; resurfacing, $50,000; dust layer, $4500; surface roads, $3400; general account, $12,000; emergency, $4300; payments, $50,000, making a total of $157,300.

There will be an increased levy of 1 mill each for Provincial Highways and as the government is asking for a curtailment of expenditures this years, we are of the opinion that the rate for county roads should be reduced 25 per cent, making a 3 mill rate—that leaving the total road rate the same as 1931—4 mills. The maintenance cost on the Madoc road is getting too excessive but we do not think this is an opportune time to start having as it is more to the interest of the taxpayer to reduce taxation rather than raise the tax in order that a paving program started. It would require a 4 mill rate for three years to get the Madoc-Tweed road paved and carry on the other necessary work on the county system.

We, therefore, ask for a free and full discussion on these proposed expenditures so we may know the amount of the levy in order to get the work organized for the year.

A list of patrolmen and their duties and instructions will be given to each reeve. If any on the list are not such as you would approve as capable of carrying out their work we would ask for your co-operation in getting these appointments adjusted.

Since the council last met 38 miles of county roads have been made King's Highways, leaving 317 miles of county roads. As the expenditures on the county roads are made as per road number, not as per township, or village we purpose re-

DEPLORES SCHOOL ORDER

Rev. G. O. Fallis of the Canadian Memorial Church, Vancouver, whose remarks have added interest to the heated controversy throughout British Columbia concerning the recent order of Rev. Canon Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, calling for compulsory saluting of the Union Jack at a ceremony in all schools in British Columbia, each Monday. The edict is now in force.

numbering them before the distribution of the expenditures is made. The present numbers do not make a continuous road as several roads, sections have been taken off as King's Highways.

In the past years cheques have been issued in payment for the amount of his pay sheets with a duplicate sheet which is signed by the man receiving the cheque opposite his name. On the recommendation of the auditors a receipt will be given to each man. This will greatly increase the clerical work of the treasurer and superintendent, but as a better system as in the past year foremen or patrolmen were responsible for receiving much larger amounts than they did as they received the amount of the whole pay sheet, and sometimes unjust criticism was circulated throughout the country and in order to get the best possible results we require the co-operation of every member of the council and the ratepayers throughout the county. In 1931 over 65 per cent of the expenditures went into labor and we propose following the same procedure for 1932.

(Signed) Jas. A. Moore chairman, committee. R. M. Mitchell, W. A. Martin, J. A. Gunter, Ernest Brown.

Advocates More Work

Immediately after the reading, Mr. J. A. Gunter, reeve of Bancroft village, arose for permission to address the members before the report went to the clerk.

"I claim," stated Mr. Gunter, "that the contemplated expenditure as given by that report is not sufficiently large to cover the operations for the coming year. I have no congratulate this county, and the men who have been in council for the past few years for the excellent condition they have left the accounts in. We have only $125,-000 debentures on over an assessment of some $18,000,000, and I think that is pretty good. But we have carried our retrenchment a way too far, and I believe now, with the hard times the men in the country have really been up against it, that we think now is the time for a larger expenditure than ever. It will put more money in circulation and drive the workers from the South Postal station, as Bancroft broke through a fire wall.

"On the fire raged through a six-storey building at South and Beach streets, Fire Chief Henry Fox estimated the damage caused at $100,000 damage. Meanwhile, firemen struggled to confine the flames to the one building, which housed two large leather companies.

PETER VEREGIN MAKES FORTUNE

Accumulates $720,000 in Four Years in Canada

YORKETON, Sask., Jan. 29.—Peter Veregin, leader of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, was twice sentenced to death, served two years in Universal jails in Russia, and finally was released and escaped the death penalty on the understanding that he would leave the country for Canada, and since arrival here some four years has accumulated in the neighborhood of $720,000.

These revelations were made by Veregin's former leader himself while giving evidence at the preliminary hearing of charges of Chmtakoff, who appeared in court here yesterday before Police Magistrate A. McDonald charged with perjury.

greater expenditure and appropriation to carry on this road building than we have done in the past. Our money where it is most needed and we'll get the most for it. Possibly there will be others who wish to state their ideas on this question."

As it was quite late at this point it was decided by the chairman to hold this report over for further discussion later when more time could be given for the members to examine it, and consider the whole project, and on motion it was laid over until the afternoon session. The council then adjourned.

TAPPING HEARD AS SHIPS HUNT FOR SUBMARINE

Object Located May Be Sunken Craft Think Seamen

OIL ON SURFACE

Possibility of Saving Any Lives Almost Beyond Hope, However

PORTLAND, Eng., January 29.—The sunken submarine M-3 building three years ago within her steel hull, still rolled at the bottom of the English Channel last night and the British Admiralty announced that the possibility of saving any lives was "almost beyond hope."

Desperate efforts were being made, nevertheless, to reach an object 18 fathoms below the surface off Portsmouth which naval officials believe might be the ill-fated craft.

The battle against the choppy seas and strong tides was concentred on by the reception of "submarine signals" on the hydrophone of the destroyer Versatile and by a great patch of oil discovered by the destroyer Keppel.

Rescue workers were aware, however, that there was not a moment to be wasted. The official estimate of from 48 to 60 hours in which the crew of 60 men might live expired about 6.30 tonight, but naval officials refused to abandon hope. Admiralties it was believed they might be able to raise the craft.

A number of vessels clustered above the spot where the newest discovery and four great lifting cylinders, known to navy men as "camels" were being rushed to the scene. In case the submersible was located, the cylinders would be quickly attached that the object below is the case that craft efforts will begin to raise it.

Three ships were sent down during the afternoon and early evening. One failed to reach bottom but the second and third did and swept off their feet by a strong tidal current. They rode out the storm and they could see only a few feet of water below. Other divers were ready to take their places.

The discovery of the obstruction which aroused hopes that the vessel came as a consequence of information given by Chmtakoff, Communist of the coastal vessel Tynesider was brought from the French port Grave line to point out the spot where he attached a submarine dive stern Tuesday afternoon approximately the time the M-3 disappeared.

FIVE FIREMEN ARE INJURED

Fire in Wholesale Leather District of Boston Cost $400,000

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 29.—Five firemen were injured last night while fighting a four-alarm blaze which struck a block of wholesale and manufacturing buildings that threatened a large section of the wholesale leather district, halting streetcar traffic and driven 500 workers from the South Postal station, as flames broke through a fire wall.

On the fire raged through a six-storey building at South and Beach streets, Fire Chief Henry Fox estimated the damage caused at $100,000 damage. Meanwhile, firemen struggled to confine the flames to the one building, which housed two large leather companies.

House Building Report is Discussed by Councillors

Report Finally Adopted After Lengthy Debate By Members

COUNCIL RECORDS

Again the question of the adoption of the report of the special committee came up following the discussion of the road building proposals which was tentatively published, and evoked a lengthy and spirited discussion which at times mounted to almost controversial argument. Practically the remainder of the afternoon was given to the disposition of the motion urging its adoption which had been brought up by Mr. Ernest Brown, chairman of the building committee, when no guest spiritedly for a seconder. After some length Mr. C. W. Maller of Deseronto, stepped and seconded the motion and it was finally adopted by the specific vote of seven to Shire Hall on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. W. R. Gilroy of Sec. Hill brought up the question by asking for the report of the building committee, if ready. "Now is the opportune time to have it read, and discussed, if necessary. I'm not going to stir up any strife or cause hard feelings among the reeves but I think that some elucidation on this thing should be given the new members especially."

It appeared then that the report was not in the hands of all the members took the time to go to the county clerk's office to get a copy to the meeting.

This evoked a question from Mr. Mallory who asked the members in general if it were customary to spend such a large sum of money as the house cost which was built by Mr. Haggerty, without calling for a report read on it.

Warden Mitchell replied to the question by stating that no money had been spent by the county on any house.

"Do you hold that it wasn't the county's money that was spent?" asked Mr. George Arnott of Trenton. "I think that the whole building is linked up some way or other." Mr. Jas. Gunter, Bancroft, "Gentlemen, Mr. Haggerty didn't hesitate one moment to build that house. He trusted to the good faith and honor of the people this county to compensate him for the cost of house he built for the convenience of all the officials of this county. The house has made a whole lot of difference in the appearance of the whole street, and it has transformed the old lot that used to be there into a house now. I don't know why there should be so much fussing about the thing."

George Arnott: "I don't think we should side step this issue. There was a committee appointed; the report was drawn up. That report should be read to the council.

At this point the report which had been secured from the office of the county clerk was brought in by Mr. Ernest Brown, regarding the construction of the county house and county treasurer, Mr. Jas. Haggerty. The total cost—of $45000 was cited and the numerous alterations made inside the house after it had been built were also read off.

Question from one of the members: "Did Mr. Haggerty put his own money in financing the construction of the house, or did the county advance the money."

"Mr. Haggerty put his own money to build the house and complete the alterations which were made later. He was paid rent," replied Mr. Brown.

Mr. Mallory: "Did that money Mr. Haggerty pay out include his profit, or was that the rent of it?"

Mr. Brown: "Mr. Haggerty paid every cent of the cost."

Mr. Geo. Arnott: "I suppose that included the cost of the furnishings and everything?"

Mr. Brown: "Yes. We granted Mr Haggerty the right to build the house and the whole thing was done in good faith."

Mr. Mallory: "I'm not going to for it before it was built—now there seems to be a change of heart."

Mr Arnott: "I differ with you. I am asked constantly by ratepayers in this county and some of them I think need to know, and want to know these things, and it is up to every representative of the county to know what goes on. I am a reeve of Hawdon (Mr. Brown) happens to become annoyed over such simple questions that I want to ask, well that isn't my fault."

Mr. Brown: "I'm not mad! I'm not mad—not me."

Mr. Burke: "Let's keep our shirts on. I'm a new man and there's lots of things I don't understand about the whole thing. When did the idea of this building originally take shape—and who originated it. Anyhow I'd like to see all the facts of the thing before I vote for we all could find out about it?"

At this point county clerk W. J. Nugent read the minutes of the meeting which was held at the time authorization for the building of the house was given to Mr. Haggerty.

Mr. Gunter of Bancroft: "Gentlemen it isn't necessary to disrupt the meeting over such a thing as this. All these records have been kept in the office of the county clerk and if any of you at any time ever wanted to know anything about any of the stuff you had a perfect right to go there and ask Mr. Nugent to show you anything you wanted. Either the county treasurer or the county clerk could have given any of you any of this information you needed. So far this has held the meeting for considerably over two hours and arguments and counter argu-

They expect you to know all that goes on when they send you to the street sometime and ask you. But it was not necessary to come on the floor of this room and explain to the ratepayers here for you at any time you wanted it."

W. R. Gilroy of Coe Hill: "There seems to be a great deal of discussion regarding the legal finalities of this thing—of building this house. The majority ruled on this question. and they did it seems to me that's all right.

Mr. Mallory: "What I'd like to know is whether or not the committee's work is now finished?"

Mr. Brown, chairman of the committee: "I again open the question of this motion."

Mr. Burke: "Who put up the initial money for building this house?"

Mr. Arnott: "As far as legal liabilities are concerned if this thing happens to occur, the council will probably decide."

Mr. Gilroy: "As long as the cost of the house had stayed within reasonable bounds—but the house thing wasn't so bad, but when the ratepayers have to pay two or three prices for something then that looks a little different. The Warden and we don't have to pay 2 prices we say we do. Who knows? Does anyone know? Is it the council's duty to the rate payers know? A lot of depression is supposed to exist, money is also said to be scarce—Mr. Gault of Bancroft is going to kill a lot of this depression I see, from what's coming year but that isn't now—and yet expenses go on. There is some thing about the thing that seems to be clouding everybody."

Mr. Gunter: "The reeve of Sidney, Mr. Mallory, has been having a lot of fun with the reeves of Hastings County whose wife is also a member of Belleville hospital yesterday morning. The county clerk was instructed to carry, out the wishes of the council on this matter.

Native City Shanghai Occupied by Japanese Civilians are Killed

Chinese Battle Desperately on Edge of Settlement

PROTEST MADE

Foreign Concessions Under Arms, Watch With Anxiety

Shanghai, China, Jan. 29—Japanese invaders and Chinese defenders fought bitterly today in Shanghai.

Above them five Japanese aeroplanes whirred, dropping deadly bombs on the city's chaged district. Fire tore through the warren-like slums for a mile, then died down in rain-washed gloom.

British defense troops in the International Settlement skirmished with Chinese who broke through the defense lines into the Settlement from outside the western residential section, and drove the intruders out.

The Japanese occupation, begun at midnight, led the most menacing situation since the seizure of Mukden by Japanese soldiers last November and the spark in a new conflict between the Oriental powers.

In the International Settlement, where the greatest anxiety prevails, troops of three nations and volunteers stood by for defense. The United States Consul-General, Colwin B. Cunningham, expressed indignation at the Japanese attack.

Wu-Teh-Chen, Chinese Mayor, protested to foreign officials that the resort to force was "unwarranted and illegal." Inasmuch as the Chinese had made acceptable replies to demands for an end to anti-Japanese activities.

Call for Reinforcements

The battle alternated. The Chinese, forced from the important Nantao railway station soon after Japanese marines occupied the city Chapei, reorganized. In eight hours later as its Nipponese defenders were diminished by calls for reinforcements to other sections of the native city.

Shortly afterward the Chinese military headquarters fell to the Japanese marines.

The Japanese early in the day extended their way across the Whangpo River to Pootung, where Japanese cotton mills were declared to be in danger, and there was every indication they would continue to advance into Chinese territory.

A formidable fleet of twenty-four Japanese warships lay in the harbor that, ready for action, while others were anchored within striking distance.

It was almost impossible to determine the situation in Nantao because communications between the international settlement and the native quarter had been cut, save for the Japanese telephone lines that communication of detailed news could be heard immediately behind their advancing troops. The international settlement all was anxiety. The business community, at least that part concerned directly in defense, found itself unable to undertake the normal duties of the day, so great was the tension of events.

Chinese Break Through

The battle raging of the occupation took place at the very edge of the International Settlement. Chinese troops broke into the Settlement, threatening its security, but were driven out by British defense troops.

BIG YEAR FOR GOLD MINING

Minister of Mines States 1932 Best Year in History For Ontario

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 29.—Hon. Charles Mitchell, Ontario Minister of Mines, yesterday told the Empire Club he believed that 1932 would prove the brightest year in the history of the gold mining industry in this province.

Mr. McCrea, after reviewing the history of gold mining industry in Ontario, prophesied that returns from Gold production this year would reach a total of $50,000,000.

Ontario miners, he thought, would be the greatest contributors of the yellow metal as the output of the rest of the world declined steadily. Basing his figures on the visible world of supply of gold he said that by 1940 production will have dropped from the total last year's figure to $370,000,000.

Ten Timely Advertising Tips

A successful retailer who has spent the best part of his advertising appropriation in good newspaper copy gave ten points which he thought helped make a successful business man through advertising. The ten points:

1. I advertise regularly. Every issue of the paper takes my story to its readers.

2. I make every ad. look like mine. Years ago I started selecting style, and I have stuck to it. I use plenty of white space; my ads never hard to read.

3. I put into newspaper advertising a definite proportion of my gross sales which I fix in the beginning of the year. My rule is to make it three per cent. of the previous year's gross, with more if special conditions justify it.

4. I brighten my ads with frequent illustrations, but I make them appropriate. This costs me little, as the up-to-date newspapers supply these.

5. I am careful never to over-promise. Then, when I really have an unusual bargain, people believe me when I "whoop 'er up a little."

6. I think advertising all the time, I buy goods that will advertise well. Sometimes I buy goods just for their advertising value.

7. I get good display for my ads by seeing that the copy is in the newspaper office in plenty of time. I do this by having a definite hour to write the copy.

8. Whenever possible, I carry the nationally advertised goods that are advertised in my own home paper. I feature them. Sometimes they give me a smaller margin than fly-by-night concerns, but I find that I sell faster and make more money in the end, besides pleasing more customers.

9. I always plan my window and counter displays to link up with my newspaper advertising. Each helps the other.

10. My salespeople back up my advertising. They often help me with suggestions for it, and see to it that they always read it.

OLD ROMAN EMPIRE

Placing of the imperial robe upon the King of Italy is a gesture calculated to restore much of the glory of the once high sounding name, which disappeared however in 1806 when one named Napoleon broke up the old Holy Roman Empire. For eight centuries or more there had been a procession of German princes who claimed the title. When the German Empire was formed in 1871 the name of German Empire was used. The name Kaiser is a form of the old Roman title Caesar. The Austrian rulers renamed Kaisers until 1918.

The Mail and Empire says that the King of Italy, if he revives the old titles of the Holy Roman Empire, may be known as Caesar Imperator.

PETS MISS DEPRESSION

Cats and dogs which are owned in Belleville are fortunate in these times as compared with animals in very large cities. Depression has brought its woes upon pets and many deserted starving cats are reported to require to be done away with or treated in New York. Lots of cats and dogs which were abandoned or had to be allowed to go because of poverty outnumbered the dogs about twenty-five per cent.

The mild winter is providing protection for any "shorn" cats or dogs which might be desperate victims.

To the praise of Belleville people it may be said that they have not in their troubles forgotten the pets over which they were able to make so much fuss in ampler days.

TIME'S CIRCUMSTANCES

All speeders on the highways are not Russian princes who have fled from their country. But there is one ex-justice of the high court of Russia who is driving a taxi. His identity was brought out at Paterson, N. J., when he was fined before a police recorder on a speed charge. Then he revealed that under the Kerensky regime he had been a justice and had had to flee. His name is John Annissimoff, aged 45.

THE PREMIER'S CHOICE

The choice of former Premier Rhodes of Nova Scotia as Minister of Finance in the Ottawa Government will meet with general acceptance because of the confidence the people have in his native ability. Relinquishment of the post by Premier Bennett who said he would hand it over when an improvement was seen in the situation may accordingly, say some observers, be taken as a true indication that the prime minister believes that conditions are righting themselves.

The Government like every individual and like every corporation has been "put to it" to manage its affairs during the past two and a half years.

When improvement does make itself manifest a great task will rest upon the new minister of finance, for reconstruction takes no less brain than piloting the ship of finance through depression.

Reconstruction in this line will mean additional burdens upon the abilities of the minister because there is a general belief that the era of prosperity which is expected to follow will be marked by radical changes from that prosperity the sun of which set in the autumn of 1929. Things will not go on along the same old way, with certain matters like war preparations being just endured for the reconstruction will probably call for a showdown on this very important matter. The past two years have more must have taught the world something of the needs which are not so keenly felt and very clearly understood in days of prosperity as men and governments are less likely to discern movements.

Accordingly there will in all probability fall upon the Hon. Edgar H. Rhodes, many new burdens calling for solution. He is a statesman who has been tried and has had a long and varied experience in public life. The very fact of the choice of the premier falling upon him is proof that Premier Bennett looks upon him as worthy of the office.

HONOR TO FAIRY TALE MAKER

The fairy story is again crowned. Lewis Carroll (Rev. C. L. Dodgson) created in "Alice in Wonderland" a tale which has the promise of a long life. On Wednesday many celebrations of the 100th anniversary of Carroll's birthday were held and among them was a service "to thank God for imagination and laughter," held in Liverpool cathedral in honor of Carroll and Edward Lear, author of "Nonsense Books" and the reputed inventor of the limerick.

Carroll's manner of life was described at Christ Church, Oxford and the rooms where he lived were open to visitors. An exhibition of his books was in the library.

Best of all, the children who have been so delighted with the "Alice" story have profited much by reason of the rich and delightful imagination of the author. The head verger of Christ Church cathedral had a party for youngsters. He showed to the children on Wednesday the garden where Carroll used to sit and tell fairy tales to his young friends. Who would not have liked to be a child to hear a fairy story from the lips of its creator!

LAKE CONSECON IN WINTER

Where the waters sang a merry tune
'Neath the tranquil skies of the days of June,
Where all along the shadowed shore
Trees waved green flags the water o'er,
Where the rowers loitered 'neath the sunny sky
Watching the swallows dip and fly,
Where on the breast of the water blue
Diamonds sparkled the long day through—
Now nought but an icy plain is seen,
Fringed here and there by cedars green,
Or circled by the gaunt trees, gray,
That stand on guard in grim array,
And a dark network of shadows throw
O'er the level plane of ice and snow.

'Neath icy robes the waters sleep
Unmoved by the winds that above them sweep.
Content to rest till the voice of spring
Awakes them again to laugh and sing.
Resistless, too, to their winter fate
Serving the while they stand and wait—
For above is heard the skater's steel
As over the glare they whirl and wheel,
And the clink of hoofs as on they go
While bells ring out across the snow.

And so when comes life's winter time,
With Spring and Summer and Autumn's chime
Naught but a memory, and hearts are fain
To long for active life again,
May we, too, rest like the lake's calm flow
Beneath its fetters of ice and snow
And know as we near life's sunset gate
They also serve, who stand and wait."

Says she: "Beside the ordinary Sunnyside, Riverview and Hillcrest Inn there were Pull Inn, Drop Inn, Dew Drop Inn, Drive Inn, Shoot Inn, Wobble Inn, Stay Inn, Welcome Inn, Wee T. Inn, Blow inn, Slip Inn, Hot Dog inn, Stumble Inn, Waits Inn, and endless other Inns. In fact, the only Inns we didn't see, that I can think of, were Step-Inns." In that case the Inns will be out and the out will be inns.

POEMS WERE MADE by fools like me but only God can make a tree—wrote Joyce Kilmer, whose lifeblood helped to color the poppies in Flanders Fields. But only a poet could see the tree as it is, living, breathing, an animate, intimate creature, one of the greatest masterpieces of the Greatest Master, the Creator of all things. Only a poet can see the beauties of nature in all their splendor, the seas, the fields, the mountains, valleys and streams, the forests and the living things which therein live, the infinite variety of life, the variety of humanity and the beauties of character, drawing a curtain of charity over the rest. Because we may not all be able to write poetry but we can all develop poetic natures by opening our eyes to the finer things of life which are too often obscured by the petty, meaner things which are but for the moment and are not part of the finer, better picture as created by the Master Painter, just the odds and ends of potter and paint which are not part of the picture at all.

SYMBOLS

Beautiful words, like butterflies,
Blow by,
With what swift colors on their fragile wings!
Some that are less articulate than air sigh,
Some that were names of ancient lovely things:
What delicate careerings of escape,
When they would pass beyond the baffled reach,
To leave a haunting shadow and a taste,
Eluding still the careful traps of speech:
And I, who watch and listen, lie in wait,
Seeing the cloudy cavalcade blow past,
Happy if some bright vagrant, soon or late,
May venture near the snares of sound at last—
Most fortunate captor if, from time to time,
One may be taken, trembling in rhyme.

LIFE INSURANCE

In the ese of Canadian life insurance companies, there has been a decrease of possibly 12 per cent in new business, thought it is estimated that approximately $777,000,000 of new business was paid for during the first eight months, which has been a real test, proving the inherent strength of the companies. In spite of adverse conditions some companies have already announced dividend scales equal to those of former years. In 1930, according to a statement made by Mr. M. W. Jackson, editor of Canadian Insurance ledger assets of the Canadian companies increased almost $85,000,000, and it is anticipated that 1931 will show a still larger expansion. There has, however been a substantial increase in policy loans with about a third of the money borrowed repaid in cash, a comparatively larger proportion having been repaid through surrender or maturity of policies and a smaller proportion by death claims. The money which continues on loan is used by insurance companies' coffers requires careful investigation as to its ultimate security, on the other hand, opportunities for great future profits were never better, and it is certain that he experienced directors in charge are in a far better position to safeguard funds entrusted to their care than the average policy holder would be if left to his own unguided judgement. It is distinctly satisfactory that Canadian life insurance is able to give such a good account of itself. The splendid features also such as would be expected—the policy loans, the lapses and increased suicide claims. "Considering all factors," Mr. Jackson is able to report, "the companies operating in the Dominion have emerged from a difficult year in good shape, business unimpaired.—Hamilton Spectator.

SUBMARINE TRAGEDY

Another British submarine lies at the bottom of the English Channel, and all Britain waits for the outcome of the rescue attempt. If the crew by some near-miracle, is snatched from their deaths, the officers and men will go about their business without fuss or ado. But if the rescue expeditions fail, the honor roll of the Royal Navy will add some fifty-four more names to the old list.

The tragic accident will, almost inevitably, intensify British deliberations to induce the nations of the world to abolish submarines entirely. Britain has repeatedly attempted to do so. One by one the nations come to see that such a proposal is sane and unthinkable. The United States, which formerly opposed the British suggestion with some vigor, is now frankly ready to abolish them, and Italy however still block the path.

The submarine is essentially an assassin's weapon. It is of little use except against surface warcraft, with means to protect itself. Its deadly effect is against merchant vessels—the wanton sinking of which is legal under every code of civilized international law.

If the nations of the world are serious in their desire to cut expenses and to armament without sacrificing any security, they cannot do better than to agree to scrap every submarine.

But will Russia do so? Will France? Will Italy?

THE DOMINION BANK'S SIXTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS

Profits Only Slightly Lower Than 1930

DEPOSITS WELL MAINTAINED

Percentage of Immediately Available Assets to Public Liabilities Higher Than in Previous Year.

The 61st Annual Statement of The Dominion Bank which was presented to the Shareholders at the annual meeting held in Toronto Wednesday the 27th instant, shows the Bank in a very strong position, with earnings well maintained during 1931.

Net profits for the year showed only a very slight reduction compared with 1930. They amount to $1,322,287, and are 18.82% of the Paid Up Capital. After distributing $846,000. in dividends to Shareholders, providing $211,297. for taxation, a contribution to Officers Pension Fund of $50,000. and a provision for depreciation of securities of $200,000., the Bank carried forward in Profit and Loss account $465,209., or $21,000. greater than was brought forward a year ago.

Deposits have been exceptionally well maintained, and are the total $103,449,095., compared with $107,452,000. in 1931, a reduction of less than 2%. Deposits not bearing interest are $20,172,773. and Deposits bearing interest, $83,276,322.

The very strong liquid position of The Dominion Bank is an outstanding feature of the Statement. Immediately available Assets at $21,311,000. are over 54% of Public Liabilities.

The Bank's total investments are $26,353,000., an increase of nearly $2,000,000. over the total holdings $23,591,000. consist of Dominion and Provincial Government and Municipal Securities.

Naturally the reduced volume of general business during 1931 resulted in a reduction in Current Loans. The Statement shows figures under this heading however, of $57,035,000., the total of which is under those of the previous twelve months.

The Paid Up Capital of the Bank is $7,000,000., the Rest Account $7,000,000. and Undivided Profits $9,465,309.

MAKE-UP IN LOCAL TEAM

Coach Holway Will Likely Don Uniform For Game

Ice-maker Bruce Martin has promised the local intermediates a per-fect sheet of ice for tonight's game with the R.M.C. Cadets. New lines have been mapped into the ice and as this game is for second place the league standings it is expected that one of the fastest games of the season will be witnessed. The fans who missed Wednesday night's tilt are still kicking themselves as plenty of action was witnessed throughout the sixty minutes of play. As a matter of fact most anything imaginable was seen except scientific combination. The boys did not play this rough and tumble style of hockey but depend on their speed and ability to bodycheck the opposing forwards when they try to barge their way through.

Coach Holway may shake his team up a bit after the showing of some of his players last Wednesday night. At any rate the locals have two in this battle or pass out of the picture. As there has only been one game in the Big Six loop when the winning team has scored two goals more than the losers it is a safe bet to say that this game are worth seeing. Reports have been sent hooley to the effect that the head of hockey is faster in the local intermediate loop than in any other league in Canada, Canadian service.

All the Cadets are out to win their remaining games this game should prove a full house as they always lay good hockey in Belleville. Bob Armstrong of Toronto will be appointed referee for the game and the starting time will be double 7:30. Jackson, Goal, White or Bigger; defence, Irvin and Kennedy; centre, Carey; rover, Hollway; forward; subs, Gagnon, Corbett, Rainford, Gosling-Kelly. Belleville: Goal, Tice; defence, Holway and Martin; centre, Hollway; rover, Bruce Scott, Morgan, Campbell, Hull, Mills, Orr, McKevitt, Martin and Dennis. Coach Holway will make up his front line a bit and he may not continue the starting positions this morning as he will sit and see how they look in practice before the game.

She previously had strayed from home and been missing for several weeks at a time before being located.

By The Observer

Bowmor Holway announced last night that he would don the uniform for tonight's game. The locals looked for anything but good, defensively, on Wednesday night. The boys as a whole were a decided flop in their defensive work, with the exception of Tice who played his usual steady game. Alex. Watt excelled himself on the offensive.

After deliberating over the condition of the locals at the present time for a matter of 24 hours, we have come to one single conclusion. We are satisfied that they are STALE. We have listened to many excuses, but after looking back we now notice that the locals have been slipping for the past week or two and reached their climax on Wednesday night.

We are not trying to allit for the poor showing of the locals, but we are of the honest opinion that the locals have gone stale. Why? Well it is well known fact that they have practised, practically every night since November 15th, 1931. No team can continually practise, play games, and not become leavery or stale, as you may term it.

The locals have not given up by any means as they are of the opinion that one night's, or, but some other team will take a fall out of the locals before the Queen's team. We trail along with them and will watch with interest the Canadiens-Queen's game on Friday night. In the meantime, however, the locals are preparing to try and take a fall out of the fast-coming R.M.C. team tonight. As the Cadets already have a win-loss of the game plenty of action the locals should be filled to capacity tonight.

No what the O.H.A. have in-

Now that the O.H.A. have licroop intermediate series decided on or before February 15th local junior groups will have a big rumble on them if they intend competing for the group title. As the Junior Group No. 1 is divided into two sections they will have to get busy and decide and declare a winner in each section before they can be put up for between these sections and that will take at least a week.

The T's Men's basketball team had their final workout on the large floor in the Armouries last night. Coach Marden feels that the locals have a very good chance to cop the city basketball "basketeers" in Kingston tonight. You will remember the trip besides Coach Marden and a few supporters. Captain Vic White will lead Darleon, Mofie, Gardner, Mallett, Carpenter, V. Weir and Smith onto the floor tonight.

The locals will play the first half of a doubleheader with Queen's Intermediates meet at the Armouries tonight in a senior intercollegiate fixture and the locals are out to spoil the Queen's aspirers. If the locals can play this game they will be all-ing "on top of the world" with three wins and no losses to their credit.

The "Arena Rats," a hockey team composed of the boys who work at the Arena, have issued a challenge to meet any team in the city, junior or senior. Anytime, anywhere or anything conditions. (No bulls barred.)

Another world's champion has relinquished his title when Bat Battalino failed to make a proper weight for his bout with Freddie Miller here Wednesday night, the other night. The feather-weight title is now vacant and whether the N.B.C. will name a new title-holder or stage an elimination series is the question which all fight fans are interested in at present.

We see where Connie Mack's plans to release Wallie Hoyt and give Eddie Rommel a coaching job this year, both are veterans. Just six years ago Mack released Heward Ehmke and Jack Quinn, veteran pitchers. Quinn, however, has been a leader and pitched excellent ball for the Brooklyn in the National League. Jack Quinn is the oldest player in point of service, in the major leagues. Quinn has been in the majors over 21 years.

BRUINS' FIRST WIN IN ELEVEN

Defeat Rangers in New York 4 to 1. Falcons Trounce Hawks

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 29 (CP) —After negotiating the Canadiens' game without recording a single victory, Boston Bruins finally stumbled into the win column for the first time this year when they stepped into New York last night and handed the pace setting Rangers a 4-1 reverse.

Bruins' triumph, however, was not thesonly surprise of the evening as Detroit and Montreal both upset the dope by defeating Chicago and wing Canadiens, respectively.

Detroit patrons were treated to the roughest game of the season when they saw their up-and-climbing Falcons trounce Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 in a wild and exciting game featured by a match penalty, a misconduct, a major and 16 other penalties along with some fist fights and a protested goal.

JACKIE FIELDS REGAINS TITLE

Defeats Lou Brouillard in Ten Rounds at Chicago

(By William Weeks)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 29—Jackie Fields has again caught up with the welterweight championship of the world, after letting it slip from his grasp.

The Los Angeles fighter last night regained the title from the lips of from Joe Dundee in 1929, by winning the decision in ten rounds over Lou Brouillard, young Worcester, Mass., pugilist.

Brouillard's tenure of office was brief, just about three months having passed since he punched the crown from the head of Young Jack Thompson, Oakland, Calif., ace.

It was the first time since he lost the title to Thompson, in December, 1930, that Fields had made the welterweight limit, in excellent condition brought him victory. He outlasted the Worcester French-Canadian after the third round and from the sixth on, outslugged him as well.

LONDON TECS MOVE UP THIRD

Defeat Cleveland 4 to 0 While Windsor and Buffalo Lose

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 29 (CP) — London Tecumsehs were the only first division club to emerge victorious from a day of games played in the International Hockey league last night.

While the Tecs were shutting out Cleveland at London, Buffalo and first division entrants, Windsor and Oshawa dropped decisions to Syracuse and Pittsburgh respectively and as a result the London entry moved into third place in the group race two points in the van of Windsor.

CAT GOES OUT IN A BLAZE

Burned to Charcoal Trying to Walk Hydro Line

PARIS, Ont., Jan. 29.—(By the Canadian Press)—A blaze of glory marked the demise of an unidentified cat here, and it was unidentified because it had been burned almost to the consistency of charcoal when it aspired to travel along high tension wires as a form of anti-hasten. But the cat had the distinction of perishing in impressive manner, for a crackling shower of blue flame into the sky that was visible here and in nearby centres of Paris, Princeton, and Drumbo. It also put the lights out here.

HAROLD "DISCARDS HANKY"

There was a time, when he toiled with the luckless Pittsburg Pirates now just a memory, that Harold Cotton gaily flaunted a kerchief about his neck, wild western fashion. Now Harold has grown up and looks like a major hockey player in his present job of sharing right wing chores on the fast-stepping Toronto Maple Leafs with Charlie Conacher and Frank Finnigan. The kerchief is a thing of the past, Perhaps it might be a good thing if he put it back for a spell. For, curiously enough, without that handkerchief, which sometimes was accompanied by the wearing of a bobbed cap, he has been almost helpless this season in the goal getting line. He went through the first half of the schedule with exactly two goals, Last year he finished the season a bang-up fifth in point honors of the Canadian section of the N.H.L., and Conacher and Primeau know, is a son of one of the best known of Anglican priests in the Queen city. You would never guess it from his belligerent, hard-checking methods on the ice. But he is PICTON, Jan. 29.—(Special)—The firemen were called out at an early hour this morning to the Bolton burn boat house at the harbour where a fine motor boat owned by Mr. Bert Bolton, was reduced to the High Shore, was found to be on fire. Only one grant will be made at this session and that to the flood Association, amounting to $50 it was decided. A temporary reduction was made in the salary of P. B. Dunkley, Road Superintendent, of $500. His salary is now $2500. Formerly there had been a $100 grant to Canadian Forestry at the House of Refuge. This was entirely wiped out. The salary of the late Gordon Walmsley was cut $50 and that of the keeper of the Old Peoples' Home, was cut $125. There was much discussion regarding the cuts and all councillors were allowed to state their views. The Council continues its session today.

BAT BATTALINO FINED $5,000

Indefinite Retirement is Due to "No Contest" Bout

Cincinnati, Jan. 29.—Christopher (Bat) Battalino, former world champion featherweight boxer, today a $5000 fine and go into indefinite retirement because of his "no contest" fight Friday with middle Billy Petrolle.

The Cincinnati boxing commission suspended him indefinitely after a hearing yesterday and decreed his fine would be used to pay all expenses of the Wednesday night match, billed as a title affair. Miller was given a clean record, but no claim to the title which was declared vacant.

Out of Bat's fine, the 2,015 cash customers will be reimbursed, Miller will get $225 for training expenses, Jack Doyle will receive $1,000 for promotional expenditures and any other outlay incurred by Doyle also will be paid. If anything remains it is to go to charity, the commission ruled.

In addition, the erstwhile champion lost his $1,000 forfeit posted as a guarantee to make the featherweight limit of 126 pounds. That also is to go to charity.

Petrolle of Canton, fighter told the commissioners his poor exhibition was caused by his strenuous effort to take off fourteen pounds for the bout.

MANHATTAN PARADE"
GALA LAUGH SHOW

Grand and glorious entertainment awaits you now at the Belle Theatre when "Manhattan Parade" with Hollywood's million dollar all-talking, singing and dancing, Winsome Lightner, Charles Butterworth, Smith and Dale and a whole hundred of Hollywood's most beautiful girls appear in what is undoubtedly the gala and funniest comedy since "Gold Diggers of Broadway."

"Manhattan Parade" is a gorgeous vehicle for color treatment. Across all the glitter and rainbow splendour of theatrical costumes, the beauty of a host of girls, the jaunts and loose of furnishings, the tides of elephants and the feathers of ostriches—for all these things are included in the head-batter sequences of the production—are shown just as one would see them with Mack Sennett.

Winnie plays the role of manager of a theatrical costuming company, has troubles galore with an ex-husband, a flirting business, balking customers, elephants, ostriches, a mad man who poses as a genius—and with Charles Butterworth, who, though free with his gems and creative advice is none too dependable. Smith and Dale, remembered for their joint clowning as members of the Avon Comedy Four, are off on a new footing now, and funnier than they have ever been.

Dickie Moore is as adorable as he was in "Sooky." There are many bodies, among whom are Walter Catlett, Irene Granstedt, Bobby Watson, Lois Alberni, Charles Middleton and Claire Dodd.

A funny little comedy titled "Torchy Turns the Trick," a clever Silly Symphony "Barbershop Melody Duckling", the popular Bells News Reel, and the adventurous Pete "The Vanishing Legion," are announced for addition with the above feature attraction.

At The Capitol

INTELLIGENT PLOT
IN MYSTERY FILM

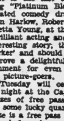
A mystery with the most unusual and baffling circumstances ever introduced on the screen of the Capitol Theatre, where "The Secret Witness" opens a three day run on Saturday.

It is unique for novelty of subject matter and treatment and it is superbly acted by a cast of clever performers.

A neglected wife, who wants a divorce—an antagonizing bodyguard, who has been threatened—a brother fighting for his sister's honor—a best friend, who is secretly in love with the wife of another man who could handle a gun—Anyone of these might have killed Herbert Folsom in his beautiful penthouse apartment.

When police Captain McGowan starts his investigation, certain developments lead him to suspect the loyal brother above everyone else. All suspects are dismissed but this one. But Lola Martin, into whose intelligent brother had endeared after he had discovered Folsom's death, believes in this clear-eyed, attractive boy. She is not satisfied that the right man has been arrested. She steals down to the basement of the engineer, who had been formerly employed during the investigation. She has just made an interesting discovery when some unseen person grabs her by the throat—She escapes from his grasp and follows up a clue that leads her to "Big Moon" Jones—But she proves the innocence of the young boy—finds the "secret witness" and unmasks the murderer.

Una Merkel, as Lola Martin, contributes a delightful performance. She has a captivating charm and an appealing and natural style of acting. The brother role is played by William Collier, Jr., who, as usual, gives an intent and sincere portrayal. The inimitable Zasu Pitts contributes a masterful bit of comedy performances as the busy telephone operator at the apartment house. Ralf Harolde, June Clyde, Ella La Roy and Greta Granstedt are others in the cast.



Next Thursday will present the delightful comedy drama, "Strictly Dishonorable," with Elissa Landi and Lorretta Young, at the Capitol, with Paul Lukas in the leading dialogue, and interesting story, this picture is a "corker" and should prove certainly prove a delightful evening's entertainment and even the most blase of picture-goers.

Next Thursday will certainly be a night at the Capitol when four prizes of free passes will be given to some lucky quarterites. The first prize is a free pass for a year, second for nine months, the third for six months and the fourth for three months.

The drawing for these valuable and indeed coveted prizes, will be at 9 o'clock.

Queen's University Contingent Canadian Officers' Training Corps was "at home" last evening and received an unusually large number of guests in the gymnasium, which was tastefully transformed for the occasion into a most realistic section of war-time France. A smartly uniformed bugler announced each detail and the old familiar "cook-house" call was the signal for the dancers to go to supper, which was arranged at long tables, beautifully decorated with pale yellow and red tulips. At the "estaminet" punch was served, and from a decorated "dug-out" pet, surmounted on either side by Lewis guns, a twelve piece orchestra dispensed a splendid program of dance music. Flags of all nations were suspended from the ceiling and scotly shaded lights provided a perfect setting for this unusually attractive dance. The committee which worked so unstintingly included Lieut.-Col. P. G. O. Campbell (convener), Alan B. Sprague, L. J. Roy, A. W. Grimmon, J. E. Baker, and J. M. Christie. Among the guests present were Miss Margaret Chant and Miss Barbara Holton, Belleville.

GUIDES ARE BUSY

Belleville Girl Guides, after a particularly busy season, just before Christmas, are hard at work these days practising for a demonstration at their work. The spirit of helpfulness, which is the keynote of all Guide activities, was never so apparent as during the Yuletide season. The programme they had planned for the Christmas party this year was an arduous one for only fifty-seven girls.

The Guides provided eight families for Christmas and not only was each household presented with food for a menu that was fit for a king, but the little ones were remembered with toys, stockings and nightdresses. Eight-year yards of flannelette were used in Guide work. Whenever two or three guides were collected together, needle, pins and scissors cutting cloth for nightgowns for babies, and for the old ladies at the Home for the Aged, pinafore for the girls and men and the whir of the sewing machine rose above the chatter as busy fingers flew to finish the last bit before Christmas day. Twenty-nine pairs of stockings were purchased for boys and girls of the families that the Guides cared for, and the girls themselves delivered the baskets and gifts.

From sewing the Guides have turned to baking and just at present they are preparing all sorts of culinary delicacies for the cooking sale that they hope will replenish their funds, that were almost exhausted by their Christmas work.

Rich Recluse Lives in Past Despite Recovery

Lives Frugally, Refusing to Eat if Food Cost is High

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The twilight of Eric Hudson's life is a strange glow for Mrs. Ida E. Wood, the 92-year-old eccentric who has declared she was found living alone in memories—and $750,000 in cash.

The night-shadows of the days when she was declared incompetent and placed in the guardianship of a nephew is being dissipated by kindness and care. A new routine is displacing her quarter-century-old habits of defiant isolation. Friends are attempting the gradual translation of her dimmed mind from a misery-devoid old lavender and old lace to the twentieth century.

Mrs. Wood is beginning to realize that her fortune is intact and that she can buy anything she wants (except too many cigars), and that no one wishes her harm. She is becoming conscious of the existence of the brisk nurses and the visits of Dr. Percy Fry, Gazetteer. Although she still dons her ancient finery and uses needles to replace glare at unfamiliar visitors, it may be that she secretly enjoys being the center of such attentions.

Was a Great Belle

Mrs. Wood was a great belle in her day, and she has lost little of the imperious manner, but she still lives almost wholly in the past. She never has seen a movie, heard a radio, or ridden in an automobile.

But she will remember her social triumphs at the New Year's Eve parties she gave, the presidential inaugural balls, the time she waltzed with Edward VII when he was the Prince of Wales.

Her late husband, Benjamin Wood, died in 1900 she had become a rich woman. But she was terror-stricken by the panic of 1907, liquidated everything she owned, and went into voluntary exile.

Strange Seclusion Broken

Last autumn she was discovered in two amazingly littered rooms in the old Hotel Royal Square. Only Wood, her nephew, was made her guardian. Three-quarters of a million dollars in large bills were found on her person. Almost a score of jewels were appraised at hundreds of thousands. A $100,000 gold bathtub was found in the room under the bath tub. Forty trunks revealed more gold, jewels with 14-inch waists which were museum pieces themselves, Chinese and Japanese relics, daguerreotypes, 500 yards of twine and about a barrel of soap collected from hotels in many cities.

She had saved everything, spent almost nothing, since adopting her life of seclusion.

Her one great, haunting fear was poverty. She had lived on canned beans, boiled eggs and tea—prepared by herself over a gas plate in her apartment.

Mrs. Wood resented to the point of violence the intrusion of doctors and lawyers. "All I want," she said "is to be let alone."

So far as was consistent with her physical welfare, her wish was satisfied. But now she is learning even the pleasure of companionship. She does not understand the contemporary celebrities of her youth are dead, and wonders why more of the old friends won't drop in for visits. She makes sometimes of driving up Fifth avenue again in her carriage. Dr. Carrington has promised that next May, if her health continues to improve.

Like a Shampoose, Manicures

A weekly shampoo and daily manicures are her present delight. Since night and day are one to her nearly-blind old eyes, she often sits at her window until 1 or 4 o'clock in the morning, arranging her wraps and jewels in preparation for an imaginary ball. Sometimes she calls for a favorite gown—remembering perfectly in which trunk it will be found—and attempts to see on it, holding the material a couple of inches before her eyes.

"All my aunt's faculties have lessened under proper diet and care," said Otis Wood. "Even her sight and hearing are noticeably better. She walks without a cane, and although we haven't been able to get her on a scale, we are sure she is gaining in weight.

"But she is still like a wilful child, and sometimes has tantrums. We try to avoid all points of control, but every time a nurse puts a tray of food before her she demands to know how much it cost. At first if the amount was more than a dollar, she refused to eat, so the doctor instructed the nurse always to name a low figure.

"But my aunt was canny. Now she demands to see the food receipts and the nurse has to put cashiers' slips—not always accurate ones—with them.

Bank Books and Lloyd

She still cherishes a little gray bag, made for her by her mother, in which she kept $400,000 in cash until the courts intervened and placed that and another $350,000, in a bank. The bag now contains a much-thumbed bank book. In which she constantly refers, and a number of bills which she uses for her small needs.

At all times of the day and night she still rings for Lloyd, negro bellboy who for years shopped for her frugal groceries. She tips him, though never lavishly, and asks for two stock questions: "Lloyd, what's the weather today? "Lloyd, what's the time?"

Dr. Garretson found her smoking cigars, "with evidence of real enjoyment." Also he first attended her. But Mrs. Wood has a cardiac heart, as he's being very strict with her about those little black stogies.

Sometimes she peers at an old album in which are included pictures of Lincoln, Mrs. Stephen A. Douglas, and Mrs. Jefferson Davis. In her Bible, dated 1750, she has other mementoes — a pressed flower, a lacy valentine with the sandwiches of the 60's, an invitation to President Harrison's inaugural ball.

But mostly she just sits, silent and apparently content—a brooding, tiny gray ghost of a city that is dead.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 29.—(By The Canadian Press)—Deploring the women's page editor says:

"Two cases in hospital management might well be corrected. In the first place a correspondent says it is the habit of rousing patients from, possibly, the first real sleep they have had for days and nights, in order that they may be washed and fed, and that everything may be spick and span when the doctor makes his morning visit. In the sense of the medical profession lauding sleep and its curative power this is a mistake. There are more cases than dominion, persist in robbing those who are striving for a restful hour from the long night of wakefulness? The second objection raised is the lack of judgment shown in the administration of food. Three meals, and none of them light, are all-too common, and indigestion, sickness and discomfort all trouble in itself, is either induced or aggravated. Little more attention to the expenditure on food would make a great difference in the cost of hospital upkeep, and for this good housekeepers, who have seen the inside workings of the hospitals, will cordially agree. Waste in the kitchen is one of the commonest and municipal departments, would be eliminated very largely if the practical woman, accustomed to housekeeping her own house thriftily, were to have a voice in expenditures."

The regular monthly meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the residence of Mrs. Sager 13th., with the President, Mrs. Howard Dafoe in the chair.

Meeting opened with Hymn 79, "The Whole World was Lost." Scripture "Darkness of Sin", followed by prayer from the leaflet, and the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The Scripture lesson was taken from Luke 9: 1 3; Luke 10: 33-37; Luke 18: 9-14, and was read by Mrs. H. W. Rose.

The roll showed twelve members present and four visitors.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The Temperance question was then taken up, the meeting in charge being held at Mrs. Howard Dafoe. Mrs. George Sager read a paper by Mr. M. B. Sire to different secretaries then reported on their work, followed by the Watch Tower report. Hymn 62 "Footsteps of Jesus," Shout, Shout the Sound" was then sung.

Mrs. Howard Dafoe then led in a discussion and talk from the Missionary Aim on Africa and Trinidad. A reading entitled "Africa's Redeemed ary Mark" was read by Mrs. J. A. Lott. Collection was then taken Hymn 359 "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" was sung. Mrs. (Rev.) E. B. Sexsmith closed with prayer.

IS PROPOSAL "CHAMPION"

London Mannequin Has Received Requests in Thousands

A wheat grower in Winnipeg sent a proposal of marriage to Gloria, England's most famous mannequin. This proposal was one of many received by this young lady, who had a photograph and 10,000 times sent came from all parts of the British Empire.

During the past five years she has worn 80,000 different frocks and costumes. Yet she makes most of her own dresses at home.

For the last three years she has had more than 1,000 proposals of marriage.

Nearly everybody in England knows Gloria by sight, but few people know her apart from business and still fewer know her real name. She is just Gloria.

During a comparatively brief career as a mannequin Gloria has set up many records. Here are some of them:

She is the only English girl who flies regularly to Paris to display French frocks and hats for French manufacturers and fashion houses.

She has been insured for £20,000 specially timed to avail the arrival of Gloria in Paris.

She is the most photographed girl in the country. Her figure has age and moving picture actresses.

Her picture has appeared in more publications than any other girl in the world.

Her pictures has appeared in some papers or magazine every day every week, every month, every year for the past five years.

She is the favorite with the London Sunday Express, she said, "I am just Gloria, even the people I work for know no other name. They have always kept my private life apart from my business life and studiously avoid my name."

Gloria's mama was persuaded to tell some of her secrets. She is a Yorkshire lass, but came to London five years ago to take up a career as a mannequin.

She is domesticated, and has no time for dancing, theatres or the cinema. She sews, cooks and keeps from her own designs.

Gloria's beauty secret voted the most popular girl on the staff of one of London's largest department stores. And the voters were all women!

The Beauty Box

When a chin first shows signs of living a double life, that's the time to get after it. It is no stay in a state of single blessedness. Massaging every night with a heavy lubricating cream will keep the flesh between thumb and first finger, rolling the tissues firmly. The idea is to knock dead the little fat cells that are collecting—the cream is supplemented by laying over it a hot towel. Wring out a clean towel that has been wrung out in hot water, and let it remain until the flesh is glowing, then repeat. Laving with witch hazel or any good astringent is the final flourish.

Delay in toddling to the dentist's chair also is a pain, a misuse and a worry. Inspection of the teeth every six months, together with a scouring away of tartar and prying up of small cavities wards off the pain that would prove troublesome. When cleaning the teeth, sweep the bits of food from the teeth between them. Work away from the gums with a rolling motion of the brush. Never fail on the bedtime brushing. That's when teeth need it most.

Careless shampooing has a deplorable effect upon naturally curly hair. The curl comes in shafts a deposit of soap scum which interferes with the circulation of moisture that sends curly hair into pretty waves. Hard water makes soap is more easily removed than lather made by soft water. The oil of soap over the lye makes the soap cleanse the skin; but hygienic habits are the foundation and ultimate success of beauty.

Select a hairbrush with bristles placed in groups. It gets to the scalp, frictions it, and is easily kept clean.

Lord and Lady Byng To Re-visit Canada

LONDON, Jan. 29.—(By The Canadian Press)—Lord Byng, former governor-general of Canada, and Lady Byng are spending the winter in Jamaica and the West Indian Islands, and in the coming spring will honor Canada with a visit. They plan to arrive in Vancouver, coming via the Panama route, and will cross Canada to Halifax, with a few stops in the principal cities. It is planned that Lord Byng will attend the Vimy Ridge anniversary dinner in Ottawa on April 9. Inasmuch as former governors-general returning to visit Canada have been rather rare, and friends of Lord and Lady Byng are looking forward with much pleasure to their coming.

An Unexpe cted Meeting

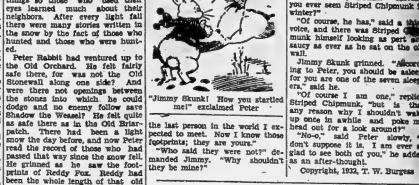
By Thornton W. Burgess

Of knowledge gain each day a bit,
And miss no chance to add to it.
—Old Mother Nature.

The snow that covered the Green Meadows, the Old Pasture and the Green Forest kept many secrets and at the same time told many things so those who used their eyes learned much about their neighbors. After every light fall there were many stories written in the snow by the fact of those who hunted and those who were hunted.

Peter Rabbit had ventured up to the Old Orchard. He felt fairly safe there, for was not the Old Stonewall along one side? And were there not openings between the stones into which he could dodge and no enemy follow save Shadow the Weasel? He felt quite as safe there as in the Old Briarpatch. There had been a light snow the day before, and now Peter read the record of those who had passed that way since the storm. He grinned as he saw the footprints of Reddy Fox. Reddy had been the whole length of that old wall on both sides and twice had crossed from one side to the other. He saw the round prints of Black Shadow the Bear.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel had run along the top of the wall. His tracks showed that. Even Grey Squirrel, had sat on a big stone at the end and nearest Farmer Brown's house. But whose footprints were these? Peter sat still and stared at them. They seemed strangely familiar, yet he couldn't think of whose they were. He had passed daily in winter who could have made them. He searched a long ear with a long hindfoot, a way that has of doing when he is puzzled.



"I ought to know those prints," he muttered. "Yes, sir, I ought to know them."

"If you don't, it must be that you are getting old and forgetful," said a voice that startled Peter, so that he jumped and ran a few feet.

"What are you afraid of?" demanded the voice.

Then Peter saw the speaker or at least saw his head, a black-and-white head with a rather pleasant face. It was at one of the largest holes between the stones of the old wall.

"Jimmy Skunk! How you startled me!" exclaimed Peter. "You are

"Jimmy Skunk! How you startled me!" exclaimed Peter the last person in the world I expected to meet. Now I know those footprints; they are yours."

"Who said they were not?" demanded Jimmy. "Why shouldn't they be mine?"

"But you are asleep. I mean you are supposed to be asleep," stammered Peter.

"Why, of course not," replied Jimmy drily.

"But—but—but what!" demanded Jimmy.

"I thought you were one of the seven sleepers; you know—the one who was said to keep all winter," replied Peter.

"I am one of the seven sleepers," replied Jimmy.

"Then why aren't you asleep now?" demanded Peter.

"Because I wanted to have a look around," replied Jimmy. "Is there any rule against that?"

Peter grinned. "Not that I know of," said he. "But I thought the seven sleepers slept all the time until spring."

"Which shows how little you really know about your neighbors," retorted Jimmy Skunk. "Haven't you ever seen Striped Chipmunk in winter?"

"Of course, he has," said a little voice, and there was Striped Chipmunk himself looking as pert as saucy as ever as he sat on the old wall.

Jimmy Skunk grinned. "Absorbing to Peter, you should be asleep for you are one of the seven sleepers," said he.

"Of course I am one," replied Striped Chipmunk, "but is the seven sleepers who shouldn't wake up one is awhile and poke my nose out for a look around?"

"No-o," said Peter slowly, "I don't suppose I am, and I am glad to see both of you." he added as an after-thought.

FINANCIAL NEWS

PRICES DRIFT TO NEW LOW

Close to January Lows But Firms Up at Midday

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

(Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, Jan. 29.—Selling quickened moderately for a time in today's stock market, and prices drifted close to the early January lows, but the liquidation abated somewhat after midday.

The developments in the far eastern situation added a new element of uncertainty, although important financial quarters expressed confidence in the handling of the matter. Business and industrial reports again were unin spiring. Nevertheless, there was a slight recovered in spots, in the early afternoon.

Rails were decidedly heavy, as the wage conference dragged on. Losses of 2 to 5 points appeared in such issues as Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, New Haven, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and others. Other issues registering similar losses included Consolidated Gas, American Telephone, Public Service of N. J., Eastman, Coca Cola and others. Bethlehem Steel preferred dropped 3 points, and the common more than a point, the extra dividend and earnings news. U. S. Steel also lost more than a point. General Motors was fairly steady, as were coppers and oils.

The weekly federal reserve reports occasioned no disappointment, showing a further slight contraction in credit, and only a moderate reduction of currency in circulation. The inauguration of Reconstruction Corporation is expected to work beneficially, and some brokers expect General Motors dividend action next week to be encouraging.

The copper news was none too encouraging, although those shares held well. Domestic Copper prices, recently quoted at 5½ to 5¾ cents, sagged to 7 cents. The Dupont annual report, showing the dividend more than earned, was a bright spot in the corporate news.

The money market was almost stationary although some call money was offered outside at a concession of ¼ of 1 per cent from the official rate of 2½. Federal funds showed a little week-end firmness. 86 1-2.

Road Building for 1932 to Require Special Meet Four Mill Rate on Roads

Full Debate on Question of Permanency of Construction

COST QUESTION

Again the discussion regarding the appropriation for the committee of Roads and Bridges in respect to the amount of work contemplated by the council for the coming year, and especially as it pertained to the question of permanency in build ing or whether it will be carried on as in former years and have the roads built of gravel, came up after the council had assembled for the afternoon session. Warden Mitchell introduced the subject of the discussion which had been left over from the morning session, with a request for any member to state his further views.

Wm. Morton of Huntingdon was the first speaker and stated: "No one perhaps is more interested in this road question than I am. In the township of Huntingdon especially the dust in the Summer is terrible. The people who live there have been up in arms over it and it becomes necessary for us to do something about it to protect their health. We have the material, or most of the material right handy to build these roads, and I think we would be justified as far as economy goes, to build a real road while we are at it—a permanent road. I believe there is even a delegation here from out there about this matter and I intend to help them all I can, and I wish to go on record as being absolutely in favor of permanent road building."

Mr. Dafoe, reeve of Bancroft village was the next speaker, and rose to read a motion he had prepared respecting road work to be done in the coming year, with the proviso that all work which would be done shall be considered on the heads of a permanent road. "Now, gentlemen," he remarked, "I'm bringing something concrete for the council to discuss. At a time like this it would be very unwise to run down any offer the government might make, especially on the Trenton Road. Our people wouldn't like it or think much of us as representatives if we didn't take advantage of this and put our people to work. Depression will never be over until money is put in circulation and our men put to work so that they can spend money on what the farmer has to sell. Working with our storehouses so full, it is getting as dark a good crop which may be harvestelt, is looked upon more of a curse than the blessing it used to be. Something has to be done and that seems to be just as good a solution as any."

Cement Roads Advocated

"I certainly am in favor of a permanent road myself," stated Mr. Wes. Gray of Thurlow, who was the next speaker. "I am in favor of permanent roads, but if those roads are built I think that the only thing that should be used is cement. Concrete roads have proved themselves time and again and there is no question but what work done now in our county, and the spend money on our county, and I think it is only fair that they should be given any work that they can."

"As to that I don't altogether agree with the last speaker," stated Mr. Gilroy, reeve of Wollaston, who arose next. "Before we put down a fairly good road, we will admit that but the material cost in that type of road would outweigh the cost for labor that would be required to put it down, and also for that type of road it will require special machinery and will also probably be let to some contractor who will bring a lot of his own men. We have lots of men idle I know and the few hundred dollars we intend to spend on the roads in the past would now is not an opportune time to do it. I'm in favor of some being done but I don't think we should go ahead and lay roads all over the country."

Special Meeting Suggested

Mr. Gunter: "I think this question is big enough and there is enough to it to warrant a special meeting later on for the purpose of further discussing it. I for one would be glad to come into this hall later on without any further reimbursement and spend the day on the thing. The last speaker has said that I am crying to save the ills of the people by further taxation. It would be absurd to let any opportunity go by and not assist with the government offering to pay four dollars for road building if we put up one—and every one should be able to see it. It may perhaps be called economy to not do it, but we had so-called economists back in the days of long ago when roads were nothing but muddy lanes, and the bridges crossing the streams were nothing but death traps that claimed a good many lives every year. We had had "Hoviers" who objected strenuously over every dollar spent, and if we had listened to them we would still be living back in the woods and things that have to be taken into consideration, and we should go very carefully, but the need for some sort of permanent road is obvious."

Mr. W. Morton: "Perhaps the superintendent of roads could give us some information on this subject."

Mr. Simeon Fox: "Any contractor would be perfectly willing to have any men you would like. Possibly there will be a few of his own men required to run the machinery and so on but as far as that goes the majority of the work would be given to local men. Some of the various prices just like any other article, and they are built in different widths. Some are more expensive than others, but a good road could be laid for not very much more per mile."

Wes. Gray: "A cement road would be a life time road—that's the kind of a road we want."

"I was pleased with the last report sent in by the Roads and Bridges committee. I think we have to be congratulated on the good work done," stated Mr. Mallory.

"Mr. Gunter is first person I ever heard that had such an original idea of curing the ills of the people and ending the present depression. It seems that we are to spend all the ills the people now have, and put the money back into circulation by further taxing them. I certainly am in favor of permanent roads but now is not an opportune time to do it. I'm in favor of some being done but I don't think we should go ahead and lay roads all over the country."

Warden: "I've just explained it. The question is whether or not we will continue as we have been doing or spend the money on permanent roads."

Mr. Gilroy: "As I understand it a report has been presented on one of them."

Mr. Gunter: "No. I merely explained the report. I did not present it."

Mr. Gilroy: "We're spending a lot of money every year to keep down the dust on the roads. I agree with Mr. Gunter that the men back there must have work. Mr. Gunter should know conditions away back there where he lives better than anybody else, and I think it would be as good a relief system as any. All any of you ever hear about the cow hide that was taken off the dead cow and sold by the farmer to the tanner, who in turn sold it to a wholesaler in leather, who again sold it to a retailer who sold it to a shoemaker who made the shoes that the farmer sold home to a shoe man and then the farmer came and bought the pair of shoes the leather was made into? Well, I think that explains the whole thing. If we spend the money for roads it will in turn go to the men who will buy stuff with it and then the money will come back some way or other to the county. I will be willing to come down here any time to talk this matter over but there should be a definite motion made on the matter before we come down."

The report was adopted.

"I have no remedy for depression like some of the rest seem to have," stated Mr. Burke, Reeve of Sidney "but if the permanent road building program is to be a help to men in the county and will result in a benefit then I'm certainly in favor of it. I haven't learned yet, though, how many miles per road work are under consideration."

Mr. Moore: "It will be about twenty miles spread over a period of three years."

Mr. Wilson, Reeve of Tweed: I've just been wondering how much help the municipalities will get out of the question. Are we sure that we will get the five dollars for every one we spend on the roads?"

Mr. Gunter: "My idea is to urge the government to do it. I'm sure the government and I have no doubt but what they will give us all the help they can. This county is the back off as far as finances go, probably in the whole province. We are in the best shape possible so far as the question as to money or not we can afford it."

Mr. Reynolds, Sidney Township, "We spent a lot of money on Madoc road last year and now look at it. From a good road last Fall it's nothing but ruts now."

Mr. Burke, Reeve of Sidney, "Just about how many mills would be required to take care of all this?"

Warden Mitchell: "A four mill rate." The report of the roads report in the report of the Roads and Bridges committee a three mill rate will take care of the maintenance as it has been carried on and will also leave some twenty five thousand dollars for needed repairs or new pavements."

The four mill rate was finally moved for adoption by Mr. Gilroy and seconded by Mr. Mallory. The report of the committee on Roads and Bridges was also adopted and will be held for further discussion later.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

So Ken Hobart had thought quickly. There wasn't the slightest necessity for Don Jaime's joining in this row, wherefore, if he could be persuaded to abandon the field, Ken felt that the defenders would not remotely prejudice the victorious outcome of the sheep vs. Donnybrook that impended. How, then, to induce him to indulge in a spell of reprisal? Why, by sending the girl to the scene of the cattle-hurt before it started. Her arguments, consisting of tears, two pissable lips, two soft arms, and a declaration of love everlasting, could not potent indeed, Mr. Hobart would have bet his saddle on that. Wherefore, he had skillfully woven his web, with the result that Don Jaime and Roberta were now enmeshed in it.

The huge satisfaction felt by Ken Hobart at the success of his deceit and unblushing interference in other people's business was shattered now, as he laughed at Roberta, garbed in riding-breeches and flannel shirt, and wearing the conventional wide-brimmed and high-crowned hat of the country. Riding along the sky-line she could very readily be mistaken for a man —and such mistakes, in the impending circumstances, might reasonably be fatal! It was incumbent upon him, therefore, to catch up with her, to guard her approach to that cattle-branding corral in the valley, to make her take every advantage of cover ground, to scout the territory for her.

Also, a disturbing thought had occurred to him. What if Roberta had decided to make sure of the water-hole before letting her attention wander? Was it not highly believable that the latter would ride up to the water-hole before making a reconnaissance. On the other hand, was Don Jaime's mind completely on the task in hand? Was it not probable that thoughts of a sentimental nature might lull him into indiscretion? Verily, Ken Hobart could take no chances. There just could take no chances. There was immediate need of haste and he hastened; and as he pushed along the backbone of the ridge he was sickeningly aware that he was not the only one who was hastening.

There was Don Jaime, to begin with, hurrying to get to the water-hole and consolidate his position, after him came his reinforcements —the devoted Julio. Hurrying to catch Julio, that he might lead him to the water-hole. Roberta was pounding along on her fleet hunter, and after Roberta came Ken Hobart. He sighted the girl three-quarters of a mile or so ahead of him as he topped the ridge, but although he spurred his horse to the utmost speed he could not gain on her. Presently he saw ahead of the girl, he caught a flash of white —a recurrent flash, as something moved among the brush and pinon trees. That, he knew, was Julio's pinto mount.

"If anything happens to that girl he will himself, I'll just bust right on in a general southerly direction and never come back."

The low range swung to the east —and suddenly, in a cup-shaped valley far below, Ken Hobart saw the sheep—saw that they were being driven, not spread. They were within a mile of the water-hole, and Julio was not in sight. At the foot of the range Roberta took stock of the situation.

She had lost Julio!

Hobart looked back. He could see his five men following him. He waved his hat and one of them waved in return; so widespread further ado he rode down to join Roberta. The girl held up her hand as he neared him and beside her. "Listen!" she commanded.

He bent his head. Faintly to him came the report of rifles.

"There were two orders with the bands an hour ago," the girl reported, "Julio's and Jaime's. There doesn't appear to be that many now."

Hobart swept the scene with his binoculars. Presently he grunted, went ahead to preempt the water, and Don Jaime has walked down them. He's slim and sticking, though. If he were not, there would not be any shooting. And Julio hasn't got there yet. Well, he'll be careful. He'll probably come in from the rear and help the boss out. I wish I knew whether Jaime has it. the old corral, or at the water-hole. Smokeless powders, you see. One can not tell. But the sheep appear to want! That indicates confidence. Yes, Dona Jaime's fighting ten men of them."

"Looks that way. He must be in the old corral, because he wouldn't want a rimrock behind him. The corral is boarded close and the light is failing. If he keeps on he will not be too easy to hit."

Julio rode into the open a quarter of a mile south of them. Instantly Roberta's rifle was at her shoulder carefully and threw up the dirt in front of the boy to attract his attention. Julio saw, halted, and looked around to see where the attack came from. Hobart waved his hat at him and moved out from the shelter of the rocks. The husband ran to the grassy floor of the valley, Roberta by his side. Instantly Julio recognized them.

"You stay where you are, girl," Ken Hobart commanded. "My other five men will be riding down the hill pretty soon. You tell them my orders are to charge the men with the sheep immediately."

"What are you going to do, Mr. Hobart?"

"I'm going to join Julio, and the two of us will advance along the south side of this valley toward the water-hole. The range will be too long for the herders with the sheep to stop us, I think. Jimmy needs help mighty bad, so Julio and I will furnish what we can, darn!"

He galloped diagonally across the valley, motioning for Julio to join him. The boy did not hesitate. Roberta watched them in an agony of apprehension, until presently her ears caught the sound of increased rifle fire, but closer at hand. The herders with the sheep were firing at Hobart and Julio. Ken had stated that the range would be too long for effective fire by men not versed in the science of accurate shooting at extreme ranges, but nevertheless the air was filled with lead-go down, saw the boy shoot out over the animal's neck. He was up instantly and back beside the horse.

"Getting his rifle," Roberta thought. Ken Hobart had pulled up and was riding hard to Julio, who in turn, was running to meet him. There was not an instant's pause in the stride of the horse, yet Julio mounted double behind Hobart like a horse whirled, and the darting pair were on their way again.

There, alone at the foot of the hill watching this drama, Roberta cried out in agony when Ken Hobart's horse went to its knees, rose again—and stood still. Even one so unversed in warfare as Roberta could not realize that the poor brute had been hit and crippled. She saw Hobart and Julio dismount and, kneeling some twenty feet apart, open fire on the distant herders as calmly as if shooting at a mark! And then, over the crest behind, she came the five men detailed to follow Ken Hobart. They came down the slope at a fast gallop, spurred on by the sounds of conflict in the valley below, but slackened speed when they sighted the girl, holding up her hand in a signal to halt.

She trembled so she could hardly speak coherently. Don Jaime—regarded at the water-hole with ten men—Ken Hobart and Julio over south—shooting at the herders. Ken says—rear attack."

The three American riders gazed at her, not quite comprehending, desirous, perhaps, of receiving more explicit instructions in such an emergency.

"What are you standing there for?" Roberta cried hysterically. "Follow me, I'll show you." Across the northern flank of the valley they raced, the patter of rifle fire from the herders probably drowning the sound of their thudding approach, for they were within a hundred yards of the pinons, men before the latter saw them. One of them fired at Roberta, ...She thrilled with a rage and a wild exultation as the bullet whispered past her head.... Afterward she had a faint recollection of a dark, frightened, but defiant face that looked for an instant in front of her before she rode the man down. Pistol shots.... then a backward look. Behind her the five cuse with upraised pistols, flourishing them at her, yelling a fierce approbation of her leadership.

The sheep, in panic, fled wildly, milling over each other, bleating, leaving a cloud of dust, white dust behind them. Roberta rode into that cloud—rode through the fringe of stragglers, knocking them down, leaping over and among them. Her horse, plunging and swerving, was skittish, with common sense rather uncommon in a horse, to avoid the woolly bodies under his feet and Roberta was forced to ride as she had never ridden before. Pistols popped behind her,...She was clear of the sheep.... Her dull brain mildly-tendency again prodded her mount's flanks; the quiet rose and fell.. .. .. ..

ME AND MES.— A BUTTON COMES OFF AT THE WRONG MOMENT

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 25.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)—

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

At Kaviri's village, Tarzan paused only long enough for food and to arrange with the chief for several strong warriors to help man the canoe in place of those apes who had been done to death. He had decided to follow the strange white people of whom Kaviri spoke. So it was with a sigh of relief that the chief saw Tarzan's canoe, with its weird crew, disappear up the river.

Most of the apes had finally learned the secret of the paddles. Three days the strange company continued farther and farther into the heart of savage Africa. Then Tarzan made a landing. He explained to Mizambi the thing he had in mind and bid the apes of Akut remain with the black man, "I will come back in a few days," he said, "after I find the very bad 'white men.'" Then he vanished into the trees.

Two days later Tarzan came upon a large village from their wicked-looking chief he learned that Rokoffo had passed up the river a week before. He decided to wait a few hours that he might be fresh and strong when he caught up with the white men. The sharp-filed teeth of this tribe denoted they were cannibals. But knowing no fear of man, beasts, or devil, the ape-man curled himself up and was soon asleep.

Scarcely had he done so than the chief called two of his swiftest warriors to whom he whispered a few instructions. A moment later three sleek, black bodies were racing along the river path,up-stream toward the east. Three hours later several canoes came silently into view. Upon the river bank stood the chief, his spear raised in a horizontal position above his head, as though fi were a signal to the boats.

TABBY THROWS SWITCH

Paris, Ont., Jan. 29.—A cat kicked out a switch and plunged Paris, Ayr, Drumbo, Princeton, and nearby rural communities into darkness, Wednesday night the staff at Brantford Aviation were at a loss to know the cause of the difficulty. It was not until Thursday morning that the trouble men found the remains of a cat, which solved the problem of the short-circuit. The cat had climbed a sixty-foot pole.

During the year ending June 30, 1931, the Province of Quebec collected the sum of $411,560 for the record of hunting and fishing territories and the sale of angling and hunting licenses.

HOUR PASSES WHEN AIR IS ALL USED UP

Blank Despair Seen on Faces of Wives and Mothers

LIKELY LOST

Believe Sub M-2 Struck Mine or Explosion Occurred Inside

Portland, Eng., Jan. 28 (AP) — Blank despair fell upon the wives and mothers of the men aboard when by lead with the submarine M-2 today as the hour passed when, the experts figured, that the air inside the sunken shell would be exhausted.

Since dawn the little group of women had been standing on one of the piers, ignoring the bitter wind, peering into the fog which hid the salvage vessels.

One of them had a wrist watch which she glanced at from time to time. At 10.30, the last hour, she nodded to one of the other women, after that they looked at one another but seldom. The one with the watch gathered her two children to her almost fiercely, squared her shoulders and gazed out again toward the sea.

Some of the women were unable to leave their homes. One of them is the mother of four days old baby. Another was the wife of a soldier named MacDonald, one of the most popular men in Portland.

The wife of the M-2 radio operator was nursing her mother, who has been critically ill for days.

"Charlie was going to be best man at a wedding" one woman said. "Only last Monday night we were skating about it. He said he and a Fourteen families, whose men are aboard the submarine live in Portsmouth. Others are scattered in several little towns along the coast. One of them is very much in love and the ship was Lieutenant K. A. Arbuthnot, of the Admiralt, flagship of the salvage flotilla. He went along on the last dive, against permission at his own request.

Aboard the Schooner Comet, off Denmark off Portland, England, Jan. 28 (AP)—Captain John Hunt, master of the schooner, and naval officers today about a series of mysterious flares and rocketing explosions which he saw from his ship on Tuesday night when the submarine M-2 went down.

"We were coming across the bay in a dense fog," he said, "and we could see the light on Portland Hill, but it looked like a dull red, the fog was so thick.

"All of a sudden, down on the water we saw a bright flash, that looked like a carbide flash. It was a brilliant white and it came two or three times.

"Then while we wondered what it was there was a loud explosion, that echoed across the water but I couldn't see anything on the surface to account for it.

"There was another explosion, as loud as the first, and the flare came again. It burned for three or four minutes.

"At first we thought it was a distress signal from some small boat, but we never thought of a submarine.

"The next day, as soon as I heard the M-2 was missing I put back here. I thought the flash we saw might be some kind of flare they sent up, but it seems to me now it might have been an explosion under the water. We passed right over the spot where we thought we had seen the flare, but there was nothing unusual, like oil, around there."

Mismanagement of C. N. R. is Claim

Regina, Sask., Jan. 28—Charges of gross mismanagement and extravagance in the Canadian National Railways were laid by Dr. W. D. Cowan, M.P. for Long Lake, in a speech here last night.

"We will leave Sunday for Ottawa," Dr. Cowan said, "to attend another session of the Federal House, at which one of the most important items of business will likely be the affairs of the Canadian National Railways.

"The only thing wrong with the C.N.R. today be continued in gross mismanagement, you can't tell me that it is necessary to pay Sir Henry Thornton what we do, or to pay $4,-000,000 for a hotel in Saskatoon. It is squandering money and what we want to do is to get the whole road on a strict business basis."

SOCIAL EVENING WITH MEMBERS

A social evening was spent at the home of Miss B. Jones, Dundas street, on Monday evening, in honor of St. John's Anglican Mission. Herchimer Avenue, met to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. smith, who are leaving the vicinity.

An enjoyable program was contributed to by various people, and community singing engaged in. After an address by Miss B. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Beamish and Mrs. Conners, were the recipients of gifts. Refreshments were then served and dancing engaged in, and enjoyed by the younger people.

A vote of thanks was proposed to the hostess by Mrs. G. Manore and was heartily endorsed by all present.

How often events, by chance, and unexpectedly, come to pass, which you had not dared even to hope for. —Terence.

Nebulae Speeding 15,000 Miles a Second Into Space Discove red By Mt. Wilson

(New York Times)

Washington — Discovery of two spiral nebulae or "island universes" in the constellation of the Gemini, which apparently are moving away from the earth at the rate of about 15,000 miles a second, was announced recently through the Carnegie Institution.

These objects, presumably vast star systems comparable to the great Milky Way system itself, represent the farthest reach up to now of human observation into outer space. Their speed of recession is about 3,000 miles a second faster than that of the most distant nebulae previously photographed.

This discovery, which was made by Dr. Milton Humason, of the Mount Wilson Observatory in California, is regarded as adding further confirmation to one of the strangest phenomena ever observed in the heavens. The explanation of this is in dispute among astronomers, and is largely responsible for the theories that Dr. Albert Einstein and Dr. Wilhelm de Sitter of Holland in Pasadena this winter.

The speed and direction of a luminous object in the heavens can be calculated from the shifting of lines in its spectrum. If these lines shift toward the red end of the spectrum it means that the object is moving away from us. If they shift toward the blue end, it means that the object is moving toward the earth. The speed is determined from the extent of the shift.

Three years ago Dr. Humason and his colleague, Dr. Edwin Hubble, made the astonishing discovery which proved that, by the most reliable criterion, that the "island universes" were moving outward at enormous speeds and that the speeds were in ratio to their distance away. This led to hold good for all those nebulae whose distance could be calculated by independent methods, such as observations of variable stars which can be detected on photographs of the "island universes."

Last Summer the observations were carried almost three times further into outer space by the development of a method of calculating the distance of nebulae by their luminosity. This gave a check on those great star clusters which are so far removed that there was no hope of detecting in them any variables or clusters of variables.

The distances are so vast that the results are given in parsecs, a parsec being about 19,000,000,000 miles. Here are the results, to the present, of the observations of the most distant nebulae:

A group of about 150 nebulae in the constellation Cancer—distance about 9,000,000 parsecs; speed outwards, 2,900 miles a second.

A group of about 500 nebulae in the constellation Virgo—distance about 11,000,000 parsecs; speed outwards, 4,200 miles a second.

A group of about 800 nebulae in the constellation Coma—distance about 14,000,000 parsecs; speed outwards, 4,600 miles a second.

A group of about 300 nebulae in the constellation Ursa Major—distance about 21,000,000 parsecs; speed outwards, about 7,200 miles a second.

A group of about 150 nebulae in the constellation Reo — distance about 23,000,000 parsecs; speed outwards, about 12,000 miles a second.

The discovery announced carries the observations to a distance of about 45,000,000 parsecs. That is about 125,000,000 light years, or the distance that light travelling at 186,000 miles a second would consume in that length of time.

Speed May be Only Apparent

Since the outward speed shows an increase of 2,00 miles a second for this additional distance, it appears that the increase is at the rate of 1,000 miles a second for each 4,-000,000 parsecs.

Drs. Humason and Hubble, in degraded that, as far as they know the increasingly fast outward velocities are only apparent, and they have no means of stating positively that this strange phenomenon, have any meaning. They make no effort to interpret what it means, if it is a really rather than an illusion in some way inherent in observations over such vast distances.

They express confidence, however, that the same apparently remarkable relationship of outward speed and distance, which seems on the surface to indicate that all creation is undergoing a gigantic explosion, will be found to hold good when it becomes possible to extend the observations to still more distant objects with the photographic ere of the telescope.

Theoretically, they have calculated the relationship out to a distance of 108,000,000 parsecs where an outward velocity of about 27,000 miles a second.

The theory of the "exploding universe" has been advanced especially by Professor Wilhelm de Sitter. It also is the theory of the British astronomer, Sir James Jeans, who spent much of last Winter in Pasadena, largely because of the sensational discoveries of Drs. Hubbble and Humanson.

According to this theory, the solar system, the Milky Way galaxy, or any unit of creation, is speeding through space like a fragment of an exploding shell. Others have advanced the theory that the recession speed is only apparent, because years ago. At the beginning it was about 1,000 million light years in diameter, but it has since expanded to between 2,000 million and 20,-000 million light years.

There is one serious difficulty involved in this theory for which its exponents have not yet found no answer. From the speed of the recession of the nebulae, astronomers have calculated the age of the universe as about 9,000 million years. Yet other calculations, in themselves seemingly flawless, show that the individual stars composing the universe are millions of millions of years old. Science thus finds itself confronted with the paradox of the universe as a whole apparently being younger than its parts.

URGE VENUE AT VICTORIA

New Zealand Would Favor Western City

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 28.— When D. B. Plunkett, M.P., for Victoria, arrives at Ottawa, for which place he left last night, to attend the forthcoming session of Parliament, he will lay before the minister the suggestion that the venue of the Imperial Conference be changed to Victoria.

It is known Victoria would be favored for the conference by New Zealand. Members of the trade delegation to Honolulu, where a draft trade agreement was reached with Hon. H. H. Stevens, representing Canada, expressed their preference for Victoria as the meeting place for the Imperial Conference. This view will be advanced by Mr. Plunkett when he reaches Ottawa.

FOUR DAY FAIR IS BELLEVILLE BOARD'S PLAN

Central Association Gives Local Society Aug. 30, 31, Sept. 1, 2

J. LOCKE IS PRES.

All Dates But Two Set For Exhibition in C. Ontario

One of the best attended annual meetings of the Central Ontario Fairs Association gathered in the city hall, yesterday afternoon, some forty delegates being present when President W. J. Hill of Meaford called assembly to order at 2 o'clock. The business of afternoon was carried through with dispatch and finished up, previous to 4 o'clock.

Mr. Hill in his presidential address, said he had received letters from four or five fairs stating representatives could not be present. He felt the association had had a fairly well the past year. Nearly all the thirty-one fairs of this district had held successful exhibitions and had catered more than ever to both exhibitors and patrons. Entries had been more numerous than for some years previous. Some fairs may not have had the balance on the right side, but this was no cause for discouragement as it was natural there be loss fallin in their fair but should make up a stronger reputation to make competitors and patrons more satisfied. The representation here today indicated the interest taken in the welfare of the fairs. Dereagate from Cobourg, Northumberland, Hastings, Prince Edward and Addington. He thanked all for the good-will and aid they had given him during his term of office.

Minutes of the last annual meeting (24th, 25th, 1931) were read by the secretary treasurer and approved. The auditors' report was received and adopted.

The chairman then mentioned that Mr. Elisha Maines had been elected president of the Tweed Agricultural Society and was present. He made some laudatory remarks regarding Mr. Maines' interest in and work for agricultural matters in Hastings and in connection with the Central Ontario Fairs Association. Mr. Maines replying briefly, stated he had been a member of an agricultural society for over fifty years and was more than ever interested in their well being.

After some discussion and explanations the association carried a motion to memorialize the provincial Government that the Central Ontario Fairs Association was entitled to any change in apportioning grants to fairs. It was brought out in the discussion that the government plated a new apportioning would lead to the weakening out of the smaller fairs. Mr. Aylesworth of Campbellford, a director of the Canada Trail Fairs Board pointed out the need of a good attendance next year district at the board meeting next week. This matter of grants would be the main item of business at that gathering and votes there, counted more than attendance.

Some discussion took place as to reducing the fee to the association from two to one dollar. There are thirty one fair fairs in this section, last year four fairs paid double fee and this year seventeen has paid. All fairs were deriving benefits by the work of the association. It was decided to leave the fee at two dollars and the secretary was instructed to write the delinquent boards pointing out the advantages the association afforded them, and urge them to have the payment on 1932 expenses.

In the absence of Mayor Tice from the city, Alderman Woodley welcomed the delegates and thanked them the success he felt they deserved.

Mr. Clem Ketcheson of Sidney said that at the Frankford and Sidney fair director Hall, Lt. Col. W. N. Ponton had informed them that the fair field in Sidney (formerly) was one held in Sidney in 1838.

The dates for the 1932 fair was next broached and the approved list will be found at the end of this report. Colborne and Frankford have conflicting dates, and it was left to the directors of these two associations to endeavor to adjust them.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was handled ably by Mr. H. R. Ketcheson of the Belleville Fair Board and resulted in all officers being elected by acclamation. Mr. Hill was urged to retain office for another year, but this he declined, he felt the honour should be passed around.

President—John Locke, Campbellford.

1st Vice Pres.—G. W. Varcoe, Roseneath.

2nd Vice Pres.—H. S. Aylesworth, Warkworth.

Secty.-Treas.—J. J. Lewis Hay, Campbellford (re-elected)

Auditors—J. O'Donnell and S. M. Nicholson.

President Locke assuming the chair thanked all for the honor accorded him in making him their President.

A vote of thanks was made to the retiring president and the meeting adjourned to meet in Belleville next year.

BUILD BOATS TO DRIVE FAST

Gar Woods Unperturbed Respecting Record Made

MIAMI, BEACH, Fla., Jan. 29.—Gar Wood, who Wednesday claimed a new world's speed boat record of 110.783 miles an hour, approved unperturbed yesterday at a statement by W. J. Bingham, chairman of the Racing Committee of the Yachtsmen's Association of the claims might be withheld temporarily.

"Whether or not the Rules Committee accepts the speeds made Wednesday as a record is up to the Rules Committee," Wood said. "We merely build and drive boats as fast as I can. If it's a record, all right. If it isn't, it's just the same. In either event, we are preparing to make another one in a few days.

"I did not understand that it is necessary to break the record by a definite margin. The Rules Committee never has explained this before.

"It's all in fun and sport anyway and I hope we will be able to settle even the Rules Committee on the next trial."

Sun Life Business Shows Increase

Central Ontario Branch Manager Attends Conference

Has the low point of the depression been passed? Somebody asked the late Dwight Morrow when he thought the present world depression would be over, and he replied "About two months before I hear anything about it." There is a world of sense in this statement. The upturn will come before we know it. Perhaps, if life insurance can be taken as a barometer of world conditions, the corner really has been turned.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada has just closed its Annual Canadian Managers' Conference at Toronto. Mr. N. J. Freeman, Branch Manager for Central Ontario, has just returned from the Conference and reports that the Sun Life through its world-wide organization is meeting a large volume of business. At the Conference a review of the past year was presented by Arthur B. Wood, Vice-President. He revealed for the first time, where the Sun Life is securing its business; more than one hundred million dollars of paid-for business in Canada, from the United States approximately two hundred and ninety-six millions, from Great Britain fifty millions, and from the rest of the world eighty-five millions, making a total for the year as well over five hundred millions. The Company now has in force over three billion dollars of business. Mr. Wood pointed out that the Annual Statement is now in the course of preparation so that he was only able to present preliminary figures. The assets are now over six hundred millions.

Mr. Wood also pointed out that insurance institutions are least affected by depressions, for life insurance is purchased as a long-term proposition and the investments of necessity be chosen to cover a period of years. Insurance companies are more concerned therefore with the safety and power of their investments than their market values, and in this connection the income of the Sun Life for the year 1931 shows a large increase over the previous year and is not far short of two hundred millions. Dividends paid to policyholders during 1931 show a striking increase.

Where Death Rode the Runway

This remarkable photo, made on the Zackelfall course at Schreiberhau, Germany, shows a fourman bob-sled at the exact moment when, travelling at terrific speed it shot off the course at a dangerous curve and crashed into the ice and snow. The bobsled is at that point. Such was the velocity of the sled that the force with which it struck killed three spectators and injured seventeen.

SHANGHAI OCCUPIED BY JAP INVADERS

An aerial view of the city of Shanghai, China, which has now become an international storm centre, by reason of the Japanese occupation. The harbor shown in the photograph now contains warships of many nations loaded with reinforcements to strengthen the existing Jap forces in the city. Already Nipponese marines have landed a force of marines and machine guns and are threatening to take over the entire city if the Chinese persist in their boycott of Japanese goods adopted after the Jap occupation of Mânchuria. Chinese merchants are urging the National Government at Nanking to agree unconditionally to the demands of the invaders rather than cause more bloodshed. However, the other powers who have settlements in Shanghai may have something to say about Japan taking over the city. The map shows the location of the latest Sino-Jap controversy.

Transport Institute is Proposed by C. N. Official

Co-operative Effort Sought of Railways and Traffic Clubs

ENDOW CHAIRS

North Bay, Ont., Jan. 28—Co-operative effort by railway and traffic clubs in Canada looking toward the formation of a transportation institute for the benefit of the transport industry and to the Dominion as a whole, and A. A. Gardiner, assistant General Passenger Traffic Manager of the Canadian National Railways, Montreal, in an address before the Transportation Club here last night. The matter, Mr. Gardiner thought, was one of great possibilities. Canada has all the essentials. She has problems which a body by tackle; men who are desirous of following the best lights that science and experience may offer and particularly she has plenty of ambitious young men to utilize the opportunities which such an institute would afford them.

Such a Canadian institute of transport, perhaps affiliated with the British institute could endow or help to endow chairs of transport in the universities of Canada; give transport scholarships and could help to advance the transport industry in the Dominion as had the British institute in Great Britain.

The Institute of Transport, London, already had centres outside of the British Isles. Formed in 1919 its purpose was to encourage the study of all phases of transport to assist the development and improvement of transportation, transport and locomotion and the conduct and handling of traffic in the highest interests of the people. New forms of transport had entered the field, and road and aerial transport had boundless fields in its sylabuses, the conditions which led to the formation of the London Institute in 1919 have not abated, insofar as Canada is concerned, but rather increased both force and company.

In the formation of the British Institute it was pointed out that not only is transport a key industry but it is also the industry that keeps the keys of all other industries. The Institute was to be a clearing house for the exchange of ideas and information on transportation and allied matters and as such is very valuable.

OTTAWA WATCHES DEVELOPMENTS

Ottawa, Jan. 29—No official action has been taken by the Canadian government in connection with the Japanese invasion of Shanghai. It was learned last night. Ottawa is kept posted on British foreign policy through the medium of confidential despatches from the Foreign Office, and no decisions unlikely there will be any intervention by Canada unless Canadian lives are endangered. Canada has a Trade Commissioner named Colonel L. M. Gorman in Shanghai. There is also a prominent Canadian Anglican clergyman and a number of Canadian business men in the international section. They are expected to keep out of the line of fire. There is no excitement here about the onvasion of Shanghai. Ottawa is preoccupied with troubles of its own.

NEW SYSTEM IS DISCUSSED

Hydro Employees Attend Lecture on Safety Methods

The Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario have recently issued a new book of rules, regulations dealing chiefly with safety.

All day yesterday the heads of the various departments of the Eastern Ontario System were in conference, in the auditorium of the local Y.M.C.A., where these various rules and regulations were carefully explained and dealt with, by the heads of the departments.

The rules are for the safeguard of the employees, equipment and maintenance of the company. Especially did the new regulations deal with the safeguard of men handling electric wires so as to be sure that the lines were dead and no accidents could result from employees getting in contact with live wires. These rules and regulations were explained thoroughly by Mr. John Anderson, chief despatcher of the Hydro, assisted by Mr. Bennett and G. Lloyd, also of the Belleville office.

The system was inaugurated in Western Ontario some time ago but is not in force in this area as yet. It is the intention of Mr. G. B. Smith, general field superintendent for the E.O.H.E.S., to gradually introduce the new system into this section. Representatives were present from Ottawa, Perth, Smith's Falls, Healey Falls, Campbellford, Peterboro, Trenton and Belleville and after receiving the lectures and demonstrations, on the blackboard, the delegates left for the respective places that they could return to their respective power plants ready to put in operate when the new system is inaugurated.

The main idea of the meeting was to get the heads of all the departments together at one time so that they would all receive the same instructions at the same time and institute complete co-ordination, when the new system is started. The next meeting lasted all day and the delegates returned home highly pleased, saying that they had been enlightened, as to the new system proposed.

PARISH HALL IS COMPLETED

Frankford A.Y.P.A. Responsible For Erection of Hall

Frankford — Less than three months back a local branch of the Anglican Young Peoples' Association was organized at Frankford. Small at first, but each and every member was imbued with the fighting spirit of progressiveness as necessary to the success of any organization, and today, in the rear of the Church of England, the building of a new Parish Hall, this has been erected a monument to the enthusiasm of this infant organization.

Several times in the year, the subject of a Parish Hall has been mooted, but the times and other considerations considered, the requirements hardly justified the undertaking. That is, until the A. Y. P. Association was organized and the main task was a regular piece of meeting, as the social side of the question is, and must always remain, the outstanding factor in any young people's society. The society was expanding daily, meetings being held here and there at homes of the members with a steadily increasing interest and trouble.

Just six weeks ago, the idea of a building was discussed to replace the old sheds in the rear of the church. Plans were drawn by Mr. C. E. Ketcheson, and builders interviewed, with the result that Mr. Smith Asterhout received the contract, the building 22 by 50 to be finished by Jan. 15th.

The result is a beautiful finished building inside and out, with finely finished hardwood floor for dancing, a piano for music, the windows decorated with dainty cretonne curtains, and furnished complete, even to a modernly equipped kitchen, with all heating and cooking, and serving utensils, chairs, tables in fact every thing decorative and necessary in ready for any purpose for which the building would be utilized.

This is the first building of the kind and purpose to be erected in Frankford, and the building itself was a great surprise to those who attended the social evening on Monday. According to present times, it was quite an undertaking as the parish is small, but the main aspect of the case is, the entertaining of the young people of the church, an incentive far too often taken into second or third consideration.

BRITAIN, U.S. PROTEST SHANGHAI OCCUPATION

Division of N. America Into Two Peoples Gives Fine Example of Good Neighbors, Says U. S. Ambassador

Guests at City and County Banquet Hear Descendant of Hastings County Pioneer

N. AMERICA AND WORLD

"The great outstanding fact is that now we know that the division of North America between our two peoples was the best possible thing which could have happened for the future stability of the world. No single occupation of this continent could possibly have created such a bulwark of strength for the kind of government and for the institutions in which we believe," said Col. the Hon. J. Hanford MacNider, Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Canada speaking on Friday evening at Hotel Quinte. "Out of that early dissension have grown two great nations, which, despite their ability to call each other names in language which both could understand, have given the world—everything considered—its best example and precept of considerate neighborly behavior. We shall, despite depressions, when all our temples grow gray in the attempt to build up barricades to keep out whatever we think is bothering us, continue to exemplify that healthy and sane attitude to all the world."

In this strain spoke the American ambassador. He spoke with particular effect as he was in the old home section of his family of generations ago. His coming to Belleville on this occasion was the forging of another link binding the city and county together in that it brought here one whose interest in Hastings and Belleville has always been a tradition, and it was the strengthening of the ties binding two neighbor nations.

History Repeats Itself

Assembling about the ample festive board at the banquet were representatives of the county and of the city joined in a Bay of Quinte welcome to the United States minister Plenipotentiary to Canada. Col. the Honorable Hanford MacNider, who bears a name known in Hastings and Belleville history and whose ancestors were residents of these parts. It was the occasion of the twelfth annual get-together banquet of the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce tendered the Hastings County Council and officials of the county and representatives of neighboring counties. The occasion gained added interest considerable by the fact that the United States Minister was the guest being home to the place which was the cradle of his family, he was also an ancestor when the city did honor to the newly elected warden of the county, Robert A. Mitchell, reeve of Thurlow.

His Worship Mayor George O. Tice occupied the chair. This was the recently elected mayor's first public function and he improved the occasion with his thoughtful references, to city and county affairs, with his humor and with his graceful reference to the guest of honor, Hon. Hanford MacNider.

His initial visit to Hastings was missing when the membership of the council waited on the mayor of Bay of Quinte with the city representatives, the members of the Chamber of Commerce and others in honor of the occasion quite a number of the citizens are residents of the city were present to do honor to the United States ambassador and to join in the cooperative festivity.

The Honorable Mr. MacNider was present with the national an-

BUS, TWO TRUCKS ARE INVOLVED

Only One Injured in Peculiar Accident

SIMCOE, Ont., Jan. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—Only one person was injured when an autobus and two trucks were involved in a collision on the highway near here yesterday. The bus, which was driven by Ernest Crockett, was forced to make a quick stop, when it overtook a buggy beyond the brow of a hill.

The transport truck swerved to avoid hitting the latter and collided with a truck coming in the opposite direction police said. The bus driver struck in the crash, the passengers escaping with a shaking-up. Elmer Crockett, 17, of Chatham, with a fractured rib was the only casualty, according to the police.

Professional Jobless Forecast by Relief Head

Ottawa, Jan. 30—Warning to all Canadian municipalities to cut down their capital expenditures and to issue as few new debentures as possible, was given by A. J. Ellis, Director of the Ontario Bureau of Municipal Affairs and of Unemployment Relief. Mr. Ellis addressed a service club here.

He referred to heavy expenditures for unemployment relief, and said: "I have my doubts if many municipalities can stand the pace."

Needy as Many Jobs

Mr. Ellis declared that "legitimate unemployment is very little more than it was in 1930, but that there are nearly $35,000,000 to take care of unemployment in Ontario this year, compared with $18,000,000 spent in that connection last year." He added that the more governments and municipalities spend on unemployment relief the more it grows, and the more people say they are entitled to it.

"Pretty soon," concluded Mr. Ellis, "we'll have professional unemployment.

We used to have it 20 years ago: we called them tramps then."

Gulf Stream Bears Menu to Scotland

New York, N.Y., Jan. 30.—The Gulf Stream will carry anything back to Scotland.

William Van Alen, a skyscraper designer, thought so. He was so sure of it that an argument developed when he and a companion bore last year from a reunion of former Boston Arts students in Paris.

Van Alen scratched his address on a ship's menu, stuffed it in a bottle and threw it into the Gulf Stream.

He has just got it back from Hillport, Haven, Argyllshire, Scotland, and the name of the man who found it was Duncan Campbell. Van Alen estimated the bottle travelled 2,000 miles.

New York, N.Y., Jan. 30— Many are manifestly an influence in the financial markets today, but no single factor of a war boom to bid up Atlas Power and Dupont about the point. Proposes Commission to Make Report on Situation in East

Chinese Want Probe of Whole Sino-Japanese Problem

DRUMMOND'S VIEW

Geneva, Jan. 30.—Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League of Nations, proposed today, a commission of inquiry into the movements in Shanghai be constituted as a commission to report on recent events there.

Mr. Wu Yee, Chinese spokesman at the League Council, said he welcomed Sir Eric's plan but he suggested the council should go to the "root of the cause and eradicate it."

M. Sato, Japanese delegate, said the Tokyo government would give full consideration to an inquiry into the Shanghai situation.

Whole Problem

Ambassador Cecil of Shanghai is important to China, but Manchuria is still more important. China invoked article 15, he said, not only because of the situation at Shanghai, but because the entire Sino-Japanese dispute and he hoped Sir Eric would soon submit a plan for an immediate inquiry into bringing the whole problem. China, he added, had planned to invoke articles 10 and 15 before the recent incidents at Shanghai.

Sir Eric replied he was not making a proposal to the council but direct to Japan and China. He would welcome Sir Eric's plan but he suggested the council should go to the "root of the cause and eradicate it."

COLD WAVE ON WAY HERE

Residents Requested to Sand Walks Free of Charge

Local predictions seem to favor a drop in temperature tonight to a point somewhere in the vicinity of the zero mark.

With a fine and feathery snow whirling down and a cold breeze blowing the weather bids fair to change from the abnormally high temperature that have been experienced lately into weather that is more in keeping with the season. Everywhere signs are given of preparations being made by the residents for the cold wave which prognostications predict, but with it comes an announcement from the city hall regarding sand which will be distributed by the department of public works.

While the men employed by this civic department do scatter sand on the hills of the city and distribute it pretty well throughout the down town section on walks and surfaces, which are used by the pedestrians, they do not take care of the residential parts of the city to the extent as has been the custom for some time, sand is available for any resident of the city and will be delivered by the department of public works for those who call their engineer and leave their name and address.

All the department asks is that a box be provided in which the sand will be delivered, and while it is not necessary that they put this box out in front of the house it will be found a handy place where it can be found and filled. Co-operation in sanding trouble will be appreciated by the department.

DOG FIGHT ON MARKET SQ.

Purchasers and Vendors Watch Battle For Some Time

A real old-fashioned dog fight almost disrupted business between Front and Bridge streets on the market this morning and provided entertainment for a group of early-risers for a few minutes. The gathering spot, where the struggling beasts were attempting to tear each other's parts of respective anatomy.

One was a shaggy-haired, collie-like dog with the deadly ravenous ness and savage slashing characteristics of his breed, the other was a nondescript mongrel, large in size and heavy muscled in appearance. Bared fangs glistened and manes bristled as the two animals locked and sparred off in the preliminary fighting. Neither seemed perturbed even when the mongrel became weary of the darting antics of the stiff-legged collie and settled down to the hind leg. Seizing that part of the anatomy, the collie proceeded to chew the member vigorously and the mongrel, realizing that the day of suffering animal grew on space, gave up the struggle and settled down to chewing and shaking. Finally, as the game animals had fought for nearly some for both animals concerned, and as the spectators had almost enough, one of the men stepped in and parted the willing animals and the dogs resumed their growling way. The crowd dispersed, business returned to normal and once again the line of trade commenced to flow.

Religion should be a life, not a doctrine.—George Wilson.

CUT HEAD IN FALL ON ICE

'Bob' Fair, Referee is Knocked Heavily on Ice

"Bob" Fair, while refereeing the public school hockey game at the Arena Saturday morning, had the misfortune to fall sustaining a very nasty gash over his left eye. Mr. Fair received first aid at the Arena and was forced to see a physician as the gash required at least three stitches to close.

In the first game of the public school hockey league the A.V.S. team were successful in defeating their rivals M.S., by the score of 6 to 1. The boys from Pine Street school have had for their opponents from the other side of the river.

The second game between Q.A.S. and K.G.S. proved to be a thrilling game and after the final gong had sounded the boys from Ann street had won from the north hill lads by the score of 2 to 1. These games are attracting a large crowd every Saturday as many adults are seen at the Arena enjoying the exercising of the boys play the hockey and the hour's skating, which is included in after the game is appreciated by the school children in general.

B. C. I. Girls Win Debate With College

Turn Tables on College in Debate on Empire Free Trade

At Belleville Collegiate Institute last evening the second in the series of inter-collegiate debates with Albert College was held, when the Collegiate which had been overwhelmingly defeated in the first contest won the debate with high honors. The subject, "Resolved that free trade within the Empire is in the best interests of all dominions," was ably championed by Jean and Barbara McDougall represented the affirmative, while the negative side of the question while Morgan Rowland and Millard Jordan of Albert College championed the negative part of the proposition. Each speaker by careful preparation and evident research work showed keen interest in the debate and in the manner of delivery they acquitted themselves with distinction.

Mr. Bernard Graham, of B. C. I. was perhaps the most outstanding of the debaters, presenting a brilliant argument in splendid style. Mr. Morgan Rowland has an exceptionally pleasing style of speaking and an excellent leader for the negative team, but only on account of errors were ably supported.

The judges, Dr. S. McCutcheon, Miss R. Trempleton, and Miss M. Young, Toronto, in announcement of their decision in favor of the affirmative, commended the debaters. Mr. John Turner, president of the Collegiate Literary Society, spoke for a few minutes and expressed the hope that further debates would be arranged between the two institutions. At the conclusion of the debate Mr. Graham Rowland congratulated the winners on their victory, and in responding, Miss Catherine Smith also moved a vote of thanks to the judges for their kindness in assisting at the meeting.

During the evening the audience heard with enjoyment several selections by Albert College Orchestra, with solos by R. Crothers. Other members of the audience included Kenneth McLeod, Art Pidgeon and Keith Kingston.

Memorial Service of Charles I's Execution

London, Jan. 30.—Today was the 283rd anniversary of the execution of Charles I and as usual his statue in Trafalgar square was covered by length of Whitehall where he suffered, is bedecked with wreaths placed there by the Royal Stuart Society and others who regard Charles as a martyr.

The statue, one of the most delightful in London, stood in London, was put up in the years before Charles lost his head and stands on the execution the roundheads sold it to a Brazier with instructions to break it up. The Brazier, however, whether he was a fervid royalist or merely thought he could get more cash through in leaving the statue would find favor in years to come, buried the statue underground and drove a thriving trade in knives and forks, the handles of which were supposed to have been made from the metal.

The statue was not set up once more for a good many years after the Restoration. For many years subsequently it was decorated every January 30th, the anniversary of the execution of Charles I. Today it finished his wanderings.

Friday night about eleven-thirty o'clock, police constable Isaard noticed smoke emerging from the main door and cellar windows of the building occupied by the Pruit Machinery Company on Front St. The fire department was summoned and on gaining entrance to the building it was found that the furnace was smoking very badly but there was no signs of the burning being on fire.

The manager of the company was called and he came to the plant and made the evidence secure.

HAULED TO SHORE ON CAKE OF ICE

Billy Beatty, two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Beatty, was found in a rather precarious situation on the pavilion on Friday last. It seems that the youngster had wandered over to the lake and was playing on the ice when a section gave way and he was carried some distance out from shore. A member of the household who was passing on the road succeeded in hauling the cake of ice to to shore and Billy was safely landed. He did not appear to view the incident with any alarm and was none the worse for the experience.—Trenton Times.

EGGS SELL AS LOW AS 16CTS.

Prevailing Price on Market However Was 18c

Beginning in June until they sold as low as 16 cents a dozen, eggs hit a new low price on Saturday's market. Although some eggs were sold at that price, the prevailing price was 18 cents. Dealers bought 25 cents a pound and repacked ready for retail trade. The variation in the prices of chicken was also quite prevalent as they ranged from 50c to $1.25 apiece. One fine young chicken was offered to the purchasing public at $1.25 and the fowl weighed exactly 5 1/4 pounds. The market was quite crowded and considerable trading was in evidence during the hour of business.

The outside market was also a small bite of industry, when the purchasing citizens took advantage of the lowness in price of the produce of the land. Plenty of apples were offered but the demand for them did not meet the expectations of the vendors as they were forced to take most of them home again. Potatoes dropped a little, selling as good as low as 50 cents a bag, although some brought as high as 60 cents.

Green onions were offered on the market for the first time this year. Bunches were all the rage and being sold for 5 cents a bunch. Fresh young hen house rhubarb was also offered and was soon disposed of at the prevailing price of 15 cents a bunch. Beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips all sold for 5 cents a peck. One large load of hay was seen on today's market but plenty of cord wood was offered at from $4.00 to $9.00 per load according to the size thereof.

COUNTY AID IS SOUGHT

City Delegation Makes Plea For Assistance in Case

A deputation of the city council composed of Alderman T. Marshall and Alderman Bennett waited upon the county council Friday afternoon in the matter on which they asked for adjustment, regarding Mr. Copeland, the man who was injured some years ago, when an explosive injured him while he was drawing gasbags from the harbour.

Alderman Bennett, who asked the question, stated to the council was granted the time by the warden and the members present. After a few congratulary remarks by the warden and the council he at once launched into a description of the man Copeland, who while it is said was injured by an official of the county of Hastings, was serving time, when there was an explosion, near or in some building in Belleville, a piece of iron from the county building, exploded, while he was in the act of putting it on the wagon.

"This man," stated Mr. Bennett, "has been suffering for four years ago. I want to go back to the time he was in the employ of Mr. Orr some years ago, Mr. Orr had the contract to haul garbage for the city of Belleville. This contract did not include the county buildings, but in some manner an arrangement made by the late Thos. Ketcheson with Copeland, to haul away ashes and stuff from the yard in the rear of the jail." Ald. Bennett said no some money was paid by Mr. Ketcheson for this man to take the stuff away and the man was working for himself, when he was doing it. After the explosion the man was almost a wreck. What it was that caused the explosion no one seemed to know but it injured Copeland quite severely. True he does get some aid from the Compensation Board— thirteen dollars a month, but it is not enough for him to keep going. Formerly his wife worked to help defray expenses, but as she is now getting along in years jobs are hard to find and she has been without work.—The man was hurt on county property, doing county work, and if your council cannot help defray the cost of keeping him, then it will be up to the city to continue on as they have been doing for some time. I have been told, that even the small amount he does get now will be taken from him—or at least some of it will have to will be worse off than ever. We have been appointed by the city to ask your honorable body for some assistance on that matter. If the whole case were known as well as we who are in this city know it then I have no hesitation in saying that none of you gentlemen would stop for a moment in reaching down in your own pocket for help for them."

Mr. Burke: "Mr. Bennett, how old is this Mr. Copeland?"

Mr. Bennett: "He is almost seventy years of age."

Warden: "Did you wish to say anything Alderman Marshall?"

Ald. Marshall: "I can only reiterate the statements made by Mr. Bennett. He has explained the case very fully, and nothing I could say would enlarge it any."

At this point there arose some discussion over the case and County Clerk W. D. Rogers was asked if he could give any particulars of the case. The clerk's papers regarding the case were then in the hands of some law firm, who had taken the matter up and were not available, but from notes he had made, the clerk gave a brief outline.

County Clerk: "I believe the Compensation Board took this matter over and have had Mr. Copeland under their care for some time, all in all the man has been paid some sixteen hundred dollars on this matter owing to the fact, that the accident occurred on county property. However, when he started to get the Compensation Board take the case over he lost all claim to further remuneration by the county. I have searched all the records for years and I cannot find any record of the man being paid by any official of the county to haul the garbage. Not long ago Mr. Copeland was taken to Toronto by the board up there and since they had a chance to go over the case again a different rate was made. Counting all expenses incidental to the case, the man has cost the county some two thousand dollars. There has been one court action brought against the county on this but it was set aside."

Mr. Clarke: "I think this man had been very well looked after. I don't know why the ratepayers of this county should take it upon themselves to meddle with the compensation board, and I move that no action be taken on it."

Mr. Marsh: "I second that motion."

On a vote of the members it was finally referred to the finance committee who will deal with it as they see fit.

EXCELSIOR LIFE INCOME HIGHER

Annual Report Reveals Strong Financial Position

The forty-second annual report of the Excelsior Life Insurance Company was presented at the annual meeting by First Vice-President James Smith Hay, in the absence abroad of President Alan Anderson, K.C. Coming as it does at the close of a year of unusual business difficulty, the report is most encouraging.

Insurance issued and revived, totalled $39,270,707.00. This is not while the total insurances in force at the close of 1931 amounted to $98,020,207.00.

The total income for the year was $12,846,310.01, of which $2,908,280.39 represents net premium income. The payments to policyholders during the year totalled $2,000,065.18 or $456,180.61 more than in 1930. Each of the two million dollars paid to policyholders, $562,287.34 was paid in death claims, $253,892.82 on account of matured endowment and investment policies, $418,628.64 as cash profits to policyholders, and $565,-345.58 paid in surrender values, annuities, etc.

The mortality experience continued to be most favorable, being considerably below the expected.

Lloyds Loses its Oldest Member

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—That famous institution of underwriters known as Lloyds, has lost its oldest member in the retirement of Mr. Arthur Holcombe, who has been a member for 61 years. Mr. Holcombe is 84 and the "Father" of the house. Sir Alan Anscombe's experience of City life naturally does not go well into days before telephones and typewriters were ever dreamed of, when telegraphing was almost as much a novelty as was the spectacle of a woman clerk in a City office. Nothing but Marble Arches was conducted by Lloyds in Sir John's early days in the city. Rather appropriately, his son of years ago was spent in the Mercantile Marine, where he rose to be a second officer. He was elected to membership of Lloyds at the age of 22, and was then the youngest member. At that time the total of Lloyds' list was not a nearly 1,000. Underwriting members today number 1,400, which is more than double the number in pre-war years.

Sir John was knighted in 1909, and held the chairmanship of Lloyds no fewer than five times.

them of his native land and with unfailing singing of such old United States folk songs as "Dixie" and "Carry Me Back To Old Virginny" and with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner after the toast to The President of the United States of American which followed after the prayer by the singing of the British National anthem. To further cement the good feelings of the occasion an International anthem was sung:

"Two nations met by the sea
Two nations great and free.
One anthem, rise
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith, one claim
We love and praise."

The banquet was opened with grace by Rev. Robert Hall and with the singing of "auld Lang Syne" by the gathering. Mayor Yeo acting as toastmaster and President of the Rotary Affiliation of the Chamber of Commerce as deputy toastmaster of the evening.

Mayor Yeo in his welcoming address said:—

Mayor's Greetings

Col. MacMillan, our friends of the County Councils of Hastings and Prince Edward and Councillors,—

"It is a great inspiration to me tonight to look out over the splendid audience before me and be proud of this audience because of what it inspires in rather than because of the number present. This large gathering is a tribute to the spirit that is best in the municipal affairs, the industrial life and the professional interests of the Bay of Quinte district. But it is also the symbol of that unity of purpose which we should always be maintained between the United States and Canada. Their interests are indeed one.

"I am glad to welcome you, tonight, the twelfth of the series of annual Get-Together Banquets, it is the whole aim of which is a wider unity and a greater friendship. It symbolizes a not merely legal unity but that nobler harmony that has come to characterize the relations between the two powerful peoples who hold this North American continent.

"In the eleven Get-Together Banquets that have preceded tonight's function, we have had, as guests of honor, premiers, cabinet ministers, presidents of universities and men prominent in the public life of the country. But never, for the first time we have been honored by the presence of a representative, here, the great family of our near kinsmen of the United States.

"As mayor of the city, I welcome Col. MacMillan most cordially. I welcome him not merely because of the great office that he holds, but for what the occupancy of that office in his brief visit with us this time will be a pleasant an experience that we will desire to come to stay with us many times again.

Congratulates Warden

"I also extend hearliest greetings to His Honor Warden Mitchell, and congratulate him upon receiving the signal honor bestowed before you, representatives of the Garden County, who have by the gift made found it possible to attend one of these functions. Their presence here is but another example of the kindly sentiments that have always existed between the citizens of them two counties.

"I must not further encroach upon your time. We are going to have a splendid evening, plenty of music and speeches that will be worthy of their brevity. Our Guest of Honor, tonight, will be the last time he desires, I hope that all present will find themselves up to the end of the last number.

"The officers of the Chamber of Commerce are joint hosts with the City Council in tonight's banquet as they have been since the idea was first put forward eleven years ago. About midway down the program you will notice that Mr. H. E. Fairfield, president of the chamber of Commerce, will take place and perform the duties of toastmaster for the balance of the evening."

The mayor paid tribute to the Ontario Hydro and to the Ontario Municipal Hydro Association, which had seen fit to honor Mr. Fairfield, chairman of the Belleville commission, with a seat on the directorate. His being one of the three seats being filled east of Toronto, the total directorate numbering fourteen.

Mr. Tummon Proposes Toast

Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P., for South Hastings proposed the toast "Our Guests" in a brief speech, saying with it the name of the United States minister to Canada. Mr. Tummon said that Belleville and was more than ordinarily pleased as he was called upon to propose the toast to one who was held in high honor in Canada. It seemed to him that it was not just by chance, that this banquet should be held in the month by those to whom the people of Canada could apply the term kinsmen. "This month," he said, "it could not be equalled for importance and calibre. Belleville, therefore, was notable that these two people should be present. It was a coincidence as it is to be wondered at that two outstanding men to settle their difficulties in an amicable way, are those who can call one another neighbors."

"I believe I can say for the people of Canada, that these difficulties and questions can still be solved between Canada and the United States in such a way that will uphold the record of these two countries. The relationship, which exist between Canada and the United States is representative of what is necessary for the peace which all the world has been striving for for the past few years to attain. We in Canada admire our neighbors, Our high ideals, their high ambitions and their enthusiasm, and we hope these pleasant relations shall be sustained in the future.

Distinguished Guest

"We are honored tonight in the presence of Col. Hanford MacNider, who was appointed in August, 1930, to the distinguished career in his own country. Member of four years he was assistant Secretary of War. He was appointed by Italy and France and other countries for his great experience in financial matters and also in a large way by Russia in their western states. I want to tell you of the high in the deservedly popular in the capital of our country. But there is one thing, that makes us wel. Some him more warmly still and that is, that his ancestors pioneered with the same stock as the most of us here tonight in this old Bay of Quinte district. Therefore I give you the toast, "Our Kinsmen to the South," and couple with it the name of Col. Hanford MacNider."

Kinsmen Reply

When the cheers subsided which greeted Col. MacNider as he rose to reply to the toast proposed "Our County Tie of Thee", the United States ambassador said: "Belleville has always been a treasure to my family, because this has always been known as the home of Sir John, my grandfather went to the Civil War, he sent his family here and his daughter spent a part of his boyhood here on a visit. Sir John Bourinot minister noted the singing of the Indian hosts. He also noted the welcoming back to gather further data on Canadian institutions. I am delighted to be present at this banquet in Belleville.

His speech proper follows—

Canada-United States Relations

"The importance of good relations and proper understanding between the United States and Canada dictates is far greater than most of us realize. It is not necessary for one little Minister is of no great importance in the case of two nations. Any mistakes he may make will be forgiven and forgotten; any endeavors on his part to strengthen the peer relationship between us will be of the greatest service to the world at run. The friendly neighborliness of our two great nations has survived two sad shocks, but after say temporary misunderstandings has emerged a clearer and more sympathetic perception of each other's domestic problems and the difficulties we experience them. The diplomatic representatives of Canada at one of the United States to you are merely symbols, but they are also the symbols of something so important to the world it behooves us to be frank and plain in speech and action—not diplomatic in the old-world sense of the world.

Early Differences

"The history of our two countries have their beginning in the difference of opinion among the early British colonists on this continent as to the best methods of obtaining their independence from an antiquated system of remote control. My nation was born with the decision not reached as you know, out of the War of the American Revolution—that a definite break with the mother country was our only salvation. Those who

101 YEARS OLD STILL WORKS

New Brunswick Farmer Recalls Early Life

WELSFORD, Queens County, N.B., Jan. 30.—William Couch, who years ago in the town of Portland, now a section of Saint John city, Patrick McGrath, a native of Londonderry of this community, and reported to be the oldest man still living in the province, has never forgotten the 12th bridge he helped erect and did brought over with them from County Wexford in the Emerald Isle.

"A fine old man you couldn't meet than Pat," was the verdict of all the folks up Welsford way. And there is a host of friends and farmers around he tells them stories of the days when he was with Kennedscais and out in Ptonia.

Pat remembers when Portland had but four houses, no shipping "ways" of note and practically no large industries. The "ways" were the point" was progressive. Where now stand Sand Point, Seaside and Fairville, although he has tried many times, had never been able to find out on what street he was born.

It was in '34, the year of the cholera outbreak, that the McGrath's moved to Welsford, and "plowing fields behind a pole of oxen, from dawn to dusk, was the job of the then young lad. Pat has been spared to affect my health, though. "Hard work never killed anyone," he says.

In '68 Pat went to California. It took months, going by water excepting a short stretch across the Isthmus of Panama, to cover the distance. He got a job in the big wood lumber woods and to this day he can tell stories of how they felled the huge trees and what great lines he had with the burly lumbermen.

Pat returned to Welsford in 1872, on what he claimed would be a short visit, but instead he got married and settled down.

Asked about transportation in the old days in the province, the grand old man said the railway was being built through Welsford when he left for the west. Wood-burning steam locomotives were. Not much speed and had to stop over so often to take on fuel—long hardwood sticks piled on the side of the track." He chuckled. "My old pals of these days wouldn't have believed trains could go as fast as they do now. They're gone now but the trains move on, and so does the world.

"Radios? Huh, guess I can't remember ever having seen one, but don't want to. The telephone's good enough for me along with the newspaper. Automobiles? Why, I cordial support.

Major R. D. Purdon, K. C., offered an expression of appreciation of Warden Mitchell and MacMillan on the particular pleasure of the occasion in welcoming the descendant of pioneers of the district. He stated that the old family Bible of Warden Mitchell's family was marked to the minister. Major Purdon also spoke of the Hastings Road and the surrounding country in its connections for the visitor. Hastings welcomed him back again.

President's Address

H. E. Fairfield, president of the Chamber of Commerce, at this stage of the chair for the duties of the remainder of the evening as deputy toastmaster. In a few words the genial president thanked the representatives of the life of this community for the splendid attendance at the festive board and was gratified to see the harmony and good co-operation that exists between the county and the city. Hastings stands all along without the other" said the speaker and "it behooves us all to stand by." Mayor Yeo replied, "The presiding officer of the City Council, Major Fairfield is efficient and most capable and he has with him splendid colleagues who might be proud of. The city council is cooperating with the Chamber of Commerce in the entertainment of the wish of the Chamber that all visitors to the city of the Bay of Quinte should be entertained while they are in the city, stating that one should get behind the Chamber and help it in securing industries. Major Purdon thanked the warden. Reeve R. M. Mitchell and Mayor Thurlow made and spoke of his friendship with the late Sir John A. Macdonald and family. "I have always found him 100% square in his dealings and I am sure that the Americans had a wise choice. The council which has been elected by the people is also capable, and there is no doubt that the affairs of the county will be handled in an efficient and capable manner."

Toast To County

Alderman Harold Armstrong proposed the toast to the County of Hastings, which was replied to by Warden Mitchell. Warden Mitchell thanked the toastmaster for the privilege of proposing the toast and was glad for the friendships, that existed between the rural and urban districts. "I am not aware of any vacant of the city of Belleville, he said, "that is not willing to give service in developing a closer relationship between the urban centres and the failures of the county were the failures of the city and the successes of the county were the successes of the city. He was particularly glad to welcome Col. MacMillan to the fellowship of the City Council to-night. I am sure, he continued, I am sure, that the representatives of the County Council would carry on to the best of their ability, and so on Hastings County, Alderman Armstrong stated it was a county of practically 2500 square miles, divided into 14 townships and incorporated towns and villages. He stated the County well blessed for communications, being adapted for mixed farming, fisheries, minerals, lumbering and forest trade. It was also the home of good roads and was an outstanding example of this fact.

"The members, who come to the County Council have not the problems of their local municipalities to solve," the speaker continued, "and their problems are ones, which effect the whole community, and they should be men, minded and thought is best for the majority. They have a broad vision in all matters and that is one reason why Hastings County has the best system of this fair Province. Reiterating that the City depends one the rural districts for much support. Alderman Armstrong asked all to drink heartily to the toast of the County Council and Buildings."

Warden Mitchell Replies

Warden Mitchell was given an enthusiastic reception, the gathering singing "He's a jolly good fellow, and a jolly good fellow". The Warden said "he would be ungrateful if he did not appreciate the splendid welcome, that had been given Col. MacMillan and his council". There have been many Get Together Banquets. "I believe, he said not because I am warden am I stating this fact, but I believe the best evening of them all. I appreciate very much the relationship that exists between the urban and rural districts and if I can be instrumental in adding to that relationship, I will only be too willing to do my part" said Warden Mitchell. The secretaries of the County Council have been agreeable so that the relationship has become "that an ex warden, who returned to the county council after an absence of twelve years states, it was the tamest he had ever seen. Warden Mitchell said that the Hastings way told of the advantages to be enjoyed in the county, stating that one had been brought out of the north land to the lands and speeded road could be scooped from the streams with a grain scoop. Mr. Riggs was accompanist.

Among those who attended the Mr. Charles Spalding of Chicago, Ill. to join with Hastings County folks in a real holiday. Before closing Warden Mitchell again thanked the bodies,—that made the evening an event Jo be remembered, and again that he and the members of the Council were for the betterment of Hastings County and the welfare of all.

Presentation to the Warden

Mr. G. T. Dolan in his inimitable style commented upon the features of the program and then made his annual presentation of a fountain pen to the warden, who accepted it with a few words of appreciation.

Mr S. V. Illsley spoke of the favored position of Belleville with the county of the south. Prince Edward County and referred to its hardy growing days, which were great days for Prince Edward County and which passed with a tariff measure "But" said he, "both have prospered because of the fine people of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties. Mr. Illsley referred to the output of canned goods, fruits and dairy products of the adjacent county to the south.

MOVIE INFLUENCES

Speaking of movie influences the New York Times this week reacts to the story from Dartmoor prison concerning the riot which was blamed upon the movies and the story of a United States prison riot. It says:

"It must behighly flattering to the movies to be blamed for so many events —even for the mutiny in Dartmoor prison. Some people have such a prejudice against them that they would lay a volcanic eruption at their door if they had just seen one on the screen. If juvenile delinquency increases or prisoners break out in riots or a woman kills her husband, it is all because the demoralizing movies have set a bad example. Gangster stories, cheap or false standards, exaggeration and sensational advertising in the movies are credited with unlimited influence. Perhaps some people have got erroneous impressions of American home life from persistent attendance at the cinema, but it seems unlikely that all the crimes and misdemeanors of the day are due to its malignant effect.

"The English are particularly hard on American-made pictures. They grant their technical superiority, their excellent photography, their well-trained players and the imaginative cleverness of their comedies, both cartoon and human, but their general feeling is expressed by an English writer in The Quarterly Review, who says: 'The outstanding performance of the cinema has been the creation of a peculiarly corrupt, exaggerated and demoralizing tradition of the seamy side of American life.' Many English critics of Hollywood products let their judgment stop there. But this writer has constructive suggestions to make, and some of them are worth consideration by Americans who see good in the present movies and an opportunity for further improvement.

"One is for the separation of children's movies from the usual picture houses. Though children beg to be taken or allowed to go to the movies, there is a great deal in the usual three-hour program which is dull and incomprehensible to them. Short programs, on which every item was designed to interest and amuse children, could hardly be arranged now with available material. But there is an almost endless supply of folk and fairy tales which might be filmed and there is no reason why the child' movies, like those for adults, could not be interspersed with other forms of entertainment. Clowns and slapstick comedians have not lost their attraction for children. Punch-and-Judy shows should not be forgotten. As the great cinema theatres have their lounges, music rooms and dance halls for grown-up patrons, the children's theatres might be equipped with a gymnasium and play yards. In developing a trial movie house of this kind one of the powerful producing organizations of Hollywood might find great advantage. The movies are always slightly on the defensive with parents. A scheme of this sort should win the support of many of them."

ART IN THE NEW ERA

Paderewski, the world's great pianist, suggests that the teaching of music ought to be part and parcel of the life of scholars in all schools as it was in the curriculum in of ancient Greece. "It should be looked on as a factor in the lives of all people, a great developing influence not as something set apart from the few who are exceptionally endowed."

A slight modification of this can be seen in modern education in almost every city of any consequence where music is offered the scholars.

While people do not go to school to learn the lessons of depressions Paderewski sees an era of extravagance to blame for the present state of affairs. "The vanity of the rich placed emphasis on a display of luxury. The poor longed to emulate this display. And merchants sought to make capital of this spirit of envy by encouraging customers to buy on the instalment plan. Thereupon people began mortgaging their whole lives. People who had fought and sacrificed for liberty had unconsciously allowed themselves to become enslaved in another way. They had become slaves to the artificial things of life,—habits, conventions and a lavish mode of living which they come to regard as indispensible to well-being." Such lurid on manufacture to overproduction and huge losses through expansion, as the standard of living became too high and life too complex.

This hit hard at music and the other arts, but he believes a solution lies in a greater stability of living with less luxury and more stability. He even foresees a possible return to the land, with the rhythm of life and the music of things gradually restored.

PUTTING IT POLITELY

"I've got a pretty distasteful job before me," remarked the genealogist. "Mrs. Newrich employed me to look up her family tree, and I've got to inform her that one of her relatives was electrocuted."

"Why worry about that?" said his friend. "Just write that the man in question occupied the chair of applied electricity at one of our public institutions'."

So, far and farther
Love's waves flow on,

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR. IS DEAD. Here was a man who built up a fortune of millions on a foundation of chewing gum and advertising. Wrigley did not discover chewing gum for there was chewng gum a-plenty when he decided to gum up the whole United States and as much of the rest of the world as possible. People did not become gum-minded by chance, or over night. Wrigley made them gum-minded through advertising. Rubber gum, pepsin, tamarack, spruce and other gums vied for favor before Wrigley led his Spearmint battalions into the front line, not into the jaws of death as in the charge of the Light Brigade but into the jaws of life and leading Wrigley won the war, and Spearmint was received with open arms and open mouths in all grades of society.

Wrigley was a soap manufacturer, but people didn't use enough soap to suit him, so he experimented with chewing gum, for people could chew gum whether they used soap or not. He invested $100,000 in the gum business and lost it, went back to the soap business, made $250,000 more and turned again to the gum business. He invested the money in advertising because he believed in advertising to the limit something which he knew people would buy.

Wrigley spent $60,000,000 in advertising, spreading his message in thirty languages around the world, but he got the money back with gigantic interest.

"Advertising," said Wrigley, "is pretty much like running a train. You've got to keep shovelling coal into the engine. Once you stop stoking the fire goes out. The train will run on its own momentum for a while but it will gradually slow down and come to a dead stop."

Wrigley turned what was considered an American bad habit into a world-wide custom.

Starting his business career stirring soap in his father's factory at $1.50 per week, Wrigley gave the soap the slip and ran away. Next he sold newspapers, which is the hallmark of many successful men. If they started selling newspapers they usually ended up as newspaper owners, great writers or baseball scorers, or somefin.

Wrigley could afford a professional baseball team while it even more disturbing to great wealth than racehorses, but Wrigley made the darn thing pay, and got a great kick out of owning a regular big league team. He it was who staged the Catalina swim, brought George Young into a blaze of glory, much money, much trouble and a whole lot of newspaper notoriety, good, bad and otherwise—and it was this Irish Rose swim which inflicted upon Canada the annual greaseball eplash at our own great Canadian National Exhibition.

INFLATION

It has long been apparent that the first stimulus to business must come through the government action. President Hoover is evidently preparing to give American industry this stimulus. He is drawing on international credit to the extent of 500 million dollars for the purpose of organizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. With this backing of national credit, the corporation will be given the power to issue more credit altogether amounting to 2,000 million dollars.

Ordinarily, the power, to make money abundant, or scarce, is left in the hands of private banking institutions. This private control of financial credit has failed so extensively, it has become necessary for the government to come to the rescue. Incidentally, the financial interests in the United States who are eager for sound and are generally the most vehement in preaching that government interference in business is an evil. The same private authorities will undoubtedly be heard from again with just as much pontifical assurance as though they were in no way responsible for the collapse that has come about under the accepted ritual of banking and finance.

There is another aspect of President Hoover's reconstruction policy to be noted. The releasing of this 2,000 million dollars of financial credit is a very considerable measure of inflation. Orthodox authorities are ever ready to oppose any experiment along new lines in the interest of the welfare of the consumers, by declaring that it would be inflation. The word is pronounced in tones of solemn warning to the public against giving heed to any but the ancient doctrines.

President Hoover's measure of inflation is little more than a hypodermic injection. It will give a temporary stimulus to production and increase the purchasing power of consumers.—Ottawa Citizen.

SHANGHAI BATTLES

The occupation of Shanghai by the Japanese, accompanied by fierce fighting, is just another reminder that a war in the Far East is not at all impossible. China's helplessness is the one factor which has hitherto prevented such an occurrence.

The immediate danger in Shanghai is an unpremeditated incident embroiling Japan with some other foreign power. With thousands of well-armed soldiers within short distance of each other—soldiers of four or five different nationalities—disastrous accidents are not impossible. It is noteworthy that the more irresponsible writers in the more irresponsible journals of Japan and the United States are talking about "the next war."

The greatest service that friendly neutrals can render the cause of peace in the Far East is to urge a settlement in Manchuria on a basis of common-sense realism. Japan has rights there: she has China—right greater on paper. But the circle of the former is without inevitable conflict. Either the Chinese or the Japanese flag will have to disappear from Manchuria before there is permanent peace. The change might follow forceful annexation. Or it might follow a treaty indemnifying China for any loss of sovereignty.

If the agreement is not made before a war, it will be made afterward. There is food for thought in that fact.—Toronto Globe.

ADMINISTRATION

Elsewhere on this page appears a letter from a village taxpayer complaining of the loose manner in which he says public business is conducted in many small municipalities. With apparently some particular town or village in mind, he declares that the local expenditures have been beyond reason, that money has been paid out for materials which were not checked up, and that as a consequence the tax-rate is exceedingly high—not as much again as it is in Toronto, for instance. Our correspondent declares that cliques in the local council run the business of the municipality for their own advantage, and he goes so far as to suggest dishonesty and graft. Our own opinion is that the trouble complained of in this particular case, and in other small municipalities, often arises from inexperience and lack of business methods.

Steps are being taken to assist municipalities in the enforcement of economy, and it is stated that Mr. Ellis, M.P.P., the Deputy Minister, is to introduce a measure in the Legislature at the forthcoming session compelling all the smaller towns and municipalities to have a periodic Government audit of their affairs. —Toronto Mail and Empire.

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was listening to her rist watch not working, and she said, I wish you wernt so averse to the movies, Willyum, I just feel like a good movie tonite. Well now Willyum, just as it happens, that remark is as appropriate as 2 peas in a pod, ma said. Last Period Rally Gives Belleville 4-2 Edge Over R. M. C. Cadets of Kingston

College Boys Have Better of Play During First Half

CLEAN GAME

Fans Like Second Line of Locals Better Than First

Playing inspired hockey after being down two goals in the middle of the game, Belleville intermediates came from behind to defeat the R. M.C. Cadets by the score of 4 to 2 last night.

To Bob Hill goes the honor of being the hero today. After the locals had scored twice, Hill's "Bob" stick-handled his way through the entire R.M.C. team to put the locals in the lead for the first time of the evening. His goal brought the fans to their feet and they yelled, cheered and applauded Bob in his effort.

The second line of Leachman, Morgan and Hull were the means of the ultimate defeat of the Cadets. They checked, passed, shot, banished and outplayed the entire R.M.C. team. Up to then the game alone gave the honour of Belleville's win as the Cadets presented a line of offense and defense. Bigelow, in the net for the locals, was the tower of strength as he stopped the perverted shots of the locals. Time he rose to heights to beat the combination of the locals.

Ice Ties Hurt

Ice Ties was again on his game when he beat the Cadets time after time when they had the ball down into the Belleville team. The defence of Belleville, Hall and their pairs say that Ice Ties little or no support on the first part of the night. When Peck sailed in all alone to beat the Cadets goalie he swung. Weir and Morris were all right on the defence but they also lacked plenty when trying to stop the oncoming Cadets.

The line of Leachman, Morgan and Hull completely outshone the line of Mitchell, Bigelow and Campbell. The fans simply cheered when the so-called second line went on the ice. The first line realized that they were going to get out in the final period to play an inspired brand of hockey. Time and Jack Leachman, the play-maker; Pete Morgan, the skater, and Bob Hull, the speed-ster were the boys of the night. These three lads simply shouted the Cadets off the ice with the exception of Joe Irvin, who displayed his usual brand of hockey final period of the game.

The game presented a clean, fast-skating hockey team, as a matter of fact the finest collection of hockey players seen in Belleville this season. Every man played like a team working to perfection and it was just the work of Tice in the nets, which saved the game from the clutches of the Cadets. Joe Irvin, although he failed to get close to press notices in the first two periods, came in for his share of praise to show the patrons that he was a hockey player of no mean ability. Carr and Rainnie also shared the honors with their mates.

But to Bigelow, in the nets for the Cadets, goes the honors of the night as he did everything but swallow the puck to beat his mates. Bigelow, Jack Mc-Kelly, Kennedy and Blanchard all played outstanding hockey. There was no fault of theirs that they did not return with more than a victory to their credit.

Second Line Favored

As for the locals the line of Leachman, Morgan and Hull were the favorites of the fans and they displayed their sentiments by many rounds of applause when the three boys appeared on the ice. They gave the fans a brand of which time bored about 1,000, the kind of hockey that better suited the offence when coupled with speed and a perfect line of back-checking. The forward line of McKeelin, Scott and Campbell did not seem to be able to combine as heretofore, and the result was that the fans did not appreciate their efforts. The defence of Weir and Morris was a little better than offered on Wednesday night but at that they were not the ones when the offence was there they were on the defence. "Bounce" Holway returned to the game and the fans received his efforts with many rounds of applause. Tice, although he misjudged the first goal, turned in his usual good game and saved the locals time after time.

The Play

The game opened with wide-open play on the part of both teams and the result was that plenty of hockey was seen in the middle of the ice. Scott had the first shot on the net, when he missed Bigelow. For a period of time both teams were checking heavily in centre ice with the result that no features were seen. Then the first combination play of the night, was when Morris, McMeekin and Scott combined to last Bigelow but were too late on the occasion to beat the trio. Both forward lines of the locals were used time and again to try and pierce the defence of Reid, Carr and Bigelow but to no avail. The Cadets started a perfect line of combination which resulted in a goal when Rainnie passed to Peck for the first goal of the night and they completely baffled the Belleville defence. Impressed with a goal the Cadets bombarded the local net at will but the good work of Tice saved the locals. Pete Morgan and Jack Leachman staged a fine rush, only to be checked by the Cadets goalie and the period ended 1 to 0 for the Cadets.

Second Period

No honors had the second period opened than Bob Scott and Gordie McMeekin sailed in on Bigelow only to pile up in front of the net as he extinguished the fire over R. M.C. goal-tender. One minute later Carling-Kelly scored on a perfect pass from Kennedy, when beside the defence making the score 2 to 0 for R.M.C. Then the locals' backs to the wall started a barrage which resulted in their first goal when Bob Hull made a perfect pass out to Pete Morgan who scored his first goal of the season, making the score 2 to 1 for R.M.C. Exactly two minutes later Jack Weir rushed to the ice and shot but Bigelow was there to capture in and grabbed the rebound to the ice for a two-all. The first two were in an uproar and the game became faster and faster as the time came knotted. Seeing that they were being outplayed the second line the first line of offense came on the ice and although they were not in the same Bigelow beat them time after time when they were inside. The third period was also fast and fiery from start to finish.

Third Period

The third and last period saw the patrons of the game on their feet from the start. The play was fast and furious. Kennedy hurdled through the locals' defence for the first time of the period, but the Cadets pressed hard the first few minutes after the face-off but the locals rose to the occasion to ward off the attack. Leachman, Morgan and Leachman, Morgan and Hull carried the play to the Cadets and they came from behind to skate their rivals into the ice. It was then that the third period Bob Hull made himself very popular with the fans as he stickhandled his way through the entire R.M.C. team to put the locals in the lead for the first time of the evening. The fans received Bob's effort with much applause as applause as it was the feature play of the evening. Pete Morgan, the last letter of the play during this stage of the game and shortly after Bob gave McMeekin a perfect pass and the latter scored on his goal when he sailed in on Bigelow and made the score 4 to 2 for Belleville. This put the game on ice and the third and the game ended after Tice beat Kennedy in close but it was just the locals defence.

Going back over the old Ontario files we find that Belleville and Picton played a classy junior hockey team in 1907. For thirty years now this series has been played between Belleville and Picton. The Belleville juniors journeyed to Petrboro and defeated the Collegiate by the score of 16 to 4. The game, according was thrown out by the O.H.A. as both teams are supposed to have played a playover age. (It's still being done.)

The players that year were; Reid, Rainbow; point, Adams; cover point, Pitzsy or Wallace; centre, Reid; wings, Galloway, and Allen; rover, Burrows and spare, Carnallan. J. L. B. "Bob" Gorman was the official referee for the Belleville team last season.

According to the old-timers there were the days of real hockey. One week after the above mentioned game the Belleville juniors journeyed to Cobourg and were defeated by the score of 9 to 4. Among the men in two rosiles were the outstanding players of the night, as Belleville's goal-tender. One minute later Carling-Kelly scored on a perfect pass from Kennedy, when beside the defence making the score 2 to 0 for R.M.C. Then the locals' backs to the wall started a barrage which resulted in their first goal when Bob Hull made a perfect pass out to Pete Morgan who scored his first goal of the season, making the score 2 to 1 for R.M.C. QUEENS WIN AT BASKETBALL

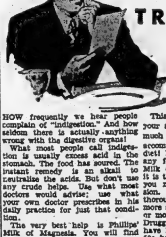
Defeat Locals on Spacious Floor of New Queen's "Gym."

Although the Tri Men have some weigt played games to their credit on the Queen's University floor, their game against the students in the Limestone City last night would not be included amongst the latter. At no time were the locals able to hit their stride and maintain the pace for any considerable period. At times they showed flashes of the better type of basketball but on the whole their exhibition was not such as to enthuse their supporters. Admittedly the big gymnasium floor at the university was a bit too spacious, although this did not account for the major part of the damage. To the credit of the locals it must be said they never had but just could not seem to get anywhere.

As a result of last night's game they have dropped to fourth place in a game, each winning at home and losing away from home consequently on a two and two basis. Red Hall is in position and by winning their home game on Wednesday evening they can tie for the top in the league.

Owing to three fixtures proceeding Belleville next week it is interesting this latter did not get started until nearly eleven o'clock causing the locals to have an extremely late homeward journey. One of the features of the game was not something in the way of a novelty. The Queen's quintet were outplayed by a team of girls from Brockville ran up an almost unprecedented score of 108-8. Our comment might well be "it wasn't cricket girls."



The feature game of the evening was between Queen's and the strong Toronto Varsity seniors. At half time the score stood 12 to 8 for the Kingston boys, but the Toronto "ringers" went to work in the second period and ran the score up to 19. In the overtime Varsity completely outplayed their rivals and won the game by the score of 26 to 21.

The lineups and points scored for the Belleville-Queen's game was:

Boys' Curling Club at Halifax, N. S.

Halifax, N. S.—The royal and ancient game of curling, long considered as "old man's game" has at last fallen a victim of youth. What is believed to be the first boys' curling club in the game's history on this continent was formed in Halifax, when, early this month, the sons of members of the Halifax Curling Club organized the Boys'

HOW frequently we hear people complain of "indigestion." And how seldom there is anything actually wrong with the digestive organs!

What usually ails us in digestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy is an alkali to neutralize the acids. But don't use any crude helps. Do what most doctors would advise: use what your own physician has found in daily practice for just that condition.

The very best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. You will find nothing else so quick in effect, so harmless, so efficient. One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Results are immediate, with no harmful after effects to follow your relief.

This pleasant way to alkalinize your system is so much better—so much quicker—than attempting to accomplish the same thing by a diet! But you cannot do this with any form of magnesia. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the formula; the one genuine product that gives you magnesia in perfect suspension. It is alkaline, its action thorough, and there is nothing more soothing to an ailing stomach than Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Druggists throughout the dominion have Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in 50c bottles.

The best way to whiten teeth is with Phillips' Dental Magnesia — the ideal dentifrice. Try it and see for yourself how white your teeth become. At drug stores everywhere.

Friends:

Men are strange creatures, as any woman will be glad to tell you. A friend of mine won a silver cup in a bowling match, the other day, and now there is just about no living with him. The man is about five feet ten, standing up or lying down, and the cup is four and a half inches across the base to the dome, but he has already laid his picture taken with it. No one has the heart to tell him, but the picture looks like he had caught a fly instead of won a cup. Oh, well, styles change in cups, the same as about the same. You can laugh at the old boy all dressed up in a silk sweater and holding what he thinks is a silver cup, but looks like a silver thimble but cups are nothing new. Our dads had them, too, and were all tired proud of 'em. But they didn't put 'em on the mantel. They were more conducive to keep down on down at the barbershop.

Every man's age and his own name on it, in gold letters, and also something youth looked forward to the time when he could have his cup there, right alongside the mayor's and her husband's and as good as any of them. There is a cup for the best golf score. The livery stable man, for instance generally had a horse on his, and the barber-shop man kept the bowl together by circumstances in one of the great railroad terminals of the country. "THE SECRET WITNESS"

A RAILROAD MYSTERY STORY

A thrilling double murder mystery that will turn you into an amateur detective during the hour of the film is showing at the Capitol Theatre. It is "The Secret Witness," which opened with a three day run Saturday.

I had pointed the guilt on three separate suspects and had built up a perfect case against each one only to discover, as the investigation proceeded, that the mystery became more and more baffling, and that the possible murderer could be any one and everyone.

When Lois Martin revealed the "secret witness" and pins down the murderer, I marvelled at the ingenuity of the authors in evolving something new in the line of mystery-story-telling that could keep you guessing and give you logical clues for doing so.

Herbert Folsom is discovered murdered in his apartment by the policeman who goes to investigate the suicide of a young girl from the terrace of a nearby penitentiary. It could not have been the girl because the policeman had listened in on a telephone conversation Folsom was having just before he hurried to the elevator to question Folsom about the dead girl. Folsom was also dead during the time it took the elevator to reach the penthouse. Folsom utters the word "Canary" before he dies.

It is this word, "Canary," that starts the investigator off on a series of all sorts of speculations and the ultimate arrest of Arthur "Canary" Jones, driver of a girl who jumped from Folsom's terrace. How Lois Martin, one of Folsom's many victims, proves the fallacy in this arrest and uncovers the real murderer makes absorbing screen fare.

Una Merkel plays Lois Martin and makes her an irresistible and clever minx. William Collier, Jr. plays the role of Arthur Carpenter Jones with his sincerity. June Clyde, Greta Grandstedt, Ann Sothern and Zasu Pitts make minor characters interesting. Thornton Freeland directed.

TOLD SHE WOULD NEVER GET RID OF SCIATICA

Set Reliarst, N.B., woman did at the cost of $1— with T-R-C's.

Here is the story of a woman who, six years ago, was terribly crippled with Sciatica—that sharp, stabbing pain from thigh to heel. She actually lay on hot water bottles for weeks, and was told her case was so bad she would never get rid of her Sciatica:—

"My landlady saw I was hopeless and told me of a man who had boarded there getting rid of his Rheumatism by using T-R-Cs (Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules). This man hadn't walked for years, but by taking a steady treatment had driven the Rheumatism right out of him.

"Well, I got a $1 box and could hardly believe the benefit I received. Why, that one $1 box drove every trace of Sciatica out of me. Once in a while since that time I get a twinge, but a few doses of T-R-Cs drive it away." Mrs. Tom Magoon.

Time and time again T-R-Cs have given safe, speedy relief from painful Sciatica, also from Acute Rheumatic suffering, Neuritis, Neuralgia and Lumbago (Lame Back). Deep-rooted, stubborn cases of Rheumatism require patient and constant use of T-R-Cs for a reasonable length of time, but you are sure of relief if you persist with T-R-Cs. No harmful or habit-forming drugs.

T-R-C's do double duty. They not only help your body throw off the injurious, causing poisons which form accumulations in your blood. When these go, health and happiness return. T-R-C's are here and $1 per box at your dealer's. 216

The Amethyst For February

BY E. DORSAY

MYTH, purple jewel—symbol of love, and fervent shrine of soldiers of the infantry; deep-set gem of long rich heritage of romance and adventure, February's birthstone takes place as February's birthstone.

The amethyst claims control of the February birth with the planet Neptune. Neptune rules the subconscious and gives intuition. Its born under its spell a keen insight into the hidden places of human nature. These qualities, coupled with the courage and confidence which the amethyst bestows make the children of February leaders of sympathetic friends.

It was during the crusades that the amethyst became a soldier's love charm. Many a knight prayed devoutly to the amethyst in the shadow of a Moslem fortress; and many a knight wore the purple gem to battle before the fair lady whose colors adorned his lance, received from her an amethyst to protect him on his journey. And in the World War, the belief in the amethyst's efficacy prevailed and hundreds smiled in whose purple fire rests a vast reserve of courage and strength.

The name "amethyst" comes directly from the ancient Greek, the "amethustos" and literally means "not drunken." According to the classical legend, the stone was created by the wine-god Bacchus, who one day roamed a jeering maiden through the forest of the gods and overtook her at the feet of Diana. Diana, touched by the nymph into a pure white crystal to protect her from his impetuous wooing. Bacchus was so touched by her beauty that he wept his own purple wine over the transformed maiden, consecrating the amethyst there formed as a perpetual charm against the fury of his own pagan delights.

This legend has been handed down as a warning against all excess. And those born in February—under the sign of the amethyst—may take it for they are traditionally susceptible to dissipation and over-indulgence.

In Christian times, the luscious beauty of the amethyst attracted to the fathers of the church; and the gem, which had been the cross of the pagan Bacchus, became the apostolic stone of Bishops. Indeed, St. Jerome, whose festival is a highlight of February, vouchsafed, in his translation of the marriage of Mary and Joseph was enamelled with an amethyst ring. Later on in the Middle Ages, many of witchcraft attributed to the amethyst magnetic rays and great healing properties—and anything they saw, in the amethyst's rich, purple splendor, was a symbol of the vital rays of modern medicine.

The fascination of the amethyst endures today—a fascination based on sheer beauty which suits any mood and great February's children are fortunate in the choice of such a gem as this.

Mrs. Andrew Vandau has plenty of wives, but he has to pay for them. He shells out anywhere from $5 to 20 pounds (from $75 to $150 for those figures) and the older the man is, the more wives he may have.

The same thing goes for cows. A Vaudau is no quicker to buy a wife than he is to purchase a good bull sire, for he has just as much regard for one as he has for the other.

Mr. Curtis teaches native children profit the ages of three to eighteen. This work is sponsored by the government.

Italy has signed a treaty with Russia agreeing to the Soviet to buy $12,000,000 of Italian products during the year.

WIVES, COWS RATED EQUAL

Vaudau People of South Rhodesia Are Peculiar

MANY YEARS' RESIDENT DIES

Mrs. St. Charles Identified With Philanthropic Enterprises

In the passing early this morning of Margaret O'Brien, widow of James St. Charles, at her home, 4 West Moira Street, Belleville lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens. The late Mrs. St. Charles was born in Ireland and spent her whole life-time here. Mr. St. Charles predeceased her some years after active participation in the business, public and religious life of the community.

Throughout her life Mrs. St. Charles was identified with the philanthropic enterprises of the city. She was one of the charter members of the Women's Christian Association when it was organized years ago by kindly women of the community for the care of the poor, the neglected and the sick. In the charitable work of the organization Mrs. St. Charles took a zealous interest, being chairman of the indigent committee for many years. From a small group Mrs. St. Charles saw the association grow into the most important organization of the city.

A devout member of St. Michael's Church, Mrs. St. Charles was an earnest worker in the women's societies of that congregation. For several terms, president of the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Church, the deed found in her a ready friend. She was president of the Altar Society and a member of the League of the Sacred Heart and of the Catholic Women's League. These various societies and associations will ever remember her aid and counsel.

YOUR CHILD AND TRUTH

It is the very wise parent who, through the child's stage of not quite knowing fact from fancy, does not allow emotion to get mixed up in the issue.

The mother who weeps and gets emotional over the child's embroidering of a truth, opens up a field of thought to him which gravely implicates matters. There should be no intimation of shame woven into your handling of this problem if you want to see it speedily ironed out.

Rather allow the child to witness and feel the effect of his straying from the truth. It is a poignant memory of my own childhood which will serve to illustrate what I mean.

A dog and pony show was scheduled to open on a vacant lot a few blocks from our house and of course my one desire was to be among those present. I consulted mother and found that we can't afford to bring this to pass. I brooded and wandered to the home of a playmate two doors away. The playmate was excited and bubbling over. She was going to be taken by her mother to the thrilling dog and pony show. I stumbled along slowly home, but a brilliant idea had leaped into my brain. When I got home I told my mother that I had been invited to go with my playmate and her mother and that I was to be dressed and ready at two o'clock sharp. The moral of the story lies in that fact that my mother has since told me that she was perfectly sure I made up this sudden invitation, but quickly figured that the best thing to do was to call my bluff. So I was dressed, inwardly quaking a bit I remembered, and delivered by mother at the playmate's door at two o'clock. And of course, it was a complete surprise to the child's mother, who, I remember, told my mother I had NOT been invited and that she would gladly take me anyway. However, I was not allowed to accept this forced invitation and spent a tearful and desolate afternoon. The hurt was not so much over missing the show as over the memory of my playmate's amazed expression, the equally astonished look from her mother, and the hint of surprise in my own mother's eyes. Scenes and effect. No emotional ranting, just a chance for a very small girl to see what came of a fabrication.

When you can, let the child feel the effect of his untruthfulness, but don't inject the idea that he has committed a shameful deed for a child or that he should grovel. Just prove that it upsets things all around, and never brings happiness. But keep emotion out of it as far as you can.

The Beauty Box

She who a few years ago was a short-kilted flapper finds about 15 inches of lingerie, knees discreetly curtained, ankles barely discernible, but she can't throw any bonbon high links because she doesn't look gamlish any more; she is behaving like a lady—a nice old fashioned word that still really means something. Her coiffure, which was plastered to her scalp like the paper on the wall, flutters in soft, silky undulations. The high lights of her complexion dimmed. Fashions in girls change along with clothes. Which goes to show that style eras are an influence on behavior.

Hands must move beautifully if they are to be admired. No tense fingers, no nervous, jerky motions. The secret of pretty gestures is the flutterie wrist. Hold fingers wide spread, turn the hand left and right keeping the wrist rigid. Bend the hands in circle, lift and lower them, as if swing bye-bye to the page. Clasp the right wrist with the left hand and work the fingers like the smiling little hammers. Good exercises, these.

The small muscles of the face are the ones that give way first. Some of them are close to the surface of the skin, and that's why gentle slapping and patting have a way of rejuvenating the complexion that has gone on a slump. Slide, cold water hardens tissues, it should be used freely several times a day when fine lines have started to appear and the skin has lost tone, gone grey.

Let every woman beware of acquiring a hard look around her mouth. Pulling the chin in toward the neck, drawing down the mouth corners are habits that are devastating to the smiling lines of youth. No massage or magic cosmetics will do the least bit of good when facial habits are bad.

When walking correctly the toes touch the floor first. A good rule to keep in mind is that anyone coming in your direction must not see the soles of your shoes. Walk with the body a little forward to keep the figure young and supple. A highly energized muscle system does not offer fat cells a convenient roosting place.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Spies on Jimmy Skunk

By Thornton W. Burgess

Contemptible it is to try
On other folks' affairs to spy.
—Mother West Wind.

"Have you been awake before this winter?" Peter Rabbit asked Jimmy Skunk.

"I have," spoke up Striped Chipmunk, before Jimmy could get his head out for a look around two or three times since I went to bed in the fall. It doesn't suit me at all. What is there anybody wants to be out for at this time of year? I spend most of my waking time asleep. Good by."

He didn't even wait for a reply. He popped into a hole and disappeared. He had gone back to his snug home down underground before the reach of Jack Frost.

"Where are you spending the winter?" Peter asked as he turned to Jimmy Skunk.

Jimmy grinned. "That is my business, not yours, Mr. Curiosity," he replied.

"Excuse me," replied Peter. "I was just wondering. Of course it is no business of mine. You seem to be as fat as ever, Jimmy."

Again Jimmy grinned. "I hope I haven't lost much," said he. "One needs to be fat to sleep in comfort. No fat, no sleep. Have you seen anything of Johnny Chuck this winter?"

"No," replied Peter, "and I don't expect to. When Johnny goes to sleep he stays asleep."

"He is wise, very wise," returned Jimmy gravely. "As for me, I like to have a look around once in a while and find out what is going on and this I cannot say that I like at this snow. Hello, here comes an old friend. Hi'll be glad to see me, I know."

Peter turned to see Reddy Fox approaching. Without so much as saying good by he dashed for an opening in the old wall and disappeared. Jimmy grinned and slowly climbed out of the opening between the stones where he had been sitting. Reddy Fox saw him. Reddy was most polite. He inquired after Jimmy's health and wished him well. In the time keeping at a respectful distance. When he had passed on Jimmy yawned and then without hurrying in the least waddled off.

When at last Peter dared venture out again neither Reddy nor Jimmy nor any one else was in sight But if Reddy and Jimmy were not to be seen their footprints were. Peter looked at Jimmy's and it suddenly popped into his head that he would like to know where Jimmy Skunk had gone. Probably he had gone back home. Jimmy grinned. It was true that it was no business of his where Jimmy had gone, but he was curious to know where Jimmy was living.

"I'll just follow his tracks and find out where he has gone," decided Peter. He knew that this was spying, but this didn't trouble him at all. He knew that it would do him no good to find out where Jimmy was, but this didn't trouble him either. The only thing that troubled him was his curiosity and the only thing he wanted just then was to satisfy it. So he began to follow Jimmy's tracks.

Along the old stone wall they led just outside the bushes, where the growing was scarcely at the end of the old stone wall Peter stopped. Those tracks led in straight under Farmer Brown's dooryard and Peter had no idea of venturing out there in search of them.

"Now what has Jimmy Skunk gone?" muttered Peter, and his curiosity was greater than ever. "I believe I will just stay over here until night and then it will be easier to follow those tracks. He can't be that, Jimmy is staying at home for the winter. I've just got to find out. Yes, sir, I've got to. I won't be happy until I do."

So Peter went back to a hiding place in the old stone wall to wait for darkness, and while he waited his curiosity grew and grew, as curiosity has a way of doing.

WATER STRUCK AT 708 FEET AT TRENTON

Find However That Water is Salty and Contains Minerals

BELLEVILLE WINS

High School Basketball Team Win Last Night

Trenton, Jan. 30 (Special) — Another party of men left Trenton on Friday via C.P.R. to work on the highway being built between Tweed and Perth. They will go to Kaladar and will work on that section of the road, blasting rock and clearing a right-of-way. Among the men who went were: Frank Hubbs, James Primeau, Andrew Simonovich, Archie Robertson, Wm. Furnis, Frank Hubbs, Simon Lonsbury, Arthur Young, Clifford Gunter, and Earl Holland.

The Jordan party, who have been drilling for water at the base of the Jordan mountain, struck it on Friday morning at 708 feet. At first the water is not fit for use as it is extremely salty and in all probability contains other mineral parts.

Operations have been suspended until one of the officials arrives from Hamilton. It is not known whether they will locate in a different spot and continue drilling for a fresh water supply.

The Belleville club held their bridge and tea on Friday afternoon at the Belleville Public library, and received the purchase of new books.

Both auction and contract bridge were played at the fourteen tables. Mrs. T. Jarrett won first prize; Mrs. Clinton Ross, second; Mrs. Avery, second prize; Mrs. C. W. Fitzpatrick won the slam spot and was awarded a prize. Mrs. J. Cole second prize.

The Belleville Club will Twice

The Belleville High School boys' recording that was invaded Trenton last night and succeeded in winning both games. They featured some very nice team work, the boys have evidently put a lot of practice into it this year.

In the senior game there was not much to choose from, both teams being very evenly matched, Belleville winning by a final score of 16 to 11.

The junior game was a good deal like the senior game in regards to close score, of 30 to 17 for Belleville. Ostrom and Cole played very nice basketball throughout, while Miss Gray and House for the Trenton team played a fine game but seemed a little rusty in passing for the basket. The line-ups were:

Senior

Belleville—Ostrom, Scott; forwards, Morgan and Maraksa; guards, Hall and Callahan.

Trenton—Dafoe, Gallagher, Orilla, Roseberry, Short, Adams and Burley.

Junior

Belleville—Centre, Taylor; forwards, Willis, K. Chambers; guards, Ostrom and Cole.

Trenton—Centre, Hutchens; forwards, Harris and Mulion.

Belleville—Centre, Cole; forwards Ostrom and Taylor; guards, Willard and Folwell; subs, Henry, Countryman, Willis, Harris, Chambers.

Trenton—Centre, House; forwards Poe and Gray; guards, Davis and Johnson; subs, Callahan, Mulion.

H.N.S. Held Meeting

The H. N. S. held a very successful minstrel show in the Parish Hall on Thursday night, playing to a packed house. A cast of fifteen entertained the audience for two hours. Mr. Chas. Allore, Harold Gallagher, R. E. Le Beau, Morris Puleau, F. DeLisle, Geo. Cobley, Mr. Esperance gave a solo accompanied by Mrs. Esperance and a snappy song and dance; Raymond Gallagher and Mr. Hutchens played on putting on such a successful minstrel show.

Lost In Overtime

Trenton, intermediate team journeyed to Peterboro last night and lost a closely fought game which was not decided until the fifth period was 3-3 for the Peterboro team. The ice was soft, making a real match impossible. The first period start-ed slowly, Dallin for Peterboro scoring after ten minutes of play. Trenton by this time seemed to have taken the puck through the Vics, shooting but unable to get by Le-Bert. In goal, Johnson seemed to get the rebound and succeeded in putting one over. The first period ended with Peterboro seeming to have the best of the play.

Second Period

Dallin scored the second goal on a pass from Ellis, Hall Miller getting a number of rushes but was unable to get a tally. The period ended with Peterboro in the lead.

Third Period.

In the first few minutes of play Frank Pilion, who had been playing hard all evening scored on a long shot tying the game up. Neither side were able to score, the game going into overtime.

Not until the last minute of the 20 minutes of overtime was there any scoring, when Hatton scored from a hard shot from right wing which got by Steenburg, Peterboro then held the Trenton team scoreless until the end of the overtime.

Peterboro—Goal, E. LeBert; defence, Ellis, Howe; centre, Jarvis; wings, Dallin, Dunbar; alternates, Creighton, Hatton, Callidine, F. LeBert.

Trenton—Goal, Steenburg; defence, Culverson, York; centre, Bonner; wings, Johnson, Pilion; subs, Bremen, Pilion, Anderson, Miller.

IN MEMORIAM

POUCHER—In loving memory of a dear brother, Frederick Poucher, who passed away Jan. 29th, 1931.

With a smile on our face, we've a heartache,
Thinking dear Oscar of you.
And our aching heart is calling,
To the shadows dark and grey,
For the dear brother who left us

Councillors, Officials Escape Salary Slash in Long Debate at Shire Hall

Spirited Discussion Upon Proposal to Cut 10 Per Cent.

VOTE UNANIMOUS

Council Ready to Pay 29 Per Cent. of Permanent Surface

With the submission of a motion by Reeve W. A. Morton to Hastings County Council, considerable discussion arose and occupied considerable time, the motion: "Moved by Mr. W. Morton and seconded by Mr. A. Reynolds that, owing to the very depressing times we are now in, we think it would be in order that all salaries be cut. The salaries of all councillors and all officials, of the county be cut 10 per cent."

Mr. Mallory: "I am not in favor of this cut. This council has never raised their salaries when the rest of us, why should they attempt to cut them now?" I believe that our business men, a couple of years ago when we are called away so often to look after the county affairs," I more no action be taken on this" Warden: "I'm not in favor of a cut, myself. It has been said, this council has never had their salaries raised, nor have the salaries of officials, and I am not in favor of it."

Leave Western Alone

Mr. Gunter: "I want it understood that a county man's pocket will not be cut. Leave them alone. Any other wages you like, but leave the county alone."

Mr. Arnott: "I think if there is any cutting done let us start right at home. County councils all along the Trunk Road have been cut. Frontward county cut councillors down to three fifty a day. I know so darn my money but there is a lot of poverty in the county and I think a cut is in order."

Mr. Brett: "This same old thing came up last year. Reeve Morton and I'm fighting it now. When we have to come right down to attend this county's business and then pay our hotel bills and a lot of other little expenses we don't have enough left of our bit of wages. We frisk the north side from here to there for nothing, and we won't come if we don't get a good wage. We understand that, little bit of money we act. up. We spend it before we leave this city. We are going to adjust these things in this county don't start cutting wages. If you start to cut every circulating you won't get good times consolidating. I came down to this county in 1864. It's the richest county in Canada and I'm proud of it. We're a shame to think of cutting wages, I'm not talking for myself, but for a lot of others that haven't a chance to talk. I fought against this cutting before and I'm going to fight just as hard now. I was commended for it last year by the municipal world. I'm not through over."

Mr. Burke: "I think that when Mr. Morton brought this thing up he wanted to set an example. Mr. Gunter says that we have to circulate money to make we get any good out of it." Other counties are all cutting down on expenses, and we should also, but we don't unless we start on ourselves."

Should Be Saved

Mr. Bronson: "If we were at Belleville there is a lot more money than we do here when we come to the city to attend these meetings We don't take any of that money home with us, or at least I have never done of anyone else except Frank Kellady. He did break it round of dining and he did not took home thirteen cents out of his pay, but he was an exception. If we're not worth the big money we are then we're pretty bad."

Mr. Brennan: "I'm a lean man from a lean township, in a lean year. I am not a advocate of economy, but also of fair, common sense. If it is the wish of a good majority to cut the rate of wages then I'll submit, but I am put to a lot of expense to come here and think a equal cut all round should be given every one. If I didn't receive my full wages I know I did get home the ratepayers would meet me at their door and say to me 'Well, Peanock, I see they don't think much of you people down there. They take away work for nothing now. I'm against that cut."

An Exception

Mr. Mallory: "I appreciate your stand, gentlemen, but you have to come down here. No one forces you to attend these meetings and whether you come or not is optional. Are we to be an exception to all the other councillors? I think the wages should be considered, and if it is found that a good thing we should put the motion across. We should make a determined effort to economize on these things."

Mr. Gunter: "I think the men who brought in this motion and the seconder, are just as good a men as any of them who come down to the North. If the men from the North don't want to come they don't have to. For seven years I have been attending these meetings and I am willing keep on doing so even if I didn't get paid for it—as long as I could help the county man. I'm going to support that original motion. I think the workmen who shovel the gravel and pile the rocks are just as good a men as we are."

Mr. Brett: "I hope Mr. Olivey didn't take me up wrong. You have a good men in your part as we have. If we were getting seven or ten dollars a day then we could afford a cut. As for the gentlemen from the North, Mr. Gunter, he says to circulate the money, and well do give the benefit later. There's one thing in cutting wages, gentlemen. Boys, I'll tell you—I'm not insinuating anything or taking exception to any remarks of Mr. Olivey, he's a good fellow and a good neighbor of mine—and he means well, but he sometimes has the wrong idea. I wish I was an orator and I'd tell you something."

Mr. Burke: "We're all here to adjust things that way. That was the idea of Mr. Morton's motion."

Not Overpaid He Says

Mr. Clarke: "I don't think we are getting overpaid. There are a thousand and one little items that come up while we're here and they must all be paid for. I don't feel like helping any cut."

The Warden: "That motion was a very broad motion, gentlemen. It takes in a lot of the councillors and officials. I am not in favor of cutting the salary of any officials They've gone through good times with us and never asked for a raise; now that times are hard I expect to be a very ungrateful more to cut any of them. Personally I cannot say you must, but I think we should have any cut from ourselves as well as the working men."

Work is Needed

Mr. Olivey: "What the men who are hard up for work is not the size of the pay cheques at all now. Our officials are not over paid. My contention is that men could be hired at a slightly lower rate and thus put more of them to work. We have not got the money and this should be spread over as much of the people as we can."

Mr. Moore: "It would be false economy to cut the wages of the men's wages just now. It's not right. The times is hard and I don't think the working man is getting any too much. No one should be cut as far as I'm concerned."

Mr. Brett: "The working man is the one that we have to excel or save a little money. How can we expect to get it if we don't pay it in the city. The working man can save in a lot of little ways."

Mr. Gunter: "I would you if you carried your lunch in a dinner bucket."

Mr. Brett: "We don't come down here with such miserable and small ideas."

Mr. Sayers: "No workman should be paid less than twenty cents an hour. The former takes a big cut when he buys. Why should we take some of that?"

Mr. Dexter: "I think the hours the men work could be cut."

Mr. Mowry: "And very many of the men who do the work on the road have a chance to board at home any more. Why not consider save very much there."

Mr. Gunter: "The reeve of Tweed remarked about the farmers taking a cut. They have to, and should do. This perhaps Mr. Nugent, our clerk, would like to say a word or two about it."

Mr. Nugent: "I think the warden has stated the whole of the thing. I want it distinctly understood that I am not interested in one in this council no matter what they may stand on this question I am not will the motion make the slightest difference to what I am going to get. I am not looking after my own self; I'm speaking for all the officials right that we should not here so I will try to offer another cut this month in accordance with the permission of the council.

"I know a man who works in the civil service, I have a brother-in-law and I've known him for a long time. He formerly got twenty five hundred a year, and that included expenses Lately he has got one cent. He got a cut of one hundred and twenty five dollars per year. That man could afford to live, and he never worried what about the man who is getting three hundred a year."

"Another point: An official, has no other business or job but he has no chance to make any more money than what he gets outside interest. His work generally keeps him pretty well occupied. You gentlemen who have other business for time a days have a business. In three days that business will not exonerate very successfully and will be practically in the same condition when "you go back to it as was when you left it. These three days away from it do more damage than the salary amounts But the man who does the clerical work does not have a vacation from any of it.

"Prices remain pretty much the same as they have been for years; food may be a little cheaper but clothing go on as they have done. My expenses, are just about as they ever were, and I give you one thing this to influence the motion of any of the councillors in the matter of the motion which was advanced. I am speaking only of myself. Some view point that is possibly have been overlooked. This is given primarily for the benefit of those officials who have not had the opportunity to address this council themselves. Whatever the decision on this that will be acceptable to me."

With this short talk from the clerk the motion was further discussed and argued an amendment to the motion that had gone before was introduced by Mr. Mallay and

Insurance Men to Attend Meeting

House Question Laid Over to June Session by Council

Long Debate Heard By County Council During Friday

SUGGESTIONS MADE

With Warden Mr. R. Mitchell in the chair and the meeting called to order earlier than has been the some time past, the members of the county council met in Shire Hall Friday afternoon for their final session and completed the work which lay before them. In the morning time While the volume of business which still remained Friday morning was quite large it was not necessary to extend the time as much as was the last day as it had been thought by some to be necessary.

As on Thursday, the report of the special committee who had given the matter of providing permission to build a dwelling on the county lot, and who were accepted to have an adoption as read, the matter coming up about some time, and again engaged the members in a great deal of discovery and argument. Finally, as the matter stood it was not thought properly it was decided to hold the matter over in the county until the next session of the council, when they will meet again.

Letter Received

This house building report which read been laid over from the meeting of Thursday afternoon was presentiated this afternoon. A letter from the law firm of Porter Hayes and Hyde, which was signed by the clerk to the members regarding the money which would be required in addition to the grant asked of the council, and the rent in reasonable terms which would be paid, as laid down in a resolution from the last session of the council was read it was claimed that the resolution was not legal, and could not be carried out.

At the completion of the reading of the letter Councillor Mr. Wollaston queried the members as to whether or not they had considered the hashed their hands of the resolution it would then be up to the council to carry out the work as intimated that while the treasurer owned the lot on which it was built, the building was the property of the house and had put his own money into it, but the lot still remained the property of the county. This agreement was in accord with a previous agreement with the county council.

Proposal to Sell Land

Mr. Gunter, of Barncroft: "After hearing the discussion and letter I intend to put forward a resolution later on, which will simplify this matter; I don't think it is necessary so far on it has been time well spent. The question to be a lot clearer now and more information has been given to the members so as I see it, we can sell him the lot, then, if for any reason we want it back we can buy it back at any time in the next five years."

Mr. Clarke: "I think it might have been a mistake on the part of the committee to allow the permission to build the house, still the house was built and that's all there is to it. I think that the matter will be understand it, Mr. Haggerty offers to give us back the land the house is on. He built the house feeling that the council would grant permission in the future, but I believe that we should take very carefully after our own end of the matter."

Question Sale

Mr. Gee, Ameliasburgh: "This whole thing looks very funny to me. I don't understand it at all. The county has owned that property for a long time and I think the county ratepayers think that the county should still own it. Who knows when we may need it for county use, might be a chance that we will want to go ahead and build some of the buildings some time; the said might be more valuable to the county at that time. I certainly am going to oppose the sale of land at the present time."

Warden: "No I don't believe Mr. Lavigo is the owner."

Mr. Arnott: "Any other resolution than the present?"

Clerk: "Resolved that this subject be laid over until the next session."

Mr. Olivey: "I will not stand by the bylaw."

Mr. Mallory: "Will this leave us liable in any way? Seems a complicated affair."

Mr. Gunter: "My impression is that the land was given to the county for but the moral liability still exists."

Mr. Burke: "I'd like to introduce a motion that this matter of the house be laid over until the June session."

Mr. Arnott: "I'll second that motion Mr. Burke."

Warden: "Any further discussion gentlemen?"

The matter when put to a vote of the meeting was unanimously adopted. The case of the county treasurer's house will be laid over until the June session when more information will be available.

Further routine work occupied the remainder of the afternoon.

Toronto Dominion Store is Held Up

Toronto, Jan. 29 (CP)—Two young men, both armed with nickel-plated revolvers, walked into the east-end branch of the Dominion Stores today, held up a clerk and stole $40.00 in cash from the register. Police state only one man was on duty in the store at the time. The bandits escaped in an old touring car.

BURNING OF WOOD URGED UPON COUNCIL

County Council Executive to Look Into Its Feasibility

GAME DATES

Question of Dogs in Hunting Also Brought to Fore

An interesting matter to Hastings County Council on Friday afternoon was a resolution brought in by Mr. J. Gunter, reeve of Bancroft, regarding the burning of wood in all county buildings: Moved by Mr. Gunter, seconded by Mr. W. C. Wood, that in view of the unemployment existing in this county, this council express its opinion that the burning of wood instead of coal would help to relieve the situation for the need of the county, and that the finance committee be requested to investigate the feasibility of burning wood as aforesaid, and report thereon to next council meeting some with power to act."

Mr. Morrell, Reeve of Marmora: "What would be the price of this wood compared with coal?"

Mr. Gunter: "It would be much cheaper than coal."

Mr. Mallory: "I'd like that motion to specify that the prisoners in Belleville jail be allowed to cut the wood."

Mr. Jordan: "Maybe the condition here in the south is not as acute as it is in the north in both but I know back there that the cord or so of wood they sell every week has been a life saver to a good many of them. Whole families have been kept from starvation on the town's occasional sale. It is a move in the right direction."

This suggestion was unanimously carried.

Game Laws

The next resolution was that of changing the game laws as applied to the hunting and shooting of deer. This was moved and seconded by Mr. J. A. I just postpone it!

"No, I don't have 'nerves.' You can't have them, as hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course were worse than others...

"Then I learned to rely on Aspirin."

The sure cure for any headache is rest. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And once you are comfortable pain seldom returns!

Keep Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So a morning's night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, a irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia or neuritis. These tablets always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. It has medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying Aspirin. Don't take a substitute because it may not act the same. Aspirin is made in Canada.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

She caught the gleam of sunshine on the last level rays of the dying day were reflected on a good, strong, sonsie face beyond the pool. Some figures moved, the cracks of some loud, angry shots echoed and re-echoed, a startled reverberation of sound. Where was the corral? Somewhere it was, it could not be far off. Then, all at once, there was a shrill, crying perhaps . . . .

She saw a circle of wards, rallied so close together that the space appeared like a wall. Straight in the circle drove her mount, realizing quickly as she did so that it was a big beast a foot higher than she was faced in sport.

She saw her horse's ears flicker. Then his stride shadows a little; then he had shot forward and his ears came up straight. Good horse! He was not going to refuse the jump! She felt him ga'ner himself for the leap, and took a firm grip on the pommel.

"Easy cop!" she cried.

While in midair she saw Don Jaime off on the right flank, standing in the bed of a wagon, firing over the fence; then she was over and inside the corral with him.

"Jimmy!" she cr'eaked.

He turned, staring at her amazed. Then he jerked the bolt of his Winchester and yelled:

"Down! Stat!"

She rode up to the wagon, slipped off, pulled th rifle from the scabbard and untied the cartridge belt from her pommel. Then with a slap on her horse's rump, she sent him trotting across the corral.

And then Don Jaime leaped down after, his powerful arms swept her backward and off balance; she slid to the ground and he threw himself beside her.

"Oh, sweetheart, why did you come?" he almost moaned.

"Because I love you, Jaime Miguel Iturbide. You are in danger and I couldn't stay away. I'll help you, Jimmy. If you have to die I want you to know before that happens—that life without you—will be desolate . . . ."

"I always knew you were a thoroughbred," he gulped finally. "Le here and do not move. This is a private fight and you haven't been invited. I've got to keep moving. I've two mules from one side of it to control to the other, flying through knee HABE . . . . . and fido la . . . . . ."

Mules and gone in toe boards . . . ! I stay still, they'll locate me, and I can't afford that now!"

He rolled away like a tumbleweed. A bullet crashed through the fence and struck . . . he had been lying a second before. And then Roberta rallied.

Thirtieth Installment

Roberta came to in Don Jaime's arms beside the water-hole.

"Well, Jimmy," she murmured presently.

"Were back in the sheep business again," he assured her solemnly.

"Yes, Jimmy. Any casualties, Jimmy?"

"Yes. Three dead horses and two wounded. Hobart's pinked, but nothing worse than what he's been treated to. Adolfo Haro, one of my riders is dead, and Ramuez, Orozco and Mariano Trujillo are badly hurt, but I do not think they will die. Pablo Ortiz has lost a thumb. Ignacio Lopez is nine of his men are dead, to date and the final returns from the river would seem to be similar unanimous. Fraser, Juan Iturbide, and Julio Ortiz are knowing them. They took our mounts and now I'll have to get busy, load our wounded on Dingie's chuck wagon and go home . . . ."

"Was that his chuck wagon in the corral?"

"Well, it used to be your Uncle Tom's, so I presume it's yours now. I made them hire it, and his chuck went into the old branding corral to camp for the night and turn it in . . . mules . . . . Then I waited to see what might turn up . . . . Some of the Mexicans came directly——rode wide around the herders, approached the corral from the rear and opened the gate and entered before either side discovered I was trapped. They could not see me clearly, but through the chinks in the corral boarding they could see something moving against the light. At that range my carbine was my mule; that anything was me, my horse, or their mules, and they did not want to be shot at, so they were careful.

It was close work, and after I'd located all the chinks in the boards I made them keep their heads down. Then when the firing started out on the flat, and they saw there was no lead in it, naturally the pistol charge on the men with the sheep. Dingie has cold feet. You rode through it quite a barrage, sweetheart, but once you'd entered the corral they decided I had reinforcements, so they ran for it. Some horses and rode south. That is, some of them did. I climbed upon the wagon seat and fanned their rear as they fled down the south side of the valley they hemmed in Ken and Jilly and Dingie emptied two saddles each. Do you know, darling, that you're a pig-shot bullet through the muscles of your back, rather well on the right side? Nothing fatal, but you'll sleep on your left side for a month!"

"I'm a fool," Roberta murmured weakly.

"Yes, but a gallant little fool." "Are you hurt, Jimmy?"

"Not a scratch."

She raised her left arm and curtsied it and . . . his neck; he lowered his face until his cheek . . . touched hers. "You're such a terrible man," she whisper ed. "Oh, such a terrible man!"

"But you love me, just the same?"

"Yes, but I wouldn't have told you I'd have died first. It's all due to Ken Hobart. He told me——"

"Hush, sweetheart. He's confessed. He told you a figer of lie, but wonderful lies on record, and when he found you'd been hit he cried like a baby. Swore that if you died he'd commit suicide. Provided I didn't die first, instead! He lifted her to a sitting position.

"There's old Cupid Hobart sitting over yonder. Look at him. He's still blubbering."

"Ken!" Roberta called weakly.

The ex-ranger sat up and limped painfully over to her, knelt and took her hand. "You've a fine daughter," she murmured, "and a grand fighter, and a grand friend——and now I'm going to decorate you, Ken Hobart——on the field of battle."

"Her boy, Ken," Don Jaime corrected, "and you can kiss her again the day we're married. That's the price of the best man, but after that, I believe you. me, partner, she's not going to give away any more samples so hard-boiled old waddies like you."

So the embarrassed watch obeyed orders, and Roberta was flushed. Hobart almost moaned.

"Pan her and mop her face with this wet bandanna," Don Jaime commanded. He searched in the chuck wagon the small field first-aid kit he suspected might be there. It was, so he returned to the girl, cut her clothing away from the wound and applied first aid in a workmanlike manner. Thereafter he attended to his wounded men and when that task was done he looked for casualties into the wagon.

"Hems, James," he called cheerily to an imaginary chauffeur, and climbed on into the seat and gathered the reins. He peered down at Roberta's face upturned to him from the wagon bed.

"You'd have to live a few lifetimes in Northwestern County, New York, before you'd get your teeth into life as deeply as you have in the past hour and a half," he assured her cheerfully. "Whoa, Dingie! Old sweetheart are you?"

"Yesss," said Roberta sweetly. "Oldest friend Don Jaime, and the wagon rolled away up the valley into a long draw that wound between the hills and eventually led them out to where the car waited. Here he transferred his wounded—Lambert, O'Grady and Martinez Trujillo on the rear seat, with Ken Hobart on the front seat. Lastly he lifted Roberta up into Hobart's arms, after which he braked the chuck wagon, unhitched the mules to the wheels.

"I wish they can stand a night of watchful waiting," he declared, and climbed in back of the wheel. He headed the car carefully down through the sage to the Los Algodones road, after which they made fast time to the ranch. Here one of the hands took the car and departed for Los Algodones to bring back the only two doctors there, while Don Jaime aided Mrs. Canby to make her patients comfortable.

About noon the next day Jaime Miguel Iturbide came into Roberta's room and sat down on her bed. She reached her hand out to him and he took it in both of his.

"Carveo and his men have just got back safely," he informed her. "Not a man of that bandit gang got back across the river, so I venture to say this has been a lesson to them. I imagine the Rancho Valle Verde will be regarded as beyond-the-Border circles as a good place to keep away from hereafter. How's the future Mrs. Iturbide feeling now?"

"Not chipper, Jimmy. How do you feel?"

"Guilty as a sheep-killing dog. Still every cloud has a silver lining. Dingie's dead and I've got a telegram from your Uncle Bill. It seems that the news of the battle got to Los Algodones

CRACK TROOPS DRIVE BACK JAP INVADERS

Japanese Statement Says Bombing Will Be Resorted to

CHINA'S THEAT

Thousands Killed in Bitter Fighting at Shanghai

Shanghai, Jan. 30—Japanese military authorities announced at 9 o'clock this morning that Chinese reinforcements had made it necessary for them to execute a partial withdrawal movement to the east toward the North Szechuen Road, which is the base of Japanese operations outside the International Settlement.

The cruiser Tatsuta and four destroyers arrived from the Sasebo naval base today, and two battalions of marines have landed.

Japanese officials indicated that the resumption of bombing was likely at any moment.

The International Settlement was caught between two great menaces today as the Sino-Japanese struggle for mastery of the native city raged on without quarter.

The Chinese military command warned that, unless foreign authorities employed their influence to halt the tide of Japanese invasion they would turn their guns on the settlement, in which the troops of foreign nations have been placed on guard over foreign interests worth millions of dollars.

At the same time it was authentically reported that the Japanese would take over the foreign area, with the consent of the British Consul-General.

Kai-Shek Arrives

The Chinese thrust of action was made more serious by reports that the crack troops of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, former President of China, who has returned to a place of power in the Nanking Government, were arriving from Nankin and taking up positions here.

The second day and night of the Japanese occupation brought a series of dramatic developments. An attempt by civilian authorities to effect an armistice failed. Japanese marines aided by air bombers continued their advance as shaped in the face of stubborn resistance by Chinese soldiers.

A United States mission in the International Settlement was invaded by the Japanese. The Shanghai wireless station was bombed out of commission. A shell fell in the Settlement by one sea was hurt.

Bombs machine guns and rifles spread death and destruction thru the native districts. Illumination and communication facilities were blotted out. Flames devoured the battling soldiers left. The casualties were heaped in the thousands.

The quarters of the Southern Methodist Mission were erased by Japanese soldiers early this morning and the furniture was demolished. They excused themselves for saying they were searching for guns and anti-Japanese literature but high officials said they would file a claim for damages through the United States Consulate.

Geneva, Jan. 30—Impressed by the extreme gravity of developments in the Far East, the League of Nations Council yesterday cleared the way for immediate organization of a neutral inquiry into the conflict at Shanghai.

Dr. W. Yen, for China, invoked Articles X and XV, of the League Covenant when the council met. Article X guarantees the political independence and territorial integrity of the signatories, and Article XV gives the Council the right to act in circumstances such as these without the vote of the interested parties.

Nicholas Politis, for Japan, challenged the Council's right to act, contending that the situation at Shanghai is entirely different from that envisaged in the Covenant.

The Chairman turned to him and asked the Secretary to make all the necessary arrangements for full investigation of the dispute between China and Japan. The Secretary said he would present his report tomorrow.

Last night it was believed the investigation proposed would take place at Geneva, by a fact finding mission composed of the diplomatic representatives of the Great Powers now in China and Japan, and the Commission would assemble at Shanghai on a few hours' notice.

WORLD CRISIS MOST ACUTE IN LONG TIME

Disarmament Conference Will Meet With World in Arms

EXPENDITURES UP

Despite Covenants, Four Billion and Half Dollars Spent

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 30.—The world disarmament conference meets here next Tuesday with a world in arms, and with the most tense international situation that has arisen in years.

Despite covenants and pacts, the world is today spending four and a half billion dollars a year on armaments.

"Maintenance of peace," runs the historical undertaking which all members of the League assumed under the covenant, "requires the reduction of national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations." And in the varying interpretation of those four limiting words "consistent with national safety" mainly lies the explanation of the world's armament expenditure.

Security, security, has run through the whole French position since Foch held that France would not be safe unless her territory fringed the Rhine. Back of what she regards as security, France is bulwarking her eastern frontier with stongholds of steel and concrete.

"The present strength of the Polish army," Poland writes to the League, "is quite inadequate to meet the needs created by Poland's geographical situation and the unfavorable distribution of her industrial centres."

"The United States, prime author of the Kellogg Pact, has since the war spent more on naval construction than any country in the world. When she has built up her navy to the strength of the London Treaty, she will have a navy second to none. She is now reported to have plans in hand to turn her 10,000-ton "treaty cruisers" into pocket battleships—change which, it is stated in naval circles here, was not contemplated when the London limitation plans were drawn up two years ago. With the exception of France—and French naval expenditure has shown a steady increase since 1914—Great Britain is the one naval power whose naval expenditure is less than it was on the eve of the Great War. "We have gone pretty nearly to the limit of the example." Prime Minister MacDonald told the British House, a trifle wearily, as he went over expenditure after expenditure.

Prem. MacDonald Makes Statement About Shanghai

Thornley, Durham, Eng., Jan. 28 —Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told a gathering of his constituents here tonight that the "state of things at Shanghai is deplorable."

"Apart from the moral aspect of the matter," Mr. MacDonald continued, "there is nothing I could say to blame. I take no side, but the existence is a very disappointing one."

KILLER OF SIX ESCAPES NET SET BY POLICE

Father, Mother and Four Children Mortally Wounded

VILLAGE IN FEAR

Elma, Man., Jan. 30—Wholesale murder laid the pleasing hand of fear on this community of small farmers Friday. Blashing with an axe or a knife, and possibly using a shotgun in the farmhouse of Martin Stasz early yesterday, a fiendish slayer left Stasz, his wife and four of their children either dead or with fatal wounds.

Of the family of seven, only one, 4 year old Paul, is alive today. Supposedly in an attempt to destroy the bodies of his victims, the slayer set the house on fire, and it was the smoke which attracted the attention of neighbors and led to the discovery of the crime.

Law enforcement forces of the Province of Manitoba were quickly mobilized in a search of the killer. On receipt of word of the slaying Hon. W. J. Major, Attorney General, at once acquired a special train, which rushed a posse of Provincial Police from Winnipeg. Last night the officers are scouring the district undeterred by the bitter cold weather.

Tom Hrechkoske, farm laborer who worked for the Stasz is missing and is the immediate object of the police search.

Wounds on the body of the father indicated the slayer might have started his bloody task by using a shotgun at close range. Searching through the ashes of the house yesterday afternoon, police found the burned remnants of a shotgun and two rifles. Wounds on the other victims are believed to have been inflicted either with an axe or a large knife.

Axe-Blows to Bear Fatal Which Emerges from Cave

PETERBORO Jan. 30. —Tales of narrow escapes from maulings by black bears which have trickled in from outlying sections of the county recently, were confirmed yesterday by the story of John A. Crowe told Joseph Brethour of Dummer Township.

Attacked by a large bear near the Ninth Line of Dummer, Brethour felled the clawing animal with a blow from his axe. Brethour and Crowe were picking their way through a wood on a survey. Beneath a tree they came upon the opening of a cave. They were investigating the hole, which a bear's head suddenly appeared in the opening over which they were bending. The bear rushed out. As the lumber jack axeman came swiftly at him, Brethour raised his axe and struck with self-defense. Today Brethour and Crowe bore the animal into town, and it was found to weigh 247 pounds.
